Bid for Labor Vote

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 23.—Wendell L. Willkie, in his first major speech to American labor, said tonight that the No. 1 problem of 1940 was "jobs" and he charged that the New Deal in this respect "has let labor down."

The Republican nominee for President, who has yet to pick a soft spot in this Western wing, chose for this speech one of the most thoroughly organized cities in the country, a Roosevelt stronghold dominated by Dave Beck, the so-called "labor czar" of the Northwest.

Willkie was told that he couldn't carry the State of Washington with the aid of the militia. That didn't deter him. To this speech, his aides said, he gave more thought and time than to any he has yet delivered or is likely to deliver.

Two Kinds of Employers

Willkie told the crowd in the Rainier Baseball Park that there were two kinds of employers, and only two: Private employers, as in this country, and the state, as in Russia and Germany.

"We in America," he said, "have made up our decision with regard to this issue. We want to work for and with private employers, and not for the state.

"Now what makes jobs?

"Business makes jobs—little business, big business, corporations, partnerships, and small companies. Under our system, if we are going to have jobs we must have employers.

"Nowadays, it is about as hard to start a new business as it is to rob a bank—and the risks of going to jail are about as great in both cases."

Willkie told labor that he was 100 per cent determined to keep the minimum safeguards that labor has won and to add to them if possible. But, he said, these were not enough.

"The only thing that can really protect you," he said, "the only thing than can basically safeguard your rights and opportunities, is new employment—more jobs—more work—more growth—more expansion."

Gives Views on Power

He said he understood labor's problems, having been both a worker with his hands and an employer.

"Believe me" he said, "if I am elected President of the United States I shall protect your side of the industrial team. But this thought I want to leave with you tonight:

Willkie said he was undertaking his Presidential campaign because "I want every man and woman in this country to find a job if he or she wants one.

"I want that just as much as you do because I have given my pledge to labor that I know what makes jobs, and I will get them for you."

Earlier today, in Portland, Oreg., Willkie, dubbed by New Deal ora-

London Sees Definite Signs Of Weakening in German Attacks

By James M. Minifie

London (Tuesday), Sept. 24. Definite signs of weakening in the German onslaught on these islands was seen yesterday as the Nazi pilots, for the third day running, failed to get more than scattered planes through the R. A. F. defenses to bomb the heart of the empire.

When they returned early last evening the Nazi airmen were held in comparative subjection by the anti-aircraft barrage in the opening hours of the seventeenth consecutive night assault.

They speeded up the relays of bombers, however, in the after midnight, and for more than an hour and half, up to 2:30 a. m., gave central London its severest bombardment in two weeks, before veering off to suburban objectives.

Repeatedly, the German airmen, after forcing a lane through the barrage, were beaten back, but almost immediately another would roar in.

Tactics Switched Again

One reason for the apparent easing up in the Nazis' week-end attack is that in view of the tremendous losses recently inflicted on the mass German formations by day, the Nazis have once more switched to large formations which split up into small flights when they meet the first opposition at the coast.

Each flight is then on its own. These small units are difficult to find in the autumn haze which now envelops the east coast. Nevertheless few of them succeed in reaching London. These which do, drop their bombs in hit-and-run fashion and hurry off again.

An equally significant change has taken place in the Nazis' night tactics.

Later Relays Drop Bombs

The early comers devote themselves purely to starting fires. Incendiary bombs may be small two-pounders, the "Molotoff breadbasket," which shower a large number of incendiary bomblets over the neighborhood—or the oil bombs, containers holding about two gallons of crude oil, fired by a small explosive charge.

Bombs of these incendiary and light-giving types are now being dropped by the first relays of bomb-

Stocks Surge As Business Outlook Brightens

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Stocks, bonds and commodities moved forward in one of the best rises in nearly two months today as traders showed less apprehension over war developments and concentrated upon the brighter domestic business picture.

Stock exchange prices were marked up a few cents to $3 or more a share, with some preferred issues as much as $6, in the busiest session since September 5, with volume at 982,250 shares.

Mattson Boy's Brother to Face Kidnaper

FBI Seeks to Link De Tristan Abductor With Tacoma Killer

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 23.—A lad who saw his young brother kidnaped in Tacoma four years ago by a man who later killed the child, flew to San Francisco today to see if Wilhelm Jakob Muhlenbroich, held in the De Tristan abduction, resembled that man.

William Mattson was accompanied by a Federal agent on the plane trip to this city. He was 16 that day in Christmas week, 1936, when a swarthy foreigner with hump nose slipped into the house, snatched 10-year-old Charles Mattson and left a ransom note demanding $28,000.

Kidnaper Grilled

The family never saw Charles alive again. Fifteen days later his nude, beaten body was found in a snowbank. The ransom was not paid because the family could not contact the abductor.

Muhlenbroich was captured yesterday in the wild hills of Eldorado County as he fled with 3-year-old Marc de Tristan, jr., only son of Count and Countess de Tristan of fashionable Hillsborough. The $100,000 the kidnaper demanded had not been paid, although the family had offered it, and the little boy was returned unharmed to the home of his parents.

Inquiry to Continue

Today Muhlenbroich, held in an unrevealed place, was questioned by kidnap experts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. What they discovered remained undisclosed. But it was learned that they were most interested in some apparent resemblances between the man held here and the sketchy description of the kidnaper in the brutal Mattson case, one of the few unsolved kidnapings on the books of the FBI.

Monumental Buildings Ruled Out

House Votes $20,000,000 For Construction in District

The House yesterday approved a $267,733,728 supplemental civil functions supply bill, which provides $20,000,000 for construction here, including three office buildings. At the same time, the bill placed a definite curb on monumental Federal buildings.

The bill, still to face Senate action, would at least temporarily limit construction of the monumental Federal buildings characteristic of the Capital's past decade.

Instead, with a view to speeding construction as part of the national defense program, decreasing building costs and avoiding extreme traffic congestion, the bill provides for space utility rather than beauty of design.

Thus, although $8,850,000 is authorized for a new six-story General Accounting Office, two other office structures are limited to three stories and outlays of $3,200,000 each.

The new G. A. O. building will be located on a tract at Fourth, Fifth, G and H streets northwest, and will house G. A. O. offices now scattered among 13 buildings through the city at a yearly rental and maintenance cost of $350,000.

The appropriations committee, which reported out the bill shortly before it was passed, pointed out that originally, it was planned to remodel the Pension Office Building

Tokyo Shows Serious Concern Over Probable Reaction by U. S.

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The United States yesterday accused the Tokyo government of upsetting the status quo in French Indo-China.

Secretary Hull denounced the forcible Japanese penetration of Indo-China in a formal statement saying:

"Events are transpiring so rapidly in the Indo-China situation that it is impossible to get a clear picture of the minute-to-minute developments. It seems obvious, however, that the status quo is being upset and that this is being achieved under duress.

"The position of the United States in disapproval and deprecation of such procedures has repeatedly been stated."

Later, the State Department emphasized its position by issuing a categorical denial of a statement made by the French foreign minister, Paul Baudoin, that this country had approved the French concessions made to Japan in Indo-China.

"This Government has not at any time or in any way approved the French concessions to Japan," the department said. "The attitude of this Government toward developments in Indo-China is as expressed by the Secretary of State this morning and in previous public statements."

Effect on Relations Uncertain

Almost simultaneously there came word that the two cruisers of the Asiatic Fleet, the Augusta and the Marblehead, and the yacht, Isabel, had left Tsingtao, China, presumably moving northward. A report spread here that a portion of the United States Asiatic fleet was being sent to the British base at Singapore, but a high Navy source last night declared the report untrue. It was pointed out that units of that fleet customarily proceed to Manila at about this time of year.

At his press conference, Secretary Hull said he had no prior knowledge of another report that the Augusta would soon go to Singapore for overhaul, but expressed the view that such a visit would involve no neutrality question and would require no British-American agreement further than one customary between local officials when merchant or other vessels require repairs.

The atmosphere of serious uncertainty prevailing with regard to

2 Dead, 11 Hurt In Explosion In Army Arsenal

Dover, N. J., Sept. 23 (AP).—An explosion killed 2 workers and injured 11 at the Army's Picatinny Arsenal near Dover today and, while Army officers discounted the possibility of sabotage, J. Edgar Hoover prepared to fly to New Jersey for an investigation.

Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was in Boston for the American Legion convention. His field office at Newark had the usual "no comment," but FBI agents were reported already at the arsenal. A military board also started an inquiry.

The explosion was the third fatal one at New Jersey munitions plants in little more than a month. It brought the combined death toll to 56.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 23.—President Roosevelt put America's first peacetime draft into effect today, prescribing minutely detailed rules to guide an army of civilians in handling the conscription of men for the Nation's expanding armed forces.

The Chief Executive called on the 48 State Governors for their "every help."

In identical letters he wrote them:

"The procurement and training of our manpower under proper administration, fairly and without fear or favor, is undoubtedly the most important single factor in our entire program of national defense."

He asked them to set up the selective service system in their States and to submit to him immediately the names of those they wish as State draft directors and members of local classification and selection boards.

Burglars Trapped As Officer Gets Stuck in Exit

Painstaking burglars used an ice pick, a hammer and a crowbar early yesterday to burrow a man-sized hole through 6 inches of brick wall at the rear of Bernstein's Liquor Store, 100 Florida avenue northwest.

Called to the scene by a passerby, police arrived just in time to trap two of the intruders inside the store after one of the officers had blocked their only exit by getting himself stuck in the wall opening.

Two accomplices who had been posted in the alley to receive the loot through the hole, escaped with an estimated $100 worth of liquor and cigarettes, police said.

Stuck in the hole was Private Charles Burns, who had to be pushed through the opening by his colleague from No. 2 Precinct, Private J. D. Rice. Finally through, Burns encountered two 19-year-old colored youths piling up more loot to be passed through the hole to their accomplices, who apparently fled without stopping to give warning.

Two Attacks Reported in 24 Hours; Invaders Bomb Airport

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 23.—Japanese troops in full war kit, seeking to carry out a "peaceful" agreement advancing their domination in South Asia, fought two battles with French forces last night and again today.

The second attack was at mid-afternoon on positions of French Legionnaires and colonial infantrymen near Langson, 12 miles inside the Indo-China northern frontier, after Japanese planes twice had bombed the airfield there.

Outcome of the fighting was not known here late tonight, but one person was killed and two wounded in the bombing.

Two Japanese Planes Downed

[A French broadcast from Saigon, picked up in Shanghai, reported fighting still was in progress at 10 a. m. Tuesday (10 p. m. E. S. T. Monday). It asserted two Japanese planes had been shot down.

[Domei, Japanese news agency, reported 131 Indo-Chinese had been killed in fighting at an undisclosed point and that the Japanese captured 240 prisoners, including several French officers, and a quantity of arms and ammunition.]

The native population in Hanoi took to air raid shelters when Japanese planes crossed the frontier and caused alarms. French pursuit planes patrolled the capital.

The French were reported to have 60 casualties in fighting last night at Dongdang, 90 miles north of Hanoi, when the Japanese attacked a border blockhouse. Langson is about 80 miles north of Hanoi, in the same general sector.

Japanese Attack Anew

Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of a Japanese mission which negotiated an agreement Sunday for a limited Japanese occupation of north Indo-China, sent emissaries to Dongdang and succeeded in getting the fighting stopped.

In midafternoon the Japanese again attacked, however.

French officials classed as mistaken a Tokyo report that the French defenders fired first because they were not informed of the agreement.

They said the agreement did not provide for Japanese troops of the South China army to enter Indo-China. They said the entry of these troops was subject to a subsidiary agreement yet to be reached.

By moving into Indo-China, the Japanese were threatening the last citadel of resistance of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in southwestern China.

French Surrender Claimed

(Naval quarters in Tokyo declared the occupation was a long move toward ending the China war and establishing Japan's "new order" in eastern Asia. "Competent quarters" asserted Japan's armed forces were fully prepared to deal with any "uncalled for intervention" by "third powers"—the United States or Great Britain.

"About a month ago the Ribbentrop Bureau (German foreign minister) completed plans for the reorganization of Europe. They may be summarized as follows:

"The plans, which the Germans admit depend for fulfillment on the defeat of Great Britain, provide for the annihilation of Switzerland, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland and the Baltic states. Rumania and Yugoslavia will also disappear. Belgium and France are to be partitioned.

"Hungary and Bulgaria are to be ostensibly enriched by neighboring territory, but in reality are themselves to be completely encircled by the Axis powers, whose swollen frontiers are to stretch, in the case of Germany, from the North Sea and the Baltic to the Black Sea, and in the case of Italy, from the Gulf of the Lion (French south coast) to Corfu (Greek island) by

De Gaulle Leads English, French Units Shelling Port in Africa

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 23.—British-French cleavage burst into bitter warfare tonight as the big guns of a powerful British naval squadron inflicted untold casualties on the French West African capital of Dakar preparatory to landing an expeditionary force of British soldiers and Anglo-Frenchmen.

The warships shelled the port for eight hours, but heavy fog late tonight prevented a landing for the present. The French freely predicted such a thrust, however, and saw it as strengthening their plea to the German armistice commission not to disarm the African colonies.

The Franco-British forces were led by Charles de Gaulle, French general who heads a movement continuing the war against Germany and who, to the Vichy government, is a traitor whose death warrant already has been signed.

French government advices said the British squadron consisted of two large battleships, four cruisers, "several" destroyers and four transports packed with troops ready to try to subdue all West Africa.

The bombardment began at 2:15 p. m. and continued past 10 p. m. (5 p. m., E. S. T.).

Trapped in the harbor—the only one in West Africa which can receive large ships — were three French cruisers and three desroyers —which had a brush with the British at sea Sunday.

Not a Cause for War

The Dakar radio station was hit, but continued operating.

French Foreign Minister Paul Baudouin, who announced the battle, said France would not declare war on her former ally, but that she would "reply to force with force."

This decision was reached at a cabinet meeting attended by Premier Marshal Petain, War Minister Gen. Charles Huntziger, Navy Minister Admiral Jean Darlan, Foreign Minister Baudouin and Colonial Secretary Admiral Rene Platon.

The situation is much graver than the July 3 battle of Oran, in which much of the French fleet was crushed by Britain, he said, and "wounded as she may be, France still is capable of defending herself and replying blow for blow."

Baudouin specified, however, that the British action was not a casus belli (cause for war).

[The German radio, in a broadcast heard in New York, predicted that reprisals would be taken against Englishmen still in France, and quoted French quarters as noting that about 500 French warplanes are in Algeria and Morocco and could "bombard Gibraltar for weeks."

De Gaulle Commands Shelling

[The British ministry of information, attributing the Dakar action to Gen. De Gaulle, with full British support, said the Germans were "making persistent efforts to bring Dakar under their control."]

De Gaulle personally commanded the shelling of Dakar, the Vichy government charged, after Gov. Gen. Pierre Boisson of French West Africa refused De Gaulle's demand to surrender the colony.

"This is not a question simply of ships which might be taken by the Germans or Italians," said Foreign Minister Baudouin, "but British desire for French property."

[The British said "a considerable element" of the West African population "opposed the Vichy government's policy of subservience to

Business Supersedes Politics

'Chip' Robert Quits Party Post To Serve His Company Better

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 23.—Democratic National Headquarters announced today the resignation of L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., as secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

Robert said in a letter to National Chairman Edward J. Flynn that "at a time like the present I cannot serve the best interests of my company and also the best interests of my party connections simultaneously, and there cannot and must not be a conflict between the two."

Robert's firm, Robert & Co., of Atlanta, Ga., architects and engineers, has received numerous Government contracts.

A report filed by Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, on August 28 showed that Robert & Co. had received $26,859,081 in naval contracts carrying $931,560 in fees.

Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, demanded in the Senate on August 30 that President Roosevelt call for Robert's resignation. At a press conference the next day, when the Robert case was mentioned, the President said he had noticed a great deal of smoke and added that if there was any proper fire behind it, he hoped Congress would go right after it.

Robert replied to Bridges that he would welcome an investigation, adding that he hoped it would be

British Preparing To Storm Dakar

Berlin and had declared in favor of a Free France," so Gen. de Gaulle went to Dakar with a Free French force to assist his supporters.

Summons Followers

["He arrived off Dakar this morning and has summoned his followers to rally to the flag of Free France," said a British communique, "resistance seems to have been encountered, but the situation is not as yet fully clear.

["Gen. de Gaulle's French force is accompanied by a British force which will lend him full support."]

The French announcement made no mention of French forces under de Gaulle, but bitterly denounced him as a traitor.

On September 2, de Gaulle claimed that all of West Africa favored his cause, but this was denied by the Vichy government and in a statement by Gov. Gen. Boisson.

All Africa Boiling

Yesterday, however, a Vichy government spokesman acknowledged that all Africa was "boiling," and that De Gaulle "propaganda" was intense in Morocco, Dahomey and Togoland.

It also was acknowledged yesterday that the British had turned back the six French warships bound from Dakar with products for France, and that one of the ships had been damaged in an unexplained manner.

The British let these ships pass Gibraltar from Touloun last week (and tonight mentioned them as an indication that Germany wanted Dakar, else they never would have been allowed to leave the Mediterranean port of Toulon.)

Dakar itself is no mean prize. Best port on the West African coast, it is at Cape Verdue, most westerly point of Africa, and commands the sea route from Europe to Brazil.

A city of 34,000, with 3,000 whites, it is linked to interior African points by rail and to France by cable.

Dakar already has figured in the growing friction between France and Britain. Last July 8, after the armistice had ended French resistance to Germany, and after the battle of Oran, British air and naval forces raided Dakar Harbor to assault the new French battleship Richelieu.

[The British announced the Richelieu was put out of action by aerial torpedoes and by depth bombs dropped from a motor boat.]

Col. Luther James Dies in Hospital

Col. Luther R. James, United States Army, retired, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was 61.

A native of South Carolina, Col. James was commissioned a first lieutenant after three years of enlisted service, and was promoted to colonel in 1934. He retired three years later. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Sarah B. James, of Gloucester, Mass. Graveside services will be held at Arlington Cemetery at 10 a. m. today.

ers which get through in the evening in order to form markers for later relays, which can swoop on to the markers, drop their bombs quickly and hurry home.

A further modification of German tactics is that the earlier large formations of bombers escorted by a few fighters now have been transformed to a few bombers escorted by a large number of fighters.

The attack on England has been marked, first of all, by a general bombing onslaught on the chief manufacturing centers of London. This was later modified to an attack solely on London. The effort on London has now markedly diminished.

In the meantime the attacks on the other and chief centers of British production have wasted away. While the Nazis have been flinging their strength against the capital, the rest of the country, where industrial production is concentrated, has escaped with little attention.

Hottest Fire Yet

London (Tuesday), Sept. 24.—Defenders of London, spurred by words of encouragement and optimism from King George, gave German raiders a hotter than usual overnight reception as the city rocked with the explosions of anti-aircraft shells and Nazi bombs.

Early today a German bomber dropped what appeared to be a "Molotoff breadbasket" over a northern suburb, but firemen quickly extinguished fires started by bombs which spewed out from it like a bursting skyrocket.

There was a short lull in the early morning, then, as usual, came the pre-dawn spurt concentrated on central London. A dozen big explosives and incendiary bombs fell in the midcity.

Southeast Towns Hit

Some raiders, apparently unwilling to try London's antiaircraft barrage, dropped their deadly burdens on towns in southeast England.

In a business district in northwest London, two banks, a postoffice and an apartment building were damaged.

Ground batteries spewed up a hurricane of exploding steel that seemed to outdo anything heard heretofore and searchlights sought small groups of Nazi raiders that sounded like heavy German bombers. The burst of distant bombs was heard above the incessant clatter of steel fragments raining down on central London rooftops.

Both explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped freely.

Another Sleepless Night

Two bombs were dropped in southwest London by a lone raider. Other raiders were reported over Wales, Northwest and Southeast England.

To Londoners, who trooped into air raid shelters like actors playing a grimly well-rehearsed part, it was another night of discomfort and little or no sleep.

Subway stations were so crowded with those seeking shelter that it seemed all London was trying to get into them. Sleeping room particularly was scarce in stations along Piccadilly.

3 Day Raids Repelled

Soon after sunset warning sirens heralded the approach of the raiders following three thwarted daylight attacks on the capital and a series of savage counter-assaults by the R. A. F. on German invasion ports and inland industrial establishments.

The last previous alarm sounded at twilight when German planes roared over the heart of the city only to be scattered by British fighters. Bombs fell in western London during the second attack of the day, just after noon. The Nazis, crossing the coast from three directions, failed to reach the city in their first foray soon after dawn.

An official announcement said British and German airmen finished off the daylight battles all even, each losing 11 planes, although the pilots of seven British craft were reported safe.

King George, speaking into a microphone in an underground shelter at bomb-scarred Buckingham Palace during an air raid alarm, told his people:

"As we brace ourselves for the battle, there is much to encourage us . . . Men and materials are coming in increasing flow and there is an eagerness to share in the sacrifices which will bring us victory.

"We have behind us the good will of all who love freedom. Our friends in the Americas have shown us this in many ways, not the least by their gifts for the relief of suffering in this war."

British Strafe Berlin 4 Hours, Dropping Bombs in Midcity

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), Sept. 24.—Low-flying British planes subjected Berlin to its longest air raid lasting almost four hours early today, dropping bombs in mid-town despite the heaviest antiaircraft barrage here yet.

A number of civilians were reported killed and apartment houses were reported damaged both in the city and its suburbs.

One fire glowed in the sky toward Moabit in northwestern Berlin which is a region of factories and workers' homes.

Authorities did not estimate the number of raiders, but insisted few succeeded in penetrating the city's outer defenses.

Millions huddled in shelters underground heard the savage defense batteries pounding and the hum of motors above.

Tracer bullets streaked into the sky amid bursting shrapnel but apparently none of the attacking planes was brought down as they flew incessantly over the city.

Searchlights were used sparingly in the defense.

The alarm lasted 3 hours and 47 minutes.

At least three bombs were heard. The heaviest and longest antiaircraft cannonading of the war marked the raid.

All calibers of guns kept up a concentrated fire. For many minutes the long roar of the guns was audible in the air-raid shelters throughout the city.

Berlin had a 2-hour and 22-minute alarm yesterday.

[An air alarm was sounded in the important Baltic port of Stettin, 90 miles north and slightly east of Berlin, at midnight, the United Press said. Details were not available in Berlin.]

Invasion Ports Bombed

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 23.—Royal Air Force bombers strung a chain of fires along the German-occupied coastal ports, from Le Havre to Flushing, this morning and last night in their unremitting drive to prevent enemy forces from landing on British soil.

The R. A. F. was busy at it again tonight, according to persons living on the Kent Coast. Sheets of flame lighted the sky at sporadic intervals between Dunkerque and Boulogne as British bombs thundered the other side of the Channel.

[At 2 a. m. Tuesday (8 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.) the British bombers were still shuttling back and forth in seemingly never-ending procession, International News Service said. The attack was still increasing in tempo.]

British pilots Sunday night also penetrated deep into Germany and attacked the big aluminum factory at Lauta about 100 miles southeast of Berlin, the railroad junction at Torgau, and freight yards near Dresden, the air ministry announced.

The destruction done to harbors, shipping and military supplies during the night served to offset the favorable invasion weather that prevailed this evening over the Straits of Dover. The weather over the straits was fine with a cloudless sky, a calm sea, and a gentle westerly wind. At sunset a slight mist obscured the French coast which had been clearly visible during the day.

Coastal points raided Sunday night included Antwerp, Dunkerque, Ostend, Zeebrugge, Calais, Harfleur, and Brest, as well as Le Havre, and Flushing, according to the official communique. All the raiders, who delivered their attacks singly but in rapid succession, returned home safely, it was announced.

R. A. F. observers reported today that the Germans have strengthened their defenses at the Channel ports as a result of the unceasing British bombing and reconnaissance flights. Each night they saw more light and heavy guns in action than they have seen thus far. Shells from some of the German coastal guns folowed the raiders 2 miles out at sea.

London, (Tuesday), Sept. 24 (U.P.). The German radio last night warned Britons that "we are coming" with massed forces of invasion.

The Berin radio announcer heard in Lndon referred to British speculation that Hitler has passed up his best chance for launching an invasion, and said:

"'We can only repeats this, Britons—don't get restive—we are coming!"

Hull Denounces Indo-China Drive

Japanese-United States relations as a result of the Indo-China activities was emphasized by the understanding that President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull will discuss the developments today upon the President's return from Hyde Park, N. Y.

It was manifested, as well, in dispatches from Tokyo saying that reaction of the United States toward Japan's newest venture was crowding out nearly all other considerations in Japanese speculation.

Here in Washington most speculation on possible action by this country centered about tightening of controls over exports of materials badly needed by Japan in her warfare against China.

At his conference, Secretary Hull refused to answer a question by one newsman as to whether the United States is considering a complete gasoline embargo on Japan in conjunction with the British government.

Another correspondent raised the question of the licensing, by the Department's export licensing division, of shipments of $1,084,000 worth of aircraft to Thailand (Siam), a claimant to part of Indo China. Hull replied he would make inquiry as to what portion of the order remained unshipped. It was unofficially stated later that approximately $387,000 of the purchase still is in the United States.

French Battle Japanese Troops Invading Indo-China

JAPAN AT CHINA'S BACK DOOR—Japanese government announced yesterday that its army and navy units had entered French-Indo China to attack "back door supply routes to China. Troops entered at Haiphong (1) and subsequent clashes occurred at Dongdang (2). There were reports that Thailand (Siam) was massing troops at border points (shaded arrows) to help the Japanese. Meantime, the Japanese foreign office demanded the release of six nationals detained at Singapore (3) losses and charged the French used poison gas.

(Japanese communiques said the French forces surrendered and that the occupation was proceeding without further trouble.)

The agreement, signed here at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, provides for the establishment of three Japanese air bases in Tonking (north Indo-China) and their garrisoning by 6,000 troops, plus a "limited" garrison at the chief port of Haiphong.

(A British broadcast said Thailand (Siam), whose demands for "return" of some border territories by Indo-China, had been rejected, had abrogated her nonaggression pact with the colony.)

German Pressure Denied

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Sept. 23.—Anticipating possible charges that the Franco-Japanese accord in Indo-China was reached under the stress of German pressure, Foreign Minister Baudoin tonight denied there had been any intervention at all.

"It is an agreement that was reached after long negotiations," Baudoin said, "and it depends entirely on the good faith of both governments for its execution. France must trust the Japanese that they will send only a few thousands of soldiers into Indo-China and will withdraw at the time agreed. Japan must trust the French not to attack the small force permitted on her territory. It is a gentleman's agreement."

The three main provisions of the accord, he said, are that Japanese planes will be allowed to operate from three different airdromes in Indo-China; that no city in Indo-China shall be occupied, and that only forces small enough not to give the impression of occupation should be admitted and these to consist mainly of troops sent to guard the air bases.

U. S. Kept Informed, He Says

Baudoin was careful to stress that all interested powers, particularly the United States, have been kept fully informed of negotiations. He said France had refused an ultimatum, but had finally accepted the Tokyo accord as the "only means" of saving what could be saved for France in Indo-China.

The foreign minister said an economic accord to follow would give the Japanese preferential treatment over all other foreign countries but not above France. He specified that the Japanese had given France to understand that they would withdraw their forces from Indo-China "when the Sino-Japanese conflict has ended."

The Japanese government has given "assurance that it intends to respect French rights and interests in the Far East, notably the territorial integrity of Indo-China and France's sovereign rights over all parts of the Indo-Chinese Union."

China to Await Attack

Hongkong, Sept. 23.—Chinese sources here report that it is the intention of the Chungking government to await the Japanese onslaught from French Indo-China within Chinese territory, as the most suitable defense.

These sources also predict a mass invasion of Indo-China by the Japanese who, they say, will not be satisfied with the present agreement.

Chinese Censure France

Chungking, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Unofficial Chinese quarters today said that French authorities, by granting three air bases to Japan in Indo-China, were deliberately abetting the further bombing of Free China and that this was a worse blow than Japanese troop movements into the colony.

Reports from Kunming, in Yunnan Province, said removal of people from that city was hastened in anticipation of Japanese air raids.

War on Russia Held Nazi Aim

the inclusion of the Dalmatian coast (of Yugoslavia).

"Before the winter of this year the Netherlands is to become a part of the Reich, while the cantons of Switzerland will go to Germany, Italy and France, according to language. Norway ceases to be a separate entity and is to be joined to Sweden under the present Swedish dynasty.

"Belgium is to lose the Flemish areas to Germany, and the Walloon areas will become a part of France. France herself must hand over Alsace and a part of Lorraine to Germany, while Italy will receive Nice, Corsica and Tunisia.

"In the spring of 1941 Germany intends to move into the Balkans and to attack Russia. Confident and armed with immense resources, the Reich counts on being able to dictate that the German-Russian frontier will be that agreed on at Brest-Litovsk. Versailles destroyed and Brest-Litovsk recreated!

"This will mean that the rich Ukraine, Poland and the Baltic states will be absorbed by Germany. Rumania and Yugoslavia will no longer exist; they will be split up among Italy, Hungary and Bulgaria.

"But there is a postscript to these plans. In 1942 Germany intends to compel Italy to make 'adjustments' in Germany's favor in northern and eastern Italy, thereby assuring to herself the port of Trieste (on the Adriatic Sea). Thus Italy and her enlarged frontiers will be under the final domination of the Third Reich.

"Nothing stands between these intentions for the Nazi enslavement of Europe and their fulfilment but the outpost of Britain."

Two Treaties Signed

There were two treaties of Brest-Litovsk, both signed in 1918. The first was between the Central powers and the Ukrainian Republic, the second between the Central powers and Soviet Russia.

Russia renounced all rights to territory west of a line that began in the Gulf of Riga, passed to the east of the city of Riga in what is now Sovietized Latvia and to the east of Vilna, now in Sovietized Lithuania, and turned in a southwesterly direction to the northern Ukrainian frontier, just below the Niemen River, in the present Russian Poland.

From that point the western boarder of Ukrainia ran in a southwesterly direction, passed west of Brest-Litovsk and ended in Tarnograd, on the Galician border, about 100 miles northwest of Lemberg, in what is now Russian Poland.

The Central powers, in their treaty with Ukrainia, recognized that state's independence. Ukrainia promised to supply them with much-needed grain and other materials in return for manufactured articles. Grain deliveries were unsatisfactory, and within a short time the Ukrainian government asked for the help of the Central powers against the Bolsheviki.

8 Accused Nazis Plead Not Guilty To Uruguay Plot

Montevideo, Uruguay, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Eight alleged Nazi leaders pleaded not guilty tonight to charges of plotting against Uruguayan sovereignty and were committed to the city prison pending hearings.

Authorized sources said that the government would be obliged to expel Julio Dalldorf, press attache of the German legation, as the result of an investigation said to have disclosed that h has bn directing Nazi activities here.

These sources declared the German government would be asked to disavow Dalldorf's activities and puish him.

Roosevelt Warns Legion of War Peril

President's Message Asks Veterans to Help Preserve Peace

Boston, Sept. 23 (AP).—The American Legion was told tonight that progress was being made in a drive to speed up a $7,500,000,000 armament program, after the veterans opened their twenty-second convention with demands for a strong national defense as "the surest way to keep our country at peace."

In a city given over to a noisy and colorful celebration by 250,000 legionnaires and their families, William S. Knudsen, chairman of the National Defense Advisory Committee, described difficulties besetting the vast preparedness program but declared his belief that "we will be able to come through."

His declaration came after the convention opened with a message from President Roosevelt, warning that the present "test of strength" abroad constituted a "threat against the peace of the entire world." The Chief Executive asserted this country must protect its freedom against "any form of aggression."

Sounds Keynote

National Comdr. Raymond J. Kelly sounded the keynote of the four-day meeting with his armament-for-peace assertion.

In urging the delegates to adopt a long-range program for "utilization of Legion personnel by the Nation to meet any conceivable national emergencies," he said:

"There is every indication at present that eventual action will occur on the part of Federal and State governments to plug the gaps existing in our internal and anti-subversive defenses. In such programs it is contemplated that certain definite assignments will be given the membership of the American Legion."

Earlier, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, called on the legion to work with his investigators in combating "the scheming peddlers of foreign 'isms.

While declaring that a "'Fifth Column' will never succeed in our country, because we of the law enforcement are ready to meet its every advance," Hoover said that various foreign powers have been "sending their agents to America . . . to embark on a recruitment campaign."

Knudsen told a dinner given by the national commander that the need of special tools for airplanes, guns and tanks had provided one of the biggest problems of the defense program.

"The big time factor in our program," he said, "is to get the tools we need. . . . Time is what we are racing—all day and night."

A tight "squeeze" on skilled labor, he said, was another obstacle, for, "regardless of the efficiency of our training systems, . . . no system is going to turn out a tool maker in a couple of months."

Planes, Tanks for British

An arrangement has been made whereby the British will be allowed to buy about 40 per cent of the planes made in the United States during the next 18 months, he said, adding that even so this country would have "a sufficient quantity to meet the requirements of the program." Britain also would be sold tanks, he said.

He added that while the expansion in production of light tanks was "relatively easy," sharp changes were made in the building of the medium and heavy tanks as a result of "the experience in Europe."

By next spring or early summer, the defense director declared, "we will have medium tanks and a few heavy ones."

Traffic Tied Up

Thousands of sight-seers flocked into the city, jamming highways. All traffic came to a standstill at ordinarily busy corners to watch the antics of the veterans as they attempted to straighten out snarls. Even policemen gave over their posts with a smile.

At Harvard Stadium in nearby Cambridge, scores of natty drum and bugle corps stepped to martial music in the annual colorful competition. They went through their whirligigs in an almost endless stream that carried well into the night.

Roosevelt's Message

President Roosevelt's message to the legion said:

"I appreciate greatly your kind invitation to be with you in Boston for the twenty-second annual national convention. I wish it had been possible for me to accept. I do, however, take pleasure in sending cordial greetings to the officials of the American Legion in convention assembled.

"This year the American Legion has come of age, having been founded in 1919. Much has occurred during the 21 years of its life. On the world scene came peace, then new forms of government, and now another tragic war.

"During all these years since the legion emerged from the World War it has earnestly devoted itself to promoting our national interests. It has consistently fostered good government, good citizenship and national unity. Surely these spiritual resources, whose continuance and growth the legion has so ably advocated, are imperative factors in the strength and peace of our Nation. That strength and peace must continue. We now find abroad serious conflict between those who wish for peace and free government and those who wish to destroy it. That test of strength has gathered force and, whether we like it or not, today it constitutes a threat against the peace of the entire world. We all hold dear our American way of life with our individual and national freedom. We must protect it against any form of aggression which may endanger it. So it is with great satisfaction that I view the legion's interest in the advocacy of strengthening our national defenses.

"With much of the world at war, I am confident that the million members of the legion will play their full part in keeping the war away from our shores and in preventing it from imperiling our freedom, our institutions, our America. I hope you may have a most successful convention."

oughly tired today, and obviously had had no sleep. His clothes were rumpled and a beard stubble showed on his face.

Pieper remained in his office suite throughout the day and some observers believed Muhlenbroich was being held there. Earl J. Connelly, chief investigative officer of the FBI, who headed the Mattson case manhunt, attended the questioning.

The FBI announced Muhlenbroich had confessed kidnaping the De Tristan boy and that the inquiry into the case would be continued.

At Tacoma, Dr. William W. Mattson, father of Charles, said: "I'm sure the FBI will put him (Muhlenbroich) through the mill. I have and always will rely on the FBI to clear up the case. I've never taken a defeatist attitude."

In the De Tristan kidnap $100,000 ransom was demanded in a note signed "Unconventional Eccentric." The record of Muhlenbroich's arrest in Oakland in 1925 by immigration officers on a charge of illegal entry into the United States, showed he was born in Nevwerk (Rhine Province), Germany, was 5 feet 6¾ inches tall, weighed 155 pounds. He had blue eyes, dark brown hair, dark complexion. He is now 40.

The description of the Mattson kidnaper placed him at middle age, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches, 145 to 150 pounds, swarthy, with dark hair, and probably an Austrian or a Slavonian.

Muhlenbroich said he was a barber when he obtained a visa in 1935 at Vancouver, B. C., to go to San Francisco. At Vancouver today Hedley Tuff, barber shop proprietor, said Muhlenbroich worked from him from 1931 to 1935, and that he was known as "Bill Mullen."

Willkie Opens Bid for Labor Vote, Pledges 'More Jobs'

tors the "utilities candidate" told the Northwest his views on the question of electrical power.

Willkie, who at the time of his spectacular triumph at Philadelphia was the $75,000 a year president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, told a cheering crowd in Portland that he emphatically favored competion of the power projects at Bonneville and Grand Coulee.

"And don't let any bunk artists come along and tell you different" Willkie said.

On the question of what should be done with power generated at these two dams, whether it should be distributed by private utilities or by the government, Willkie said:

"The people in the various political subdivisions of Oregon and other States within transmission distance of this project should determine how they wish the power distributed, whether through existing distribution systems municipally or privately owned.

"If the people desire it to be sold exclusively through public agencies, then some appropriate machinery should be set up for determining the fair price to be paid for the existing privately owned systems.

"Whatever the method of distribution, this great reservoir of cheap power should be used for the industrial development of the great Northwest and to provide domestic and rural users of electricity their requirements at the lowest possible rates."

Willkie left Oregon feeling fairly confident of getting its five electoral votes in November, notwithstanding the Gallup poll figures showing President Roosevelt to be ahead there.

Oregon went for Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, but it is nevertheless what is known as a "normally Republican" State, with a long G. O. P. tradition. Both of its United States Senators—including Charles L. McNary, Willkie's running mate—are Republicans.

A remarkable phenomenon is the amount of open Democratic support for Willkie in Oregon. On Saturday the influential Portland Journal declared for him—the first time in the paper's history it has supported a Republican nominee. Last night, when the candidate appeared briefly before the Oregon Veterans' Club for Willkie, he was escorted by Charles H. Martin, former Democratic Governor of Oregon.

Presiding at the meeting was George Jameson, Democratic member of the State Legislature. On the platform was Oswald Wes, another former Democratic Governor, and leading the singing was Warren Irwin, still another Democratic State Legislator.

With this kind of support, and with the support of the well organized and influential World War veterans, plus the fact that it is McNary's State, the Republican 1940 ticket ought to be able to carry Oregon.

If it can't, then Willkie's chances are indeed pretty black in the Nation as a whole.

President to Lay Cornerstone; Private Planes Are Banned

Gravelly Point airport and the air within a 10-mile radius will be forbidden territory for private airplanes for 45 minutes during dedication ceremonies tomorrow.

Private pilots who have no part in the scheduled air show over the field will be banned from 3 to 3:45 p. m., the Civil Aeronautics Board ruled yesterday. Many commercial transports and Army and Navy planes will be in the air as part of the ceremony, the board pointed out and said, "It is considered dangerous for private aircraft to fly in the vicinity."

"The nature of this occasion," the board added, "is such that it will tend to attract other aircraft, the presence of which would create a hazard to air commerce." For that reason, it said, during the proscribed period, "no aircraft except those given special permission by the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics shall be operated within that area lying within a radius of 10 miles, horizontally, from the center of Washington National Airport."

President Roosevelt is scheduled to arrive to lay the cornerstone of the field's terminal building at 3:10 p. m. The ceremony, originally set for September 17, was postponed because of the death of Speaker William B. Bankhead, of the House of Representatives.

The President's automobile will enter on the main north-south runway and will proceed to a stand in front of the terminal building. There the President will give the signal for the first of a fleet of airplanes circling overhead to land.

Seven transport planes, bearing officials and distinguished guests, will land on his signal. Then a plane from each of the four airlines serving Washington will land, followed by aircraft of the Army, Navy and Coast Guard.

As soon as the planes have landed, the President and his party will move on to a small grandstand at the rear of the terminal building, where he will lay the cornerstone and make a brief address.

Several thousand persons are expected to witness the ceremony from the airport area and from the grandstand, seats in the latter being reserved for holders of special cards.

Text of President's Letter on Draft

Governors Asked To Set Up Selective Service Systems

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Text of a letter, sent by President Roosevelt in identical form to the 48 Governors, requesting them to set up the conscription machinery in their individual States follows:

The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 wisely contemplates that the selective process shall be carried out by the States and the local communities. Historically and traditionally it is entirely fitting that the Chief Executive of each State be responsible for the selective service operations within his boundaries. I know that I can count on your fullest cooperation.

A favorable and intelligent public opinion, based on a just and impartial administration of this most important defense measure, can be more effective in securing proper and effective administration of law than the penalties written into the statute.

I am asking each Governor to set up and supervise the selective service system within his State. As promptly as may be practicable, there, I should like to have the name of the individual you designate for appointment as State executive for selective service. It is my thought that the State executive would administer the operations within your State under your direction, but with the necessary assistance and supervision of the National Selective Service Administration. I appreciate also that your State has gone far in its planning for man power procurement, and that your adjutant general and State staff are well organized to assist in carrying out the present requirements.

Copy of Proclamation

I request you to carry out the registration within your State and to call upon your local election officials and other patriotic citizens, to serve on the registration boards and in all other ways to assist in making the registration full and complete.

Inclosed is a copy of the proclamation fixing Wednesday, October 16, as the day for registration within the Continental United States, and setting forth in a general way instructions for registration. I hope you will find it desirable to issue a similar proclamation urging the fullest cooperation within your State. It should be made abundantly clear to the public that the act of registration consists in effect of merely listing the names and addresses of registrants.

After registration, the classification and selection of men will be handled by the local boards. It is all-important that the local boards be composed of men in whom the community has the greatest confidence. Membership on a local board should be considered a position of honor and trust. I feel certain that many thousands of our most able and patriotic citizens will offer their services for this duty.

Advisory Boards

I ask that you recommend to me with the greatest expedition the names of citizens whose loyalty, integrity and fair-mindedness are beyond question, for members of the local boards and boards of appeal, and for the offices of Government appeal agents and examining physicians. I ask that you yourself appoint the advisory boards for registrants and the medical advisory boards.

Since so many of our young men will be asked to devote a year of their lives to the service of their country, I feel certain that others of our citizens will wish to make their contribution to the national defense by devoting a part of their time to these various duties. It is not contemplated that compensation be paid, except for the necessary clerical assistance.

I suggest you make the fullest use of all State and local officers and employes. I believe you will find your State employment service and the public welfare agencies particularly helpful to the local boards.

The Congress has made its historic decision after careful consideration and full debate. The procurement and training of our manpower under proper administration, fairly and without fear or favor, is undoubtedly the most important single factor in our entire program of national defense. I ask your every help.

in a few days, White House officials said.

All these appointments must be made to complete a Nation-wide organization for registration October 16 of men from 21 to 36, and the selection of 400,000 immediately for a year's military training.

The President signed a 61-page executive order making effective two volumes of draft rules. Additional volumes will follow.

The purpose of selective service, the order said, was to "secure an orderly, just and democratic method whereby the military man power of the United States may be made available for training and service in the land and naval forces of the United States . . . with the least possible disruption of the social and economic life of the Nation."

Three Parts of Program

Basically, the conscription program will fall into three parts: (1) An inventory, through registration, of man power; (2) a determination of the relative availability of registrants for military service, and (3) induction into the land and naval forces.

Heading the program, and responsible to the President, will be the national director.

Under him will be State headquarters in charge of State directors, recommended by the Governors and responsible to them.

Registration is to be handled by election officials or other designated agencies who serve without pay. Special boards will advise and assist registrants.

After registration, local classification and selection boards start work—one to each area with 30,000 population and in any event one to each county. Each will have assigned to it a physician for examinations and a Government appeal agent to "protect the interests of the Government and of the registrants."

Details Complete

A medical advisory board of specialists will consider cases of "doubtful physical condition."

Governors also will establish boards of appeal, approximately for each region having 70,000 registrants under the initial registration. These will consider requests for exemption, and their decisions will be final unless modified by the President.

The rules and regulations so detailed that they even tell the type of furniture for registration offices, were drafted by War and Justice Department officials and a special committee of six which Mr. Roosevelt named Saturday to coordinate conscription plans.

They repeated the language of the Conscription Act as regards men who must register; men, such as those already in the Army or Navy or in diplomatic service, who need not, and the penalties for failure to comply—a maximum of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Persons under military or naval jurisdiction who evade the law will be subject to court-martial.

Local police are empowered to "assist in the apprehension of delinquents."

Any man who does not register October 16 may go subsequently before a local board, which will register him if he had a valid reason for delay. Lacking a valid reason, procedure will be determined under a third volume of rules, still to be issued.

With national defense as its keynote, the Twenty-fourth Annual District Red Cross Roll Call opened yesterday with flag-raising ceremonies in front of the District Building.

By proclamation of the Commissioners, the drive to enlist a minimum of 130,000 members will continue through October 19.

Attracted by stirring martial music of the United States Army Band, hundreds of workers gathered at lunch time in front of a flag-draped stand on the District Building steps to watch civic and municipal leaders officially launch the campaign.

Flanked by uniformed volunteers of the various local Red Cross corps, color guards of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and National Guard, Commissioner David McCoach, jr., raised American and Red Cross flags signifying start of the roll call.

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Associate Supreme Court Justice, was the first District enrollee. She received her red and white button from Edgar Morris, general chairman of the drive.

Her enrollment was dispatched to National Headquarters on Seventeenth street northwest by 10-year-old Alan Odier, the only American-born descendant of the family of Henri Dumont, Swiss founder of the world-wide Red Cross movement.

The campaign keynote was sounded by James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross. Explaining the Red Cross is faced with far greater problems than any time since the World War, Fieser said:

"This Roll Call, therefore, is of supreme importance because the Red Cross occupies an important place in our national defense. It is a voluntary arm of our Government.

"Now, with millions of young men enrolling for possible military service, with the certainty that our military establishment will grow to 1,500,000 as speedily as plans can be worked out, the Red Cross has work to do."

While tanks, antiaircraft guns, planes and ships are the responsibility of others, Fieser said, humanitarian preparedness is the responsibility of the Red Cross. A citizen army of mercy, he added, is necessary to carry out this year's slogan: "Be Ready with the Red Cross."

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District chapter, predicted success of the drive as "loyal citizens" rally to its support, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, vice chairman, appealed for "an army to save human life, not to destroy it."

A prayer for the relief of world-wide suffering was offered by Chaplain Arlington A. McCallum, of the District National Guard.

The local proclamation was read by Commissioner McCoach, who described the drive as "an event of great significance that touches the lives of all citizens."

Active Army, Navy and Marine Corps leaders and representatives of civic, veteran and patriotic groups also were on the speakers' stand.

Fairchild Gets Army Contract For 700 Planes

The Army yesterday awarded a $6,672,300 contract to the Fairchild engine and airplane division, Fairchild Aircraft Corporation, Hagerstown, Md., for an estimated 700 airplanes.

No details were given in the War Department announcement as to the type of plane ordered and the number was not specified. It was understood, however, that about 700 low-wing monoplane training craft with liquid-cooled motors are to be purchased.

Arrangements are under way between the Fairchild company and the National Defense Commission for the construction of a new plant adjacent to Hagerstown's new airport, which is considered a model for a city of its size. The present plant inside the city will continue to operate.

William S. Knudsen, member of the Defense Commission, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, visited the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown and the proposed new factory, recently on their tour of aircraft establishments.

Inmate Kills Self At Soldiers' Home

Howard Warrenfeltz, 43-year-old inmate of the United States Soldiers' Home, was found dead in his cell-room yesterday with both wrists slashed. A safety-razor blade was found lying on the floor.

Police said Warrenfeltz was being held in the detention barracks for disobedience of orders.

Congress to Get Bill Approving Destroyer Deal

Resolution Will Remind President of Legislators' Stake in Foreign Affairs

Copyright by New York Times

Representative Cox, of Georgia, disclosed yesterday he will introduce today a concurrent resolution approving the recent exchange of 50 obsolete destroyers to Great Britain in return for naval and air bases on British possessions within this hemisphere.

COX

The resolution has two aims, it was disclosed. One will be to call to the executive department's attention the fact that Congress, and particularly the Senate, has a "stake" in foreign commitments and that the first official information Congress had was the Presidential communication announcing consummation of the deal.

The other aim is to show, through Congress, that the American people are behind the agreement and to put Republicans on record on the transfer.

Cox, as well as several Senators, said they felt the resolution would be adopted overwhelmingly, if not unanimously, in both the House and Senate.

John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, said yesterday that new efforts were being made to bring forward the St. Lawrence hydro-electric project" wrapped in the mantle of national defense."

"Coal-burning electric generating plants can as a rule be built in less than half the time required to construct dams and reservoirs and install turbines for water power," Battle said in a statement, "and we have the word of the National Defense Commission that the time element is a prime consideration and in many cases the controlling factor."

Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials said yesterday that the Defense Plant Corporation, and RFC subsidiary, was acquiring title to 200 acres of land at Lockland, Ohio, near Cincinnati for an engine plant for the Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

Details of the transaction, including the price paid for the land, were not announced.

The War Department announced yesterday award of contracts totaling $8,388,027.06 for the Ordnance Department and the Quartermaster Corps.

The largest was a $3,121,680 order for engines placed with the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J.

A $2,231,149 order for fiber containers went to the Seeley Tube & Box Co., Newark, N. J.

Among other contracts were: Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Body assemblies for bombs, $847,443; Atlas Power Co., Webb City, Md., explosives, $514,750, and Adolph Arons & Sons, Jersey City, wool overcoats, $124,126.

Appropriation of $375,000 to enable the bureau of mines to test and determine the feasibility for use for national defense purposes of various strategic minerals found in far Western States and Virginia was proposed to Congress yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

Under the bureau's program, determinations of the feasibility of manganese deposits will be conducted in California, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona and Virginia.

Mercury tests will be made in California and Nevada; an nickel in Montana, on tungsten in California and Nevada, on antimony in California, and on tin in Virginia.

Fairfax High Students

Selma Ankers, president of the Fairfax (Va.) High School Student Body, yesterday announced appointment of the following cabinet officers:

Emory Chesley, vice president; Dewey Lee Curtis, secretary; Rush uckley, treasurer; Robert Forman, secretary of safety; Richard Watts, athletics, and Earl Yowell, publications.

Draftees Must Be Fit to Carry 50-Pound Pack for 15 Miles

Physical Standards Will Be Stricter Than Those in Effect During the World War, Says Chief Medical Adviser

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Men selected for military service under the draft must be strong enough when conditioned to march 15 to 20 miles with a 50-pound pack on their backs.

This is the general standard to be laid down for local medical boards in determining the physical fitness of men for the draft, said Lieut. Col. Charles B. Spruit, chief medical advisor of the Selective Service System, yesterday.

Regulations setting forth the physical standards for the draft in detail are not yet complete, Col. Spruit stated, but in general they will be stricter than those in effect during the World War and lower in a few respects than present rules for voluntary enlistments. Men requiring hospital treatment to make them fit will not be accepted.

To Select Only the Best

"We want to select only the best apples in the basket," he told reporters. "When you put apples in the cellar for storage you pick the sound ones, not those with specks. We're choosing men, not for war, but for training and service, after which they go in storage against the day which—pray God—will never come. They won't improve in storage, you know."

Meanwhile, a ruling of the Civil Service Commission that National Guardsmen called into active service were subject to Hatch Act restrictions on political activity was condemned in the Senate.

Senator Gibson (Republican,) of Vermont, termed the holding "a dangerous step" and said that Congress should change the law. Declaring he feared the ruling would also apply to men drafted into the Army, Gibson said it would be undemocratic to induct men into military service and then "practically threaten them with jail" if they took an active part in politics.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the act, said the Guardsmen and Regulars came within the restrictions, but that the status of the draftees raised "a nice constitutional question." Having no choice about entering the service, they might not be subject to the act, he added. Hatch denied a contention of Senator Gibson that the law would bar conscripts and guardsmen from expressing a political opinion in letters to their home, stating that its only effect is to prevent Government employes from taking an active part in managing a political campaign.

Question Jurisdiction

Joining the debate, Senators Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, demanded to know by what right the Civil Service Commission took any jurisdiction over Army personnel.

Col. Spruit said there had been considerable pressure exercised to have the Army take in men with adjustable physical defects and then cure them. It was decided, however, against launching such a program, but to let the local communities handle such cases.

"We want men that are qualified for any military assignment," he added, explaining that the World War practice of taking in men for limited service, such as company clerk duties, would not be followed.

He said that men selected must be at least 5 feet tall, be able to see and hear "well enough to do their duties" and have at least 12 teeth, three upper and three lower biting teeth that meet and a like number of matching molars.

Men with glasses will be accepted where their sight without such aid meets the minimum requirements and who have normal vision with their glasses. Detailed tests will be set forth in the regulations. No men will be taken who have acute venereal diseases in the infectious stage, Col. Spruit made clear.

Elliott Roosevelt to Become Air Corps Captain Oct. 7

"BIRTHDAY PRESENT"—Elliott Roosevelt (left), son of the President, celebrated his thirtieth birthday anniversary yesterday by becoming a captain in the Army Air Corps Specialists Reserve. Capt. Roosevelt reported to Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Air Corps chief, who assigned him to duty with the procurement division at Wright Field, Ohio. Roosevelt said he gave up his private interests to serve the Army for a year

Third Son of President to Take Up Arms as Sideline, He'll Be Stationed At Wright Field in Procurement Unit

Elliott Roosevelt, latest of three of the President's four sons to take up arms as a sideline, yesterday became a captain in the Specialist Reserve of the Army.

Unlike his two brothers, Elliott went the whole hog. He will enter the service October 7 in the Air Corps Materiel Division, Wright Field, Ohio, to serve at least a full year in radio and aircraft procurement. James, the eldest Roosevelt son, is a captain in the Marine Corps Reserve and Franklin D., jr., the youngest, is an ensign in the Naval Reserve, though neither had been called yet for a year's service.

Just 30 years old yesterday, Elliott is without previous military experience, though he is versed in aircraft procurement, having held office in the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

James once served two weeks in the field as a lieutenant-colonel of Marines, a rank he resigned to be reappointed captain, and Franklin D., jr., recently underwent a period of training at sea.

Elliott was sworn in yesterday by Capt. Leon B. Hord, deputy administrative assistant in the office of the adjutant general. He said he was leaving last night for his home at Fort Worth, Tex., and expected to close up all his business affairs by October 2.

Asked if he would retain any business connections, Capt. Roosevelt replied, "As I understand it, under the law, I have to resign all other work." He said he has a radio contract, under which he speaks through 54 stations thrice weekly, which still has eight months to run. He already has received permission from the broadcasting company, he said, to cancel this contract.

"I felt, in view of the fact that many younger men will be called into service through conscription," he said in answer to a question, "that it would be important for all people in positions, such as I occupy, to offer their services if they prove of value. No matter what the sacrifice, it is important for all young men to join up and take part in the defense program."

Asked how he had happened to be commissioned in the grade of captain, he said, "I offered to take any job or rank they'd give me."

A War Department spokesman explained that it was customary to give reserve officers rank commensurate with their age, earning capacity and civilian status. As a captain Roosevelt will be paid $200 a month, plus $116 a month for quarters and subsistence, if he claims dependents. If he does not, his allowance for quarters and subsistence would be $78 a month.

Red Cross to Add First-Aid Classes

Classes in first aid and life saving under the direction of the American Red Cross are about to be formed, Mrs. Joseph B. Matre, chairman of the Silver Spring, Md., branch, Montgomery County chapter, announced yesterday.

At least twenty or thirty persons are required to form a class, Mrs. Matre stated. Persons interested in taking the 10-week course given at the Silver Spring, Md., Volunteer fire department requested to communicate with Mrs. Matre before October 1.

Glass 'Utterly Opposes' 3d Terms

Asks Constitutional Amendment to Limit Presidents to Two

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Vigorous opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt was expressed yesterday by Senator Carter Glass, veteran Virginia Democrat.

Glass made known his opposition in a letter favoring a constitutional amendment to limit a President to two terms of four years each in the White House.

The political front, meanwhile, brought these developments:

Reports that Representative Lyndon Johnson, youthful Texan, is being pushed by New Dealers to succeed J. W. (Chip) Robert, of Atlanta, Ga., who yesterday resigned as secretary to the Democratic National Committee.

Thomas J. Corcoran, one of the New Deal inner circle, returned to the Capital yesterday and told friends he would resign this week as special counsel for the RFC to join Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York in his drive to round up the liberal vote for President Roosevelt.

In his letter to Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, Chairman of a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee Glass said:

"Touching yours of September 18, just now brought to my attention, I may say that I am utterly opposed to a third term for President of the United States, and I am inclined to agree with Mr. Jefferson in his statement that the Constitution should provide that a President may have but two terms of four years each."

Glass' letter was made public while Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minneapolis, declared in the House there was "little doubt" that Mr. Roosevelt plans to resign, if reelected, in the next year or two and turn over the White House to his running-mate, Henry A. Wallace.

Andresen quoted from a letter from M. W. Thatcher, chairman of the National Farmers Union legislative committee, predicting, after a conference with the President, that "he will resign" if the war situation permits, and adding:

"I make this statement because he (the President) emphasized the qualities of Mr. Henry Wallace as one who is a thorough New Dealer, who has unquestioned integrity, fidelity to the common people of the country and the cause of democracy, and who also has one of the best minds and the clearest concept of world problems of any in this group."

Andresen said the President insisted Wallace be named by the Democratic convention as his running mate, and referred to the President's "slip of the tongue" statement in his speech accepting the third-term nomination when he referred to the convention's selection of Wallace "for the high office of President."

"Whether or not this was a slip of the tongue has never been made clear by Mr. Roosevelt," Andresen said, "but psychologists will tell you that very often we blurt out in public when momentarily off guard the very thing we most desire to keep secret.

"Since the convention, Mr. Wallace has been parading up and down the country making speeches in a manner befitting a Presidential candidate, except that what he has had to say reveals he is eminently unqualified to hold the office of President."

Andresen reminded the House that before he was nominated for a third term, the President said "he was tired and is anxious to retire to Hyde Park."

None of the 239 Democrats in the House arose to take issue with Andresen.

Senator Glass' letter caused Democrats to wonder what the 82-year-old Virginian would do in the election. In his speech at the Chicago convention nominating James A. Farley for President, Glass voiced opposition to a third term, and several weeks later said that as a lifelong Democrat he would vote for President Roosevelt in November.

Burke's committee was told by Miss Irene Tinsley Washington, distantly related to the family of the first President, that "the women of the country will be instrumental in preventing President Roosevelt from breaking the third-term tradition."

The Political Arena

By International News Service

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, tonight charged President Roosevelt with responsibility for America's lack of adequate defense, pointing out "the growth of the German army has taken place entirely within the seven years of the Roosevelt Administration."

TAFT

Calling for the election of Wendell L. Willkie to correct the abuses which he said had sprung up during the New Deal and which he said are now crippling national defense, Senator Taft declared:

"Wendell Willkie understands the business system of America, and how it works. He knows how prosperity can be produced. He knows how the abuses of business can be prevented without crushing an entire industry."

New York, Sept. 23 (INS).—Republican National Chairman Martin today predicted that Wendell Willkie will carry Masschahusetts and Pennsylvania in November's Presidential balloting.

"We don't have to worry about these States," Martin said. "In Massachusetts, particularly, there has been the biggest defection of Democrats to Republicans that I have witnessed in my time."

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic National chairman, said today that President Roosevelt shares his view that Wendell Willkie "has lost ground" in his campaign for the Presidency.

Furthermore, added Flynn at a press conference. The President has said he had "every reason to be satisfied" with the progress of the Democratic campaign.

Flynn conferred with the President and the Congressional Committee of the Democratic National Committee at Washington Friday.

The Railway Labor Executives Association, representing 20 of the 21 railroad brotherhoods, has indorsed 28 candidates for the Senate in the November election, including 22 sitting members of the chamber.

The list includes:

Republican Senators Johnson (Calif.), Thomas (Idaho), Vandenberg (Mich.), Shipstead (Minn.), Barbour (N. Y.).

Progressive Senator LaFollette (Wis.).

Indorsed candidates not now members of the Senate include Cochran (Nebr.), McSweeney (Ohio), Murdock (Utah), Walgren (Wash.), Kilgore (W. Va.), all Democrats, and Lemke, (N. Dak.), an Independent.

Burke Pledges No Ramspeck Bill Filibuster

But Opposes Delay In Vote on Measure To Curb Agencies

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Chances for progress on the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service rose last night as Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, gave assurance that he would not filibuster against the measure today.

However, Burke reiterated his intention to oppose every effort to take up new legislation until Majority Leader Barkley allows the Senate to vote on the Logan-Walter bill to curb Federal administrative agencies.

The Senate should be able today to act at least on some of the suggested amendments to the Ramspeck measure, if not on the bill itself.

Proposal by Ellender

Among these amendments is the proposal introduced yesterday by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, to require Government employes who would be covered into the civil service under the bill to take competitive examinations, with a 10 per cent credit. (As it stands, the bill would allow the President to place some 200,000 Federal workers under civil service if they pass noncompetitive examinations.)

Senator Ellender also proposed to exempt from the bill assistant United States attorneys, deputy United States marshals and deputy collectors of internal revenue; while Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, principal Senate sponsor of the Ramspeck bill, agreed to an exemption of posts to which appointments are made by the President with consent of the Senate.

May Vote Today on Burke Proposal

Although most of the debate yesterday dealt with the merits of the Ramspeck bill and, incidentally, Senatorial patronage woes, Senator Burke gained the floor late in the afternoon to renew his plea that the Senate refuse formally to take up the Ramspeck measure until it has disposed of the Walter-Logan bill.

A vote on this question is expected today; and Senator Burke said that if he is defeated he will make no further efforts by parliamentary maneuvers to block the Ramspeck bill, but will renew his fight when the next piece of legislation comes before the Senate.

Congress May Stay in Session Through Election Campaign

Three-Day Recesses, Instead, Favored By House Members; Many Believe Adjournment Would Be 'Bad Politics'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Continuance of Congress in session through the campaign period, broken only by a series of three-day recesses, appeared a possibility last night.

Surveys made for the leadership showed that the House at this time lacks the votes to adjourn or take a lengthy recess if either proposal is put to a roll call.

Unless House sentiment shifts or plans for a roll call are dropped, Democratic leaders may themselves propose the three-day recess alternative, it was learned.

House Republicans as a unit have opposed any move toward adjournment. Sufficient Democrats think it would be "bad medicine" politically to quit and go home, to jeopardize recent plans for a sine die leave-taking.

Barkley Sees Little Hope

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he is still proceeding on the "assumption" that the House will adopt an adjournment resolution. But he conceded there was scant hope that Congress would be ready to go home by Saturday, as had been planned. There are probably enough Democratic and Republican votes in the Senate to pass an adjournment resolution in that chamber, once legislative dockets are cleared.

A strong move to head off selection of a permanent majority leader meanwhile developed among House Democrats, who will meet in caucus tomorrow to consider the vacancy created by elevation of Majority Leader Rayburn to the Speakership.

Of five candidates in the race for Majority leader, four favored postponement of the election until the next session of Congress, generally on the theory that it would mar party harmony on the eve of the election.

Majority leadership aspirants opposing an immediate election were Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, Representative Cooper, of Tennessee, Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, and Representative Rankin, of Mississippi.

McCormack Holds Lead

Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, generally conceded in the lead position in the race, is on record for an immediate election and has substantial support. On petition of 50 House members, McCormack, who is chairman of the caucus, called the showdown Democratic meeting for tomorrow.

A motion to postpone will be presented. This would take precedence over nomination and election of a leader. The vote is expected to be close, with McCormack backers solidly opposing the move. The Massachusetts Democrat will need a majority either to block the motion or to assure his own election.

Another candidate—Representative Somers, of New York—prepared to enter the race in the event of a deadlock between the five other aspirants. If the election is held, the New York Democrat said he would enter the contest on the third or fourth ballot.

Pending a decision on a permanent leader, Representative Warren of North Carolinia is performing the leadership duties, at the request of Speaker Rayburn. Warren in time will retire from the House to take office as Comptroller General. Both Rayburn and Warren said they are adopting a "hands-off" policy toward the contest.

Would Meet Every Four Days

If plans for adjournment collapse and the three-day recess program is substituted, both chambers must regularly be called into session every four days.

Although no business need be transacted, a quorum might be demanded at any time by any insistent member desirous of forcing a roll call.

Members making trips back to their home districts would have to pay their own expenses, as transportation costs are provided only for members coming to a new session or leaving an adjourned one.

Although a clear majority of Congressmen wish to go home to repair political fences, a deluge of mail calling on Congress to "remain on duty in Washington" has persuaded many members it would be bad politics to take an adjournment.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who sometimes reflects the White House views, said yesterday:

"The situation in Europe is worse than it's ever been. I think Congress must stay here on the job in order to strengthen our defenses at home and abroad. We have plenty to do to help the President and the country."

Last Rites Today For Mrs. Lard, 65, Wife of Inventor

Funeral services for Mrs. Nelson Hosea Lard, 65, wife of Allan Lard, inventor of the first single-trigged double-barreled shotgun, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the home of John J. Hamilton, 4831 Indian lane northwest, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Lard died Sunday at Emergency Hospital of a heart ailment. Her home was at the Hotel 2400, Sixteenth street northwest, to which the couple had recently returned from their summer home at Jamestown, R. I.

Mrs. Lard was born in St. Joseph, Mo. She had lived in Washington since 1900. Formerly she was active in the work of the District Red Cross. Surviving, besides her husband, is a nephew, William E. Birdsall, of New York City.

Rumors of a rift between the Associated Willkie Clubs of America and regular Republicans were declared "without foundation" yesterday by Haven B. Page, of Alexandria, Va., chairman of the Willkie Washington committee. The Willkie clubs are organizations of independents and dissident Democrats supporting Wendell Willkie for President.

Page said the Associated Willkie Clubs, of which the Washington committee is local headquarters, is concerned with "coordinating the support of millions of independents and Democrats who, because of opposition to the third term for the President or for other valid reasons, are backing Wendell Willkie." The national Republican organization, he added, "has its hands full" caring for details of the campaign.

"We're much too busy," he said, "to have time for petty bickering among ourselves."

County Party to Meet

Princess Anne, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—A "harmony" and organizational meeting will be held here by the Democratic State central committee for Somerset County Wednesday night, launching the fall campaign.

Mrs. Washington Will Be Buried Here Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Dorothy Walker Washington, 46, who died Sunday at Garfield Hospital after a long illness, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Sixth Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Washington was the wife of Lawrence T. Washington, electrical contractor. At one time Mrs. Washington was employed in the Bureau of Internal Revenue and later assisted her husband in his business. Her home was at 5327 Sixteenth street northwest.

She leaves her husband, four children, Dorothy Anne, Lawrence, jr., Elizabeth and Georgia, and one sister, Mrs. Frances W. Fillius, all of Washington.

Green Is Head of Senate Democratic Drive

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Reorganization of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee was announced yesterday, as Democrats launched an offensive to head off sizable Republican inroads on the Senate Democratic majority of 69.

Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, 100 per cent New Dealer, was appointed by Senate Majority Leader Barkley to head up the new Senate Democratic Campaign organization. Barkley said he would announce other members of the group later.

The appointment followed forecasts by Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, that Republicans will win a minimum of eight new Senate seats in November, regardless of the outcome of the Presidential election, and stand to pick up a possible 12 to 13.

Green Succeeds Brown

Green succeeded Senator Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, who handled the Senate Democratic vote drive in 1938, and who told Barkley that pressure of other duties made it necessary for him to resign as chairman.

Green told reporters he was "drafted" for the post, but would dig in immediately. He said he was not prepared as yet to make a detailed analysis of Senate Democratic prospects, but declared they are "bright." He said Democrats are assured of retaining control of the Senate.

Republican Congressional and Senate campaign strategy has been aimed at whittling down the Democratic majority in the Senate, in hopes of wresting control in 1942, and at capturing more than the 48 House seats needed to elect a Republican House speaker.

An above-average change in Senate faces already has been assured by retirements, deaths and defeats in State primaries.

Four Voluntarily Retiring

Of the 36 Senate seats to be filled, at least 10 will not be filled by the same men. Four Democrats already have failed of renomination—Holt of West Virginia, Burke of Nebraska, King of Utah and Ashurst of Arizona—while one Republican, Frazier of North Dakota, was retired by State primaries.

Voluntarily retiring are Donohey, of Ohio, and Schwellenbach, of Washington (Democrats), and Hale, of Maine, and Gibson, of Vermont (Republicans). Death of Senator Lundeen, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, left another seat vacant. In addition, Senator M. M. Neely will retire if he wins his race for election as governor of West Virginia.

Republicans stand to pick up two seats in Minnesota alone. Gov. Harold E. Stassen is empowered to fill by appointment the seat of the late Senator Lundeen, but may decide to let the voters decide in November. Senator Shipstead, the sole remaining Minnesota Farmer-Laborite in the Senate, is running for reelection as a Republican, having won the G. O. P. nomination in the primaries.

Stassen, keynoter at the Philadelphia Republican convention, may himself decide to run for the seat of the late Senator Lundeen.

Soviet Oil Exports To Reich Increase

But Germany Seeks Bigger Rate of Gain To Fill War Needs

By C. L. Sulzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Varna, Bulgaria, Sept. 23.—Russian oil exports to Germany via the Black Sea from the Caucasus are slowly increasing and although they are still inconsiderable in view of the needs of the Nazi war machine. There is evidence here that the Reich is doing its utmost to stimulate them.

During the month ended September 13, not quite 20,000 tons of once-refined petroleum were shipped through this Bulgarian port. The steady increase in tonnage during the four-week period ranged from 4,095 tons in the first week to 4,400 in the final week.

At present this trade, which is safe from the British blockade, is handled entirely by Italian tankers under special charter to the Reich, at about $100 monthly apiece. Three of these oil-burning vessels—the Coleno, Torcello, and the Maya—are constantly shuttling between Varna and Batum. A fourth—the Buiseppina Chirardi—present is idling at the wharf since its contract has ended.

System Costly

The system, which is enormously costly on account of transport difficulties, is for one tanker to remain in port discharging cargo while the other two act as carriers. Each vessel is of a 5,000-ton capacity. A sign that Germany intends to amplify the volume of this trade is in the fact that Nazi engineers are now building two 10,000-ton storage tanks near the waterfront. The first of these has just been completed.

Oil is transported from Varna by special train across Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Hungary. Two trains of between 25 and 30 tank cars leave Varna daily. The Reich has pressed into service tank cars from subjected countries all over the continent. At least 50 new Swedish tank cars are at present employed in this route.

The service has been improved considerably since it was instituted last winer. At first Russian petroleum arrived without refining and in tiny quantities. The Nazis hope soon to receive at least 700,000 tons annually along this route.

It is understood German engineers are studying means to increase the output of these fields.

Danube Ports Jammed

At first the Reich sought to use the Danubian facilities for bulk transshipment of Russian oil. However, these were choked with tankers carrying the Rumanian output, and the Giurgui terminus of the Ploesti pipelines was unable to handle greater quantities.

Some German experts hope to employ Russe—the Bulgarian river port opposite Giurgui—to facilitate the Russian shipments. This would considerably reduce the carrying costs.

There are not enough Danubian tankers at the moment to handle this trade. The railway between Russe and Varna is single-track, and despite persistent reports that the Reich intends to build a double line, no start has been made on the project as yet.

Negotiations Progress

Istanbul, Sept. 22.—Negotiations for putting into effect the recent Turkish-German trade agreement are making slow progress because of Germany's inability to comply with certain Turkish demands.

In particular Germany had to admit that it was impossible to fulfill obligations respecting deliveries of locomotives and bridge construction. For that reason the dispatch of Turkish products to Germany has been suspended.

On the other hand, Turkish negotiations wth both Britain and Rumania are progressing favorably. Although there are no formal negotiations with the Soviet Union, the appointment of M. Vinogradoff as ambassador to Turkey to replace the German-influenced Alexei Genentieffs already has been marked by an improvement of commercial relations.

Vinogradoff is one of Josef Stalin's circle of intimates, most of whom have a reputation for being anti-Fascist and anti-German.

It is learned that Russia, which from pique over the Turkish refusal to accept Russian demands on the occasion of Foreign Minister Saracoglu's prolonged sojourn in Moscow, largely suspended deliveries to Turkey, is now resuming them satisfactorily.

Sailings Suspended

Following the recent Italian detention of the Turkish steamship Sakarya in the Mediterranean, Turkish sailings into the Mediterranean from Istanbul have been suspended pending a decision by Ankara as to what is to be done. Last week a British convoy arrived with valuable supplies, including war material, for Turkey.

To the list of cereals banned for export pending completion of the harvest an official decree today adds dried peas and beans and anything capable of being used to produce flour of any sort. These are among the products Germany had been hoping to obtain.

The Turkish press continued to discuss the Rome conference and Syria and Bulgaria. Turkey is the only country in this part of the world without food restrictions of any sort, and the press naturally is sarcastic toward the leading Bulgarian newspaper, Mir, for having announced that Turkey has two meatless days a week and is about to extend the restriction to poultry.

Since Sofia is not 24 hours from Istanbul and Bulgaria possesses a consulate here, it should not be difficult, says the press, for Mir to ascertain the facts. Foods are abundant and Turkey has not the least intention of applying restrictions. Mir is accused of trying to make trouble.

Rapprochement Seen

The editor of the newspaper Tan believes that the Rome talks concentrated on Spain and that when all is settled Spain will instantly reveal her attitude toward Britain and Gibraltar. The newspaper Vakit suggests a connection between Tokyo and the Rome talks, envisaging a rapprochement of Japan and the Axis as Soviet-German relations continue to grow colder.

Several newspapers consider the situation in Syria, declaring that Turkey is not willing that it should become the center of intrigues against Turkey or be subjected to new foreign influences.

Attention is called to the steady infiltration of Italians and Germans into Syria in the guise of "tourists," which may affect the security of Turkey's frontiers.

An editorial in the French-controlled newspaper Istanbul is devoted to the Egyptian position. It asserts that the Italian forces do not exceed 280,000 men. The paper expresses the conviction that Egypt will enter the war at Britain's side at the propitious moment, declaring that Italo-German propaganda spreading the idea of a restoration of the Caliphate, making King Farouk the religious successor to the Turkish sultans and Cairo the controlling center of the Arab world, is entirely without effect.

The Ankara paper Ulus recalls Premier Mussolini's broken promise not to invade Egypt as a fresh instance of the unscrupulous disregard of the Axis leaders for their pledged word.

The Son Telegraf believes that five points were discussed at Rome—coordination of an attempted invasion of Britain and a general assault on British Africa, details of the war in Egypt, Balkan questions for the bringing of Spain into the war situation, the French colonies and demands to be made to the Vichy government.

It is said that perhaps a sixth point was discussed—utilizing Spain for another effort to obtain peace with Britain. In any event, says the paper, it is clear Germany and Italy are in an uncomfortable situation.

Rumanians here in communication with the suite of King Carol state that his ultimate destination is he Estates, including a ranch, that he owns in the Argentine. But in view of the extreme instability of the new regime in Rumania, the absence of competent persons in the ranks of the Iron Guard to fill ministerial posts, and Premier Ion Antonescu's reputation for taking hasty and extreme actions, King Carol, the Rumanians say, has no intention of leaving Europe at the present.

Glenn Miller Is the Next Poll King Due in Capital

Today Success Is Measured by One's Poll Rating; Local Lass Is a Contest Runner-Upper; Answering the Phone and Sorting the Mail

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

ONCE UPON A TIME it was a mark of success to own two head of cattle; then things worked up to a terrific material degree in which people were valued according to the number of homes, motor cars and yachts they owned. As every good citizen knows now, however, those days are no more.

For how successful a man may be in 1940 depends on his standing in polls. What, you have no poll rating? Tiens! Gather your friends around you, make up your own poll, found your own rating; ignore the gross goods you've been collecting and get yourself a rating, no matter how lowly.

Glenn Miller will be the next poll king to arrive here. As you must by now know, the sensationally popular orchestra leader will bring his band and entertainers to the Earle stage for the week beginning Friday. And Glenn Miller's latest poll distinction is that his orchestra captured the poll conducted among 400,000 college students in 108 schools of higher education.

This Billboard poll gives Miller's the highest showing of any band in the country, polling a 251.6 rating as compared to 82.5 for the nearest competitor, with many top bands gaining as little as one point.

One year ago Miller was able to claim less than two points himself, another poll phenomenon which makes his present standing more of a mark of success than had he bought himself a 10,000-acre estate. Their dance spots, radio quarter-hours and theater appearances indicate the group is still in the ascendancy.

Ah well-a-day! There's nothing like having a poll rating.

ANSWERING THE MAIL: Ray Bell in New York: N. B. B. is ailing but putting up a stiff battle 'against those same bugs which tied him down last spring. Thanks for your Goldwyn note and glad you're still a Post reader . . . Cadet Venizelos in Tennessee: Have been up against a stone wall in finding much further dope on "Days of Jesse James," but will keep plugging and check further on leading lady Pauline Moore . . . Jean Power, Connecticut Avenue: No, Day Tuttle is no longer connected with the Civic Theater. Matter of fact there is no Civic Theater. It's new name is The Washington Theater and should be releasing some news any day now. Mr. Tuttle is in New York and with Richard Skinner is presenting Jose Ferrer in Thomas Brandon's farce "Charley's Aunt" at the Cort Theater Thursday, the seventeenth.

In case you're the kind that wonders who ever wins some of the "National Contests" that one forever reads about but never gets anything out of, there's a living proof in our midst that such folk really be. She's Ermene Kennedy who won second prize in the National jingle contest conducted by M.-G.-M. through the "Screen Forecast" booklets, distributed in the Loew theaters each year. Rudolph Berger, branch manager in Washington for M.-G.-M., presented her with a $60 check the other afternoon and there are pictures to prove it. Ars Gratia Artis?

WHEN THE PHONE RINGS: Helen Farrington, George Moore and a Mr. White: So glad you liked Mickey Rooney's column. It was swell of him to take the time to do it and if your friend would like to see the original that proves he wrote it himself, Mr. White, it's here in the office—whenever we are! The Cat Lady in the Interior Department: No one has seen the Willard Alley cat for some time, but N. B. B. will be glad you remembered. Albert Gale (or is it Gail, Mr. G?): In re. our conversation on vaudeville bills and the better repeaters, here's news of Marjorie Gainsworth, the golden-locked soprano in whom you share H. M.'s enthusiasm. Miss Gainsworth has been signed by the Shuberts for a lead in their musical version of the Lili Hatvany comedy, "Tonight or Never," which the boys from Syracuse are calling "Night of Love." Fred East: Don't despair of your songbook. N. B. B. will have something on it when he has those bugs licked. Unidentified caller: No, today's the last for "The Fugitive" at the Little. "The Lady Vanishes, succeeds it and will be previewed tonight.

And who should wing in yesterday but colorful Dr. Bernard Schultz, of Falls Church, regaling us with the news that The Villagers of his township will repeat their modern dress, modern English version of "Julius Caesar" Friday and Saturday evening in the Schultz garden. He was no end set up by a voluminous note from Orson Welles who admits even he was afraid to try the modern English angle. Rehearsal eavesdroppers could too easily suspect Fifth Column activity!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 23.

Gene Towne isn't superstitious, but he wouldn't finish "Little Men" on Friday the 13th. But cast and crew did go to Kay Francis' dinner party at Bob Murphy's. Everyone entertained, but Director Norman McLeod got the biggest hand—not just because he was the director, he really was the best. "Oomphy" Elsie and Beulah have already planed to New York. Gene leaves for that place late this month, where the national advertising clubs will award him a trophy for the Nation's greatest exploitation stunt in the past ten years.

HOPPER

People think you're kidding when you tell them how much space the cow got, but in the Glasgow (Scotland) Bulletin, in the midst of war-torn Europe, they headline: "Hollywood's New Star Eats Grass," and go on to say, "America, so surfeited with beauty queens, selected a cow named Elsie as the Nation's glamour cow." Took time out to describe her blanket and garland of buttercups, the fact that she was presented with the key to the city, and yet all Elsie ate was grass!

As a result of this stunt, Gene Towne has turned down a $300,000 a year job as exploitation head of a rival film company. And if his idea doesn't earn a medal of some kind from Hollywood, then you'll just know it's dead from the neck up and down, and showmanship has gone down the drain as a lost word.

If you care, Vic Mature placed what looks like a gold wedding ring on the finger of Lana Turner, and she did vice versa. No, I don't care, either!

When I asked Carole Lombard when she was going to do a picture with Clark, she said, 'Listen, Hopper, if you ever see us together in the same picture, you can bet that one of us is on the way out. We don't believe in mixing marriage with business."

Our young beauties are trying for dates with Artist McClelland Barclay, 'cause they've discovered he did a full-length painting of Anna Neagle in a week, and it ain't bad!.

Anna read me a letter from a 71-year-old aunt in London, who wrote after the first reel of "Irene" came an air raid. Audience rushed for shelter. The minute the "All Clear" siren came, everyone went back and finished looking at the picture. No other mention of war.

Bill Boyd, since that broken leg, will ride more than he walks in his next "Hopalong." He'll have to put on 15 pounds—or order a whole new wardrobe.

Orson Welles, after looking at the buxom lassies in his one dancing number for "Citizen Kane" (scene is laid in 1890), quipped: "Takes me back to my father's childhood."

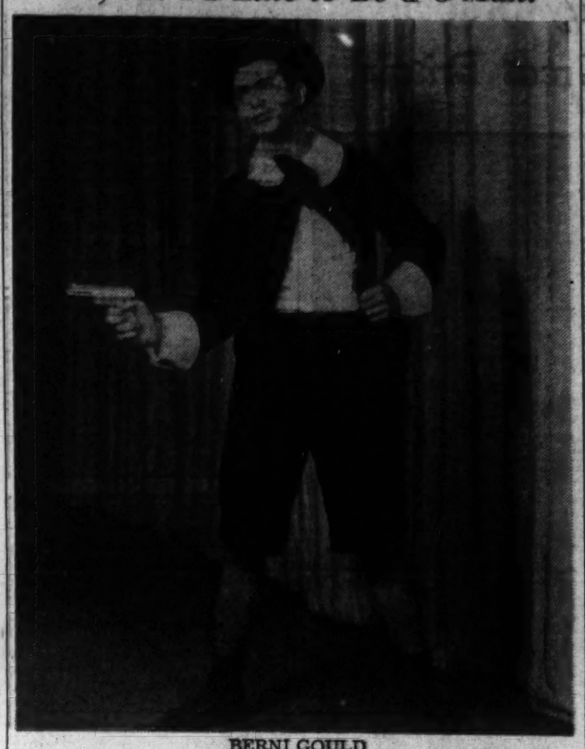
Said his assistant, "Didn't think you could remember anything as simple as that."

Eddie Albert occasionally referees fights at March Field. Recently he met a whole slough of captains, majors, etc., and after the fights went to the locker room where a major said to him, "You know, that fellow I met out there is Eddie Albert. Hes' in the movies. Nice chap, isn't he?"

"Yep," said Albert, "and funny, too—if you don't cross him up."

Medora Field, who wrote "Who Killed Aunt Maggie?" which is now being produced, was watching them shoot the picture at Republic when she received a letter from a friend in Atlanta which read: "Only hope your picture turns out as well as mine." Twas signed "Peggy"—"GWTW."

'Gee, but I'd Like to Be a G-Man!'



BERNI GOULD

"And Go Bang, Bang, Bang, Bang!" continues this comedian of "Pins and Needles," during his scene spoofing J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI in the satirical revue that opened the National's season last night after three years in New York. It's an all-new edition of the musical which played here two years ago

Well, you forgot your son's birthday, you forgot to pay your insurance, and you won't forget my allowance. NOW will you brag? . . . G'night."

LYONS

11 P. M.: "Bob Moses, chairman of the Long Island Park Commission, and Herbert Bayard Swope, vice-chairman of that commission, will battle each other in print every day until the election," an editor reports at Leone's. "On the Battle Page of Alicia Patterson's Long Island tabloid, Newsday, Moses will present the Republican side and Swope the Democratic" . . . "Well, I've been asked to play the William Saroyan role in 'White-Haired Boy,' the Kaufman-Martin show which is about me," William Saroyan informs at Sardi's. "I told 'em the part of William Saroyan isn't big enough for me" . . . "Yes, sometimes it gets confusing," Wilkie Mahoney, Buddy de Sylva's new writer, sighs at Moore's. "So just muss my hair—and don't call me Wilkie."

12 P. M., "Yes, I'm going to Minneapolis and Kansas and the rest of the Midwest," Sinclair Lewis affirms at Toots Shor's. "Every writer should go to that part of the country and learn what America's thinking about" . . . "This is my official golf handicap," Al Smith declares at Bill's Gay 90's. "I get one stroke a hole, drive from the Ladies' Tee, and I'm allowed to kick the ball out of the rough" . . . To the best of my knowledge," a Washington official states at the Mayan, "the President's appointments to the Communications Defense Commission will include Jim Fly, chairman of the FCC; Gen. Mauborgne and Admiral Noyes" . . . "When the transatlantic flying boat was christened the Yankee Clipper, Southern Congressmen wrote letters of objection," an airplane executive informs at the Barberry Room. "That's why the next one was called the Dixie Clipper."

1 A. M.: Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, suddenly starts hunting beneath her table at the Torch Club, and explains: "I've lost my purse." Her neighbors assist in the search, and Phillips Holmes finds it . . . "Thank you, Mr. Holmes," Mrs. Rogers tells him. "Isn't your first name Sherlock?" . . . "Jerome Weidman's new book, 'Letter of Credit,' will be published by Simon & Schuster, for whom he works," a publisher reports at Lum Fong's. "Weidman felt uneasy about promoting his own book. So Schuster told him: 'We don't want you to lean over backward or lean forward—but just to stand up straight'" . . . "Have you heard this story?" a director relates at the Hurricane. "When Poland was lost, a man found that his house was directly on the new border—half in Germany and the other half in Russia. He was asked to choose which side he wanted to live on, and he said: "Well, I hear the winters are very cold in Russia."

3 A. M.: "The Guild is pondering over a new advertising stunt for its production of 'Twelfth Night,' with Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans," a Guild employe states at the Swing Club. "They're thinking of advertising: The Theater Guild presents Helen Hayes in 'Twelfth Night,' by William Shakespeare—'All This and Evans Too'" . . . "No, no, I dont think I will have a play on Broadway this season," Henry Bernstein, the French playwright, laments at the Cafe Pierre. "Look what's happening in the world. So how can I think about a play?" . . . Jack Gould, of the New York Times, phones the Beachcomber and asks if Lawrence Tibbett is here. "Be more specific," the manager replies. "Which Tibbett—Senior or Junior?" . . . "I spoke to George Abbott a short time ago," an agent reports at the 18 Club. "He said he's considering remaking 'Room Service,' the Marx Bros.' movie adapted from the play he presented on Broadway."

4 A. M.: "At 3 o'clock I stood on line at the Jolson show and asked to buy tickets," Eddie Davis, author of that show, states at Leon & Eddie's. "Thhe box-office man said: 'Sorry, all sold out.' I went back to the end of the line, waited my turn and again he said: 'Sorry, all sold out.' Then I went around the block, again waited on line, at the box-office man said: 'Sorry, sold out. Hey, didn't I tell you that before?' I told him: 'Yes—but I wrote this show, and I just love to hear you say the words: 'All sold out'" . . . "John Golden wants Katharine Cornell to play in Somerset Maugham's 'Theater,'" a producer declares at the Kit Kat Klub. "Guy Bolton is adapting it" . . . "In the plane which brought Elliott Roosevelt to New York," a passenger informs at the Havana-Madrid, "he found Willkie buttons in all the plane folders."

6 A. M.: "Good morning, dear—and why are you home so late? . . . What? . . . You went to a preview of 'City for Conquest' . . . And you suddenly feel a kinship with Ann Sheridan? . . . I don't see any kinship between a pretty star and a columnist. She's got 'Oomph'—and you've got 'Pheh.'"

'Pins-Needles' Sews Stitches At the National

Long-Run Musical Satire Opens Capital's Legitimate Season

By Richard L. Coe

In our redoubtable day it is curiously significant that "New Pins and Needles" should be the first attraction of the National Theater's 105th consecutive season. A far better revue than the edition our town saw nearly two years ago, its ruthless wit, sparkling music and zestful players had last evening's first nighters frequently in stitches and, to complete an unpardonable allusion, sewed E street's opening week in the bag.

First thing to its credit is that "New" in the title. It actually is new, all but one number, the charming "Sunday in the Park," still as tuneful a production scene as ever breezed into any recent second act. Secondly, there is the able performing of a company which evidently has worked patiently at its avocation, resulting chiefly in three splendid performers, Harry Clark, Berni Gould and Jean Nicata.

What Washington roared at most last night were the cruel pin points of some who are regarded as "national" figures. There are Senator Reynolds, "the goose-stepping pixie from down in Dixie;" three blue-blooded D. A. R. girls in "The Red Mikado;" and Mama Green and Papa Lewis, "Mama don't love papa anymore."

Numbers Effectively Sung

Better still, the boys and girls of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have learned to sing. They opened their mouths, shout lustily, remain on pitch and offer a thrilling song in the first act, "Mene, Mene, Tekel," an electrifying number expertly led by Dorothy Harrison apparently a next best chanter to Ethel Waters.

Because it has no traffic for the middle of the road man who would please everyone (one of its sketches, a take-off on radio programming, vows that), it's best to warn you that to enjoy "Pins and Needles" completely, you either should admit a preference for the New Deal (strong one!) or else possess an impregnable sense of humor. There's no half-way measure, for instance, in the skit, "What This Party Needs," set in Republican headquarters which still mold in the dust of 1932. The New Dealers in the House can be seen dancing in the aisles, while the Old Guard will doubtless come creeping back to the theater later in the week, old tomatoes and experienced eggs ahidin 'neath the chinchilla and waistcoats.

Comedy Sharp and Bitter

The aforementioned "Mene, Mene, Tekel" is the musical show-stopper ingeniously staged and brightened by brilliant coordination of chorus and pianos.

But for tops in the comic field there are two supreme show-stoppers. The miniature Gilbert and Sullivan slander, "The Red Mikado" switches the Tit-willow lyric to read like this in the words of a self-sufficient man:

"Just as long as conscription means men and not plants
And war orders roll in and the profits advance
To hell with the country, we'll end up in France,
I'm willing, I'm willing, I'm willing."

And in the honored spot, next to closing, there are "The Harmony Boys," Fritz Kuhn, Father Coughlin and Senator Reynolds:

"We're the harmony boys from demagogue lane
Come get on board our gospel train
Look us over folks, and take your pick
We sell baloney and we slice it thick!"

As you can see, "New Pins and Needles" is no respecter of persons—except New Dealers and a Union Man—and it aims its poisoned arrows keenly. But above all, it's immensely bright and witty and if you relish intelligent humor and tuneful music you can't go wrong on "New Pins and Needles."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 23 (INS).—Over the week-end Irene Dunne signed to play the fabulous feminine lead in "Mr. Skeffington" at Warners—and if ever there was a story that kept me burning the lamps far into the morning it is this novel by Elizabeth. So far the book has sold 155,000 copies, and if you haven't read it, let me add that it is a fascinating yarn about an older woman, restless in her marriage, who tries to relive the romances of her youth by looking up her old beaux.

PARSONS

The picture will not only show Irene as the unhappy matron, but will flash back to her youth, so the Dunne fans needn't worry that their favorite won't be her usual charming screen self most of the time. No sooner had Jack Warner closed the deal with Irene than he assigned Edmund Goulding to direct, and I can't think of anyone who does these women's stories better than Eddie.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Roz Russell no more than got back from being bridesmaid at her sister's wedding before she was recruited to stand up with her secretary, Virginia Russell (no relation), who marries Airplane Pilot Robert Muller October 5; looks like the Ann Miller-Maurice Weinzelbaum romance is off because it's Sam Gorman who flies out from Kansas City to see her every week-end now; Natalie Draper and Tony Martin informed candid cameramen they aren't a new romance when they dined together at Ciro's; Burgess Meredith and Elizabeth Earle a new duet; Mrs. Mischa Auer, whose parting from Mischa was a shock just before I left Hollywood, is conga-ing with a handsome escort who refused to give his name. Wayne Morris, also recently estranged from his wife, wouldn't give the name of the pretty brunette he was with at Slapsie Maxie's, either. Something new—these mystery romances.

Desi Arnaz's show closes in Chicago Saturday and he is heading back to Hollywood and Lucille Ball; Maurine O'Hara has lost 18 pounds.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Hurt First Day of School

POLICE radios signaled all cars:

"8:30—Traffic is now at its peak . . . Give special attention to traffic conditions . . . and most important to school children at all street intersections in the vicinity of schools."

The summer vacation was gone. Jackie Tyler, six, of 216 E street northwest, was out of bed, his face washed, his hair combed and off to the first grade of Seaton school. The school authorities, swamped by children pouring in off the streets to school, had their time of it, too. There were reassignments to be made. Jackie was sent to Gales school, 202 I street northwest.

The police radios signaled at 11:45 a. m.

"Attention all police cars: At 12 noon today is the recess period at all schools. Give special attention to the safety of children.

Jackie was getting hungry. He started for home. He didn't know that his mother, Mrs. John Tyler, was waiting at Seaton School with his lunch. At the corner of Second street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, Jackie started across the street. The next thing he knew he was hurt—and running.

Sam Miller, 28, of 1307 Walsh Place northwest, the driver of the car that struck Jackie, leaped out and began chasing the running boy. Catching Jackie, Miller carried him to the office of Dr. Levitt, 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Dr. Levitt treated the child for lacerations and shock, then sent him home—the end of Jackie's first day at school this year.

At 2:45 p. m. the police radios signaled:

Attention all police cars: Three p. m. today is the closing hour for all schools and a large number of school children will be on the streets. Be on the alert for these boys and girls . . ."

Jackie was confined to his bed when this last signal was given. His was the first traffic accident of the new school year.

'Father' Jelleff's Birthday

FRANK R. JELLEFF, Washington merchant and philanthropist, was presented with a portrait of himself and a 100-pound cake by the employes and executives of his firm at a birthday celebration yesterday in the store's Little Theater.

The portrait, which was painted by John C. Johansen, will be hung in the store. It was presented to Jelleff by Miss Margaret Gollan, vice president of the store.

Known as "Father" to most of his employes, Jelleff has taken an active part in civic activities. He was one of the founders of the first Washington Boys Club and served as president of the board of directors for 20 years.

A member of the District Parole Board, he served for some years on the board of the Industrial Home School. Other organizations of which he is or has been an officer include the Red Cross, Community Chest, Group Hospitalization, Washington Housing Association, Criminal Justice Association and the National Symphony Orchestra.

JELLEFF CUTS 100-POUND BIRTHDAY CAKE

The portrait was selected as a gift because of Jelleff's great interest in art, Miss Ruth Ohlsson, one of the store's executives, explained. He took an active part in the Independent Artists Club several years ago and set up a miniature gallery in the Little Theater of the store.

Responsible in large part for the building of the Boys Clubs model house at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast, Jelleff recently was elected chairman of the Boys Club's board of directors.

Hero Of Hillsborough

Americans in all parts of the country are rejoicing with the family of the 3-year-old Marc de Tristan over the thrilling denouement of a potentially horrible crime. The child is once more safe in his home. His abductor is in the hands of the law. One of the most daring and sensational kidnaping cases in recent history has come to a remarkably happy ending.

Every element of intense drama was packed into the theft of the child from his nurse, the flight of the abductor, the plunging of the kidnap automobile over a 40-foot embankment and the fight which left the child in the care of a heroic Western lumberman. Once more fact has proved to be, not necessarily stranger than fiction, but more exciting and melodramatic. The story has all the rich flavor of the frontier West which is supposed to have passed into history.

Hillsborough, Calif., made the child's homecoming an occasion for widespread celebration and rejoicing. In part that demonstration was probably due to the emotional reaction of seeing a youngster whose life had been in grave danger restored safely to his mother. No doubt it also reflected general satisfaction over the capture of the inhuman alien who attempted to enrich himself by threatening death to an innocent 3-year-old.

But there is still another reason for elation over the outcome of this plot. It did not develop into a complex battle of wits between expert law-enforcement officers and a criminal gang. It was an intelligent and courageous sawmill owner, Cecil Wetzel, who discovered the child in the abductor's stolen car, who ignored the revolver drawn on him and fought with the kidnaper to save the youngster's life.

That sort of rugged and fearless character has become all too rare in recent years. A more sophisticated citizen of the twentieth century might have shrugged his shoulders and expressed the opinion that enforcement of the law is the responsibility of the sheriff or the FBI. The lumberman did not hesitate to risk his life to save another.

The detailed tasks of law enforcement must necessarily be left to specially trained and authorized officers. Yet it is good to know that in emergencies of this sort men are still willing to strike a blow for decency without calculating the probable risk to themselves. There is a fine quality in the character of Cecil Wetzel of which the Nation has great need.

Mr. Willkie On Power

In discussing the supposed electric power issue at Portland, Oreg., Wendell L. Willkie took the position that most sensible and public-spirited citizens take. He analyzed the problem and stated his position with the detachment of a man who has never had any association with the utilities.

Mr. Willkie points out that the Government has invested large sums in power and irrigation dams. It would be an inexcusable waste of public funds to let those great projects remain uncompleted. When they are finished, says Mr. Willkie, the power should be distributed in the public interest at the lowest possible rates.

The people of the cities and towns should decide for themselves whether they wish to be served by public or private transmission facilities. If public agencies are favored, he says, appropriate machinery should be set up to determine what is a fair price to be paid for existing private systems in the area.

That simple policy seems to dispose of any "utilities" issue in the campaign. Mr. Willkie suggests only that the issue of public versus private power distribution be decided by the democratic method and that existing companies be fairly dealt with. It is difficult to see how there can be any dissent on those points.

The effect of this straight-forward statement should be to center future electioneering on the more basic issues of the 1940 campaign.

Not Yet Complete

Congress appears determined to adjourn at the end of this week, regardless of whether its legislative work can be completed by that time. Now that the major defense bills are on the statute books or very close to enactment, there is a disposition to drop all other legislation in favor of last-minute political campaigning.

The desire of Congressmen to return to their home districts for a few weeks before election day is understandable. All members of the House and one-third of the Senate must obtain a new mandate if they are to continue in Congress. Most of them face opposition. Indeed, a number of Senators and Representatives who have faithfully remained in Washington to speed the enactment of defense bills have been defeated in the primaries by opponents with more time for campaigning.

So there is nothing strange about the impatience of many legislators to bring the Seventy-sixth Congress to a final adjournment. Every Congressman should have time to make his report to his home district and to lay his case for reelection before the voters. That is an essential part of our democratic system.

Yet every legislator ought to realize that his presence on Capitol Hill in recent months has not been a complete loss from the political viewpoint. Members of both the Senate and House have had the privilege of rendering a great national service in a period when confusion and fears for the national safety have been widespread. Certainly their presence in Washington during this emergency has given them a much better standing with the voters than they could have attained by deserting their posts for the hustings.

In other words, Congress has won the respect and confidence of the people by remaining on the job to set in motion a huge defense program. In that respect it has shown much better judgment than did President Roosevelt when he invited Congress to adjourn last June. And it will win still further commendation if it now stays in session until its most pressing tasks are completed.

It is taken for granted that the excess-profits tax bill and appropriations to put the draft into effect will be approved before adjournment. But several other measures should be included in this list. Among them are the Ramspeck bill to bring 150,000 additional Federal employes into the civil service system and the bill to reorganize the District government. Should either of these measures fail, an enormous amount of work would have to be done over again next year.

The case for enactment of the Walter-Logan bill at this time is not so clear. Here again much time and effort will be sacrificed if the bill fails, but it is a far more complicated measure than the local reorganization and civil service bills. The chief question is whether the Senate is willing to give administrative procedure and judicial review of administrative decisions the thoughtful and extended consideration those subjects should have.

It is especially strange that Senate leaders should be planning adjournment without making an effort to clear up the confusion surrounding the National Labor Relations Board. Smooth working relations between employers and employes are a first essential to a successful rearmament program. Yet the Senate has done nothing to relieve industry from unnecessary handicaps resulting from this measure.

Prof. Sumner H. Slichter, of Harvard, recently pointed out that an airplane manufacturer must deal "in good faith" with Communists or other foreign agents if they happen to be chosen to represent his employes. It is well known that employers complying with the act may have their production schedules interrupted by boycotts and strikes by minority groups seeking to prevent collective bargaining by the majority.

The legislative background for a successful defense program will not be complete until the grave defects in the Labor Relations Act have been corrected.

A Dastardly Act

Americans will unanimously agree with Secretary of State Hull in branding the torpedoing of a British ship bringing children and other war refugees to Canada as a "most dastardly act."

There were 406 persons aboard that ill-fated vessel—215 members of the crew and 191 passengers. Only 113 survived, the lives of 83 of the 90 children on the ship being lost.

The disaster brings home the grim plight in which the parents of British children find themselves. If they keep their children at home, the latter face the terrors of indiscriminate bombing by German planes which for 17 successive days and nights have raided London and other British centers. To send the children out of the country means subjecting them to the risk of U-boat Schrecklichkeit.

It is difficult to see what military ends are served by such terroristic tactics as the sinking of this British refugee ship with the loss of more than two-thirds of the passengers and crew. Fortunately, the thorough precautions which the British have taken to guard passenger ships crossing the Atlantic have prevented many such tragedies. But last week's disaster shows that even the most elaborate of precautions are not enough.

In waging war, whether on land or sea, the Nazi have only contempt for the dictates of humanitarianism.

Rome Blueprints

Hitler's anticipated victory over Great Britain is far from being won. Mussolini's dream of eliminating the British from Egypt and the Mediterranean is still a long way from accomplishment. But the Axis powers are letting it be known that they are already drawing up the blueprints for a grandiose new order in Europe, Africa and the Near East. Indeed, we are told that this was the chief purpose of Joachim von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome.

This inspired report may or may not be true. The question nonetheless arises why Germany and Italy have found it necessary at this time publicly to count chickens that have not yet been hatched.

Was it, by a show of confidence in their certain and speedy triumph, to keep Egypt from becoming a full-fledged belligerent? Was it to bring Greece, Yugoslavia and Turkey into line and persuade a reluctant and war-weary Spain that military cooperation with the Axis would have its real rewards when African territory now belonging to Great Britain and France comes to be parceled out? Perhaps. But no full dress conference between the German foreign minister and the Italian premier and foreign minister was needed to set the stage for such efforts.

Nor was the Rome parley essential if, as is now widely believed, the center of the war stage is to be shifted from Britain to Egypt. It is possible for Germany to help Italy in her efforts to reach the Suez Canal without making any fuss over it.

The fact that a fuss is being made over what the Axis now plans to do suggests that the Rome meeting was primarily intended to divert public opinion in Germany and Italy from the reality of Britain's continued and successful resistance at home and in the Middle East.

That reality must be unpleasant to the Germans. Three months have elapsed since the fall of France which they regarded as the beginning of the end of the war. But England remains uninvaded and the fearful punishment which London and other British centers have received have failed to break the magnificent spirit of the British people. Now Germany faces the unpleasant prospect of having the war, with all its attendant uncertainties and dangers, extended into the winter. That prospect is particularly uninviting to the Italians. For Italy went into the war on a shoestring. Her staying capacity is limited.

The totalitarian powers cannot stand still. Cheated of their hope of an early victory over Britain, they must find at least partial compensation by triumphs over easier victims. Unable to storm the major citadel blocking their path to a total victory, they now find it necessary to reverse the direction of their attack.

There is no question that a combined assault on the British position in Egypt and the eastern Mediterranean would, if successful, be enormously valuable to the Axis. But such a victory cannot be won overnight. In the meantime, Hitler and Mussolini must persuade their harassed subjects that in broadening the sphere of conflict they are paving the way for an even greater triumph than had been previously anticipated.

The people of this country are now building millions of homes not to stay at.

A number of public figures who are getting a hand should be getting a foot.

Harvest Time Romance

From The Montgomery Advertiser.

Autumn is just as romantic as spring but in a different way. Spring brings contradictory urges to do new things, explore new places, and enjoy new sensations and to do nothing at the same time. That is romantic, for what is romance but highly enjoyable leisure? Autumn is a looking backward time. Things that were pleasant when they happened are doubly pleasant when remembered at leisure. The rough edges of reality always disappear when the stream of life rolls a stone a bit. That is romantic too.

There must be some strange vegetable atavism in the human mind that causes these moods to come with celestial regularity. The cycle of the inanimate life of this planet presents a stark parallel to the seasonal moods of the animal minds of low and high order . . .

Autumn, like spring, has its contradictions. The urge to relax and remember things past is companion to a restless urge to get work done before winter brings an end to nature's cycle of fruition. The harvest season is a good working time as well as a good resting time.

True Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with piquant delight the fine letter on "Democracy and Football" written to you by E. B. Henderson and published in The Post of September 20.

I agree with him to the extent that the setting, so far as the audience was concerned, was ideal and puts to shame Christian forces in this city which foster racial discrimination. However, I disagree with him when he states that "in this setting we have democracy at its best." Democracy will be at its best only when you can look down upon the playing field and see Jew and Gentile, black and white, playing side by side.

When we can witness that spectacle, we will have reached a level of democracy of which we will be proud.

Land Of The Free

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ever since identification by compulsion became a national institution in the land of economic blight, Communist Russia, the Russian masses have been forced to squirm under the heel of the most ruthless political dictatorship in all history.

In this critical period in which there is so much talk of an impending American political dictatorship, the American people should not lose sight of the fact that where there is no identification by compulsion, there is no political O. G. P. U.; where there's no O. G. P. U., there is no dictatorship; where there's no dictatorship, there's no such thing as stifled economic opportunity.

Anti-Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because I exercised the right of an American citizen to publish in a paper a carefully prepared article setting forth why I am opposed to Franklin D. Roosevelt or any other man serving more than two terms as President of the United States, I am the recipient of an abusive communication from a person who represents himself as a "laboring man" and a "Roosevelt third-termer."

The communication is not only abusive of me personally, but equally so toward ministers of all creeds. As to being a "laboring man," I, too, have labored hard my whole life, being known in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas as the "working parson." Afflicted with almost total blindness from boyhood to manhood, I read "Les Miserables" and Dickens' works first by the light of boiler fires and brick kilns.

Now in my sixty-eighth year and my strength mostly gone, I am stronger for the Constitution and traditional Americanism than ever before; and no stronger proof is needed of the fact that the policy of the present Administration is undermining and threatening the destruction of the fundamental philosophy of American politics than the spirit manifested by such misguided creatures as the one above referred to.

Subscribes To "Union Now" Proposal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: United we stand, divided we fall. That is just as true this very moment as it was when first pronounced. For once again America is put to the test, perhaps as never before. As the Battle of Britain intensifies, it becomes more apparent that the decision may well depend upon the speed with which we are able to supply our friends with necessary war materials, most especially planes. Nor can we delay in expanding all branches of our armed forces and getting them so well equipped they will constitute the finest battle array ever created. So it is imperative that the Nation exercise its full strength, which means that its power, as expressed in terms of human energy, must be efficiently estimated and thoroughly and proficiently organized.

How can America best serve democracy? Shall we join in arms, now, with the British democracies, or wait to see whether they can be broken? How long could we brave, alone, the storm of aggression? A British defeat would act as a potent stimulant to the dictators, whetting their lust for still further conquest.

But even though Great Britain, with the help of our industries, should eventually win out, imagine the state of the world we would have to inhabit. It would be bankrupt, to begin with, and the resulting depression would make this last one seem, in comparison, a tranquil period indeed. Furthermore, we would have no assurance against constantly recurring wars and disruptions to trade. Certainly we could not expect to find security in another League of Nations, with leaders always at cross purposes.

Yet, thanks to the genius of Mr. Clarence K. Streit, a splendid, powerful and timely gesture has grown out of the ideal from which also sprouted the league, but which, happily, gives every promise of a larger and wider future. And in the work of humanity through all the ages, can we point to anything permanent that is not founded on idealism?

Mr. Streit would have us invite Britain, Eire, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand to sign with us, at once, a Declaration of Inter-Dependence. It would reaffirm all the old principles of freedom. It would set up a provisional union government—an Inter-Continental Congress—and give to it the same powers to make war and peace as had our Continental Congress.

In the Federal Union of Democracies, representation would be proportioned to self-governing population; hence, instead of the British having a 6-to-1 vote in this congress, the United States would enjoy a majority. While the democracies were fighting as a unit in their struggle for freedom, they would agree upon a permanent constitution, broadly modeled upon our American precedent. It would be open to all the other democracies, notably the eight now imprisoned when they should again become free.

The British Commonwealth and America, of course, are already united by many ties of kinship, language, tradition, institutions and the aspirations of a sane and progressive idealism. They are equally democratic in method and in purpose and the differences in form are not substantial. It has often been said: "The United States is a monarchy with an elective king and Britain is a republic with an hereditary president." As the centuries unrolled, the prerogatives of the crown, exercised by, and under, the direction and control of Parliament became the liberties of the people. Custom and convention, which figure so largely in this remarkable but inevitable change, have also profoundly modified our own Constitution and point the way to a rational union between these two great democracies.

Mr. Willkie's "Build-Up"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ernest K. Lindley, who, in my opinion, is one of the most astute political analysts in the country, recently had a column in The Post with regard to the apparent downward trend in the public appeal of Mr. Wendell L. Willkie. Since that time the subject, "What's wrong with Willkie," has been discussed widely and in dead earnest.

Personally, I do not think there is anything wrong with Mr. Willkie—that is, nothing new. He is still the same personally attractive big-businessman from Wall Street; the same temperamental, argumentative, corporation lawyer with a tendency to quick, exaggerated and thoughtless statements. No, Mr. Willkie hasn't changed one bit.

The thing that is wrong, however—and unfair to both Mr. Willkie and to the general public—is the "doctored" sugar-and-honey thrust down the people's throats. Indigestion has now set in, and the "doctors" have exhausted their supply of trumped-up "medicine." In other words, the build-up has sprung leaks, and every time Mr. Willkie makes an address, new leaks appear in his political horizon and the old ones grow deeper and wider.

It is difficult to take a man out of Wall Street and transplant him in the Midwest on a farm as an overgrown barefoot boy. Since Mr. Willkie is not, cannot be, and never has been what the newspapers have claimed, how can we expect his once-admiring public not to become disturbed and alarmed?

In 1936 the same newspapers attempted in the same despicable way to force the good-natured Mr. Landon down our throats, but the public refused then as it refuses now to be misled for long. The anti-Roosevelt newspapers began an undertaking that is simply too ponderous; or perhaps they are falling down on their "interference," hoping that Mr. Willkie can carry the ball up to November 5 without fumbling. The possibility looks remote.

The President On Dates

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President, addressing the University of Pennsylvania, said: "I am very happy in the present University of Pennsylvania. I cannot say I am wholly happy that the founders of the university chose the year 1740. It might have had that great attribute, which I have so long sought, of looking ahead and planning. They would have founded the university in 1739 lest the 200th anniversary should fall in an election year. Thereby, I, at least, would have been saved much embarrassment, and what I have to say today I might have written as readily and easily in the autumn of '39."

It is noticeable that the President did not suggest the year 1741 for the founding of this great university. It might also be suggested that the date could be changed by decree, like Thanksgiving.

On Popular Appeal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Until I saw the two pictures which decorate the front page of The Post of September 20, I wondered why such large crowds have assembled to see Wendell Willkie. In the same issue your make-up man shows a keen sense of humor by placing in parallel columns the spiel by the Republican leader and the Gallup Poll, showing 38 States for Roosevelt.

I'll bet a doughnut against the hole in another doughnut that nearly all of the other ten States will swing into line by September 5, and one more egotistical individual will join the ranks of forgotten men.

The Post Impressionist

Photogenic

"PHOTOGRAPHY in Washington is democratic and versatile. It is still possible to be photographed formally in studios, but one may also be photographed informally against a real-life background."

This is Cousin Virgil's statement, and he ought to know!

His is the case of the worm which stepped on the man, the germ which experimented on the scientist. Cousin Virgil who was heretofore the photographer is at long last the photographee. To be more explicit, I shall say that for years he has photographed dewy-eyed brides, graduating classes and protesting babies. His first day in Washington was spent at a shop where he could revel in new photographic doodads.

Suddenly, he went off on a tangent. He decided that it was time for him to get on the receiving end of the camera. He had calmly posed trembling subjects who would have preferred to have all their teeth yanked rather than to face the cruel lens which would depict their facial conformations for a cynical world. Now retribution came in acute fright because this time it was his own "pan" that was going to be mapped for contemporaries and preserved for posterity.

On the morning of his ordeal, he crept around like a man sentenced to a Nazi concentration camp. I suffered for him. "If you hate it that badly, there really is no law that will compel a photographer to be photographed," I said. He replied that if he returned from the metropolis to his native heath without a specimen of the latest achievements of the camera, he would be rated a slacker by his fellow artists back home. I tried to divert him by describing some of Mr. Coolidge's adventures with the camera, in which Mr. Coolidge ineptly held the family pitchfork or hid under a ten-gallon hat, but Virgil was not amused.

IT WAS LATE that night when Virgil returned. To my surprise, he came back, not upon his shield, as they say, but with head up and eyes flashing, the conquering hero if I ever saw one. He displayed a collection of tickets, stubs and coupons which he gladly explained to me in detail. As he was slinking down one of our boulevards, he said, dreading this ordeal worse than death, he saw a young fellow just ahead who had a "thing" slung around his neck on a strap and who was pointing this machine at him. He reads a lot of "pulp" fiction in winter nights back home, and so at first he thought he was observing gangsterism at first hand. However, before Virgil could yell for help, the polite young fellow handed him a coupon which was numbered and which contained an explanation of the incident. After he had read it, Virgil spoke.

"Young fellow, do you mean to tell me that I have had my picture took?"

It was explained to him that this is a common practice in our city. It confers upon the subject the benefit of seeing himself in action against a background of real life, a part of the seething metropolis, doubtless on his way to an important conference. Virgil began to feel himself swell with pride. With no intent to deceive in his honest soul, it would not be his fault if the folks back home should think of him as acting in an advisory capacity on national defense.

"Are you allowed to do it again, young man?" Virgil asked.

The young man repeated his candid camera shots, and that accounts for six of the coupons, Virgil explained. He also told Virgil that he reminded him of pictures of Mark Twain, and Virgil thought he must be sure to repeat that back home. The young man then put him wise to the fact that he could be photographed painlessly against many imposing backgrounds in other parts of the city. From the number of the coupons, Virgil appears to have tried them all.

He explained that one coupon is for a picture taken in a certain distinguished portico and beside a well-known official car. The photographer posed Virgil hastily lest the official occupant arrive, but Virgil hopes the shot will turn out all right. If a wrong impression is given at home, Virgil feels blameless. The next coupon calls for tintypes. Virgil, with hat tilted at a debonair angle and carnation in lapel, should rival the tintype of Grandpa at the Centennial.

VIRGIL yearned for more of the splendid Washington backgrounds. During his tour, he was photographed with palms, fountains, monuments and cherry trees, with cold classical columns and with warm tropical blossoms. He made friends with a young marine who took him to one of those galleries where recruits like to congregate, posing for photographs which they send to sweethearts and wives and others. Virgil posed with sabers and revolvers, with sawed-off shotguns and machine guns, with tanks, heavy and light artillery, with bombing and pursuit planes.

Later in the day he went to the Zoo. By this time, his swollen ego knew no limits. Nothing less than to be photographed beside the "King of Beasts" would satisfy his ambition. He says that at one time he had hoped to be a missionary or an explorer, and since fate had deprived him of the acquaintance of lions in their native habitat, it is only fair that he should perpetuate his youthful ambition pictorially. In this picture, he modestly tries to put over the idea that with his glittering eye he can reduce fierce jungle beasts to a quivering jelly.

As he explained his last coupon to me, the doorbell rang. Virgil leaped into action. This was the climax of his day.

On the step, ready for his professional appointment with Virgil, was a person well known in the streets of our city. It was the itinerant photographer with the fat little spotted pony.

Text of Willkie's Seattle Speech

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 23.—Following is the text of the speech of Wendell L. Willkie:

In 1932, Candidate Roosevelt said that our Number One problem was jobs. He was right that time. In 1936 when Mr. Roosevelt was again a candidate, our Number One problem was still jobs.

And now, in 1940, Mr. Roosevelt is still a candidate—and our Number One domestic problem is still jobs.

The only difference is that today, Candidate Roosevelt is no longer talking about that subject. Some time back, the New Dealers gave up talking about jobs and just talked about unemployment.

According to no less an authority than Harry Hopkins, a large number of our people will always be out of work.

That proposition I totally reject. But I am not going to talk about unemployment tonight. I came here to talk about the cure for unemployment. I came here to talk about jobs.

Two Ways to Find Work

Now, there are two ways for people to find work; one way is for them to work for themselves. Most farmers, many retail store operators, service station keepers and other small-business men have that kind of job. The other way to get work is to find an employer who will hire you. Most of us Americans would like ultimately to go in business for ourselves; to be our own employers. But we can't all do that. Even if we are ultimately able to work for ourselves, we have to start by working for somebody else. So, for most of us, getting a job means simply finding an employer. Now, there are two kinds of employer systems in the world, and only two.

Under one system, almost all of the people work for private employers. That is the system we have in democratic countries.

Under the other system, almost all of the people work for one employer, namely, the state. That is the case in Russia, and in effect, in Germany and the other dictator countries.

Under a dictatorship there need never be any unemployment. The state tells you what you must do, where you must do it, and how you must do it. You are sent away from home to work in the fields, or to build fortifications, or to dig in the mines, or to do anything else you are told. You have a job under those conditions, but for that job you have paid an intolerable price. You have bought that job with your freedom.

We in America have made our decision with regard to that issue. We want to work for and with private employers to find new ways of creating jobs. And we believe in the freedom of the workers to take whatever jobs they want—whatever jobs provide them with the most worthwhile life and the most hopeful opportunities.

That is the system I stand for. And if, you elect me President, that is the system you will get.

The Fatal Error

Now let us look a little more closely at the problems facing those of us who work for employers in a free enterprise system.

I want to be frank about these problems and very specific.

To begin with, I think we must be careful not to dramatize these problems in a purely political way. By that I mean that we must not fall into the error—the fatal error—of believing that one political party is for labor, and the other not. I think my speeches and writings put me on record as being willing to give credit wherever credit is due. But if there is one kind of person more dangerous to our democracy than another, it is the smooth politician who claims everything for his side and grants nothing to the other side.

For instance, take the National Labor Relations Act. When it was passed, this act was long overdue. America lagged behind every progressive nation in the world in protecting the fundamental rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively. But the New Deal has issued tons of propaganda to claim exclusive credit for that act. Whereas in reality the National Labor Relations Act was modeled closely on the Railway Labor Act of 1926 which was passed by a Republican administration.

Now let me tell you straight from the shoulder. I stand for every one of the social gains that labor has made. I stand for the National Labor Relations Act and the right of free collective bargaining. I stand for minimum wages and maximum hours, and for legislation to enforce them. I stand for social security benefits and believe that they should be extended to other groups who do not yet enjoy them. I believe that we should be insured against unemployment, and that our old age should be protected by adequate pensions.

These are minimum guarantees. They are minimum standards below which society dare not fall. No American can contemplate the future with an easy mind or an easy conscience unless he can see in that future a society willing and able to provide its workers with at least that much protection.

Now if the New Deal wants to claim credit for those minimum safeguards, I say let it have just as much as it deserves. I don't care how much credit the New Deal claims, because I know, and the record shows, that the New Deal has let labor down.

As indispensable as it may be, the Wages and Hours Act does not make jobs. And the right to collective bargaining, fundamental as it is, does not do any good to the man who has no job to bargain about.

An administration that wants to do something for labor must go much further than minumum guarantees. Such an administration, while protecting labor's rights, must make jobs, and jobs, and jobs.

Now perhaps some of you who have jobs may say:

"What has this got to do with me? I have a good job. I am all right. Let the other fellow who can't find a job go on relief. Let the Government take care of him."

Promises to Keep Relief

Now in the first place, let me say, yes, that is all right. We have relief, and we are going to keep relief. I give you that pledge. If I am President of the United States and you by some misfortune happen to lose your job, you will get relief.

But that is not enough. If you lost your job tomorrow you wouldn't want to go on relief if you could help it. You would go out looking for another job—a real American job, real work, earning real wages. But could you find that job today? Nine million six hundred thousand persons haven't been able to.

And the reason I am undertaking this campaign is because I want every man and woman in this country to find a job if he or she wants one. I want that just as much as you do, because I have given my pledge to labor, that I know what makes jobs and that I will get them for you.

And in the second place, with regard to this matter of relief, it would be shortsighted for those who have jobs to say that they are not interested in the unemployed. You are making the mistake of your lives if you think that just because you have a job, you do not have to be concerned about the millions of your fellow citizens who are looking for jobs.

There are three chief reasons why American workers should fear the continuation of unemployment.

First, there are 9,600,00 persons out of work today, which means that there are 9,600,00 persons looking for your job.

Secondly, ours is an expanding population. More than 500,000 new workers come to maturity each year. More than 500,000 young people are turned out of schools to look for new jobs that do not exist. If these young people have no place to go, they will be out looking for your job, too. And the next year there will be another 500,00 of them.

Average Income Is $540

But thirdly—and this is the most dangerous fact about unemployment—it is absolutely impossible for a government to go on supporting a growing number of unemployed. Somebody has to pay the bill. And don't kid yourselves—that bill is being paid by those of you who have jobs. The average income per individual in the United States last year was only $540; the average tax paid per individual was $110. One-fifth of our national income goes for taxes. And the biggest single item on the tax bill, aside from defense, is relief for the unemployed.

Of course, the New Deal has found an easy method of paying for that big relief bill. Your taxes don't anywhere near cover it, so the New Deal borrows the money. In 7½ years it has borrowed about 22 billion dollars. And you all know that this can't go on indefinitely. If we go on living beyond our income, there is bound to be a collapse—a collapse that will drag down not only the precious rights of labor and all the social gains you have made, but also your jobs, your opportunities and your hopes for the future.

The one and only remedy for this increasing Government debt, the one and only safeguard for your rights and your opportunities, is jobs, and jobs, and jobs.

Now what makes a job? That is a forthright question and it deserves a forthright answer.

Business makes jobs—little business, big business, corporations, partnerships, and small companies. Under our system, if we are going to have jobs we must have employers. It is not enough that the present employers should hire more men—although that is very important. There must be new employers—new employers every day. If we are to give our workers a chance, there ought to be about 200,000 new enterprises founded every year.

Now what has happened under the New Deal?

Between 1900 and 1929 the number of business enterprises per thousand of population increased about 17 per cent. We were growing and there were plenty of jobs. Today, we have even fewer business enterprises per thousand of population than we had in 1929. Measured by the standard of our previous growth we are short about 700,000 enterprises—that is, we are short about 700,000 employers.

Nowadays, it is about as hard to start a new business as it is to rob a bank—and the risks of going to jail are about as great in both cases.

Now let us ask ourselves this question: Why are there fewer employers per thousand of population than there used to be?

Well, here's the answer to that one. If you want to become an employer you can't just go out and hire men. You have to have either money in the bank, or credit. And most important of all, you have to have a plant, a factory. Factories are really tools for the workers to use—tools that enormously increase their earning power. But you will find your factory expensive to build. Taking an average across the country you will find that you have to invest about $4,000 for every man you employ.

In other words, it takes about $4,000 of investment to make one job.

Now there are two things about that $4,000 that you must understand.

In the first place, neither you nor anybody else will put up that $4,000 unless there is some chance of making a profit on it. That profit is what you earn from the factory that the workers are using.

Under the New Deal the employer who puts up money to make a profit has been in the doghouse. Government officials have encouraged the belief that he is a kind of conspirator against society—an exploiter of the workers. Profits have come to be regarded, not as the legitimate reward of enterprise, but as a kind of tax laid upon society by privileged men.

Now if you really believe all that bunk, then you ought to change our system so that we can all go to work for the State. Because, so long as we keep our system of private enterprise, the employer will not put up $4,000 for your job unless he can make a profit on it.

I am not interested in profits as such. I am not interested in employers as such. But I am interested in both employers and profits as a means of making jobs for those who are now unemployed, and as a means of making better jobs for those who are already employed.

I am pledged to get those jobs, and I intend to keep my pledge.

New Deal Hostile, He Says

Now there is a second thing we must understand about that $4,000. The man who invests it must be given a clear chance by the Government to make his factory work. But the New Deal has not done that. The New Deal has been hostile to employers. It has attacked them for almost everything they do, or fail to do.

I am not going to give you the whole list of the things that the New Deal has done to make life difficult for the man who owns that factory. You know, because I have said so many times, that I stand for the proper regulation of business—particularly big business. But it seems to me that it is in the interests of labor to make that regulation just as simple as possible and just as efficient as possible.

Too much red tape, too many reports to fill out, too much suspicion on the part of the Government representatives, takes the time of the businessman away from his work and makes him inefficient. It also adds to his cost—and every item added to cost outside the shop simply decreases the earning power of the workers who make that product.

Also, as I have pointed out on many occasions, the New Deal tax structure is unscientific and inefficient. Businesses that make a profit should pay a tax. But we must be careful not to levy taxes that will discourage employers from starting new businesses, from hiring more workers.

And worst of all, the New Deal has constantly changed its laws, its taxes and its regulations. You understand that in order to do business successfully a man must be able to predict the future with some reasonable certainty. It is the duty of government to stabilize our economic system as much as possible. When the system is kept in turmoil as it has been under the New Deal, a businessman cannot predict the future, and, therefore, he won't risk his money in new enterprises to make new jobs.

Let me give you just one example of the kind of thing that has been going on all over the country during the past seven years. I have a report on a business concern in Ohio, founded in 1885. It is a small concern employing only 50 people; there are only 20 stockholders and the capitalization is only $200,000. The highest salary paid in this business is $8,500, and dividends to the shareholders have never run over 4 or 5 per cent in good years. But recently there have been no good years. The president of that company is in despair and this is what he recently said:

"If the current tax burden, the weight of Government demands for reports, and the snooping of Government officials continue, this business will be . . . liquidated."

In that little example you have the whole story. Because of a generally hostile attitude on the part of the New Deal toward this small business, the owners of the plant are on the point of shutting down after 55 years. And that would mean 50 men added to the ranks of the unemployed.

Now the men who run that little business don't want to abandon it, they like it. They used to make a fair return out of it. They might even like to increase its size if they had a chance.

The mechanism of this system of ours, this system of private enterprise, is an exceedingly delicate mechanism. It's like a watch. And if you go after it with a crowbar and a pipe-wrench it won't keep time for you any more.

Calls for More Jobs

So here's my point: I am 100 per cent determined to keep the minimum safeguards that labor has won. I'd even be in favor of raising them whenever we can afford to do so. But I say those minimum safeguards are not enough. They cannot really protect you. They cannot protect you from the threat of unemployment. They cannot protect you from the great load of debt and taxes that you are now carrying. And they cannot protect you from the collapse of our system, which will inevitably come if we continue as we are today. The only thing that can really protect you, the only thing that can basically safeguard your rights and opportunities, is new employment—more jobs—more work—more growth—more expansion.

There are a lot of things that I would say to you if time permitted. We are living in bewildering times. Statesmen, businessmen, and working men are all confronted with problems that are difficult to solve.

I can understand your problems. I have worked with my hands on farms and in factories. I have been a businessman, too. I have seen the picture from both sides. I know that if we are to preserve our system of private enterprise, of free enterprise, we cannot expect one side to get ahead at the expense of the other.

Believe me, if I am elected President of the United States, I shall protect your side of the industrial team. But this is the thought I want to leave with you tonight: The other side of the industrial team, the employer, must be given a chance. We can lick the employer if we want to. We can beat him down, we can frighten him, we can even eliminate him. But if we do that—and that is what the New Deal is doing—you won't have any jobs. The only employer left under those circumstances would be the state.

The difference between me and my opponent for office is that I have faith in America. The New Deal candidate does not believe there are any more jobs, whereas I know there are. He does not believe that we can put the unemployed back to work, whereas I know that we can.

This is a critical issue. It is a terrible issue, when you stop to think about it. We know—all history provides us with proof—that this intolerable load of unemployment and debt must surely end with the destruction of our democratic way of life. If we go on this way we shall surely lose those rights and liberties which are so precious to us. By his failure to revise our system Mr. Roosevelt is heading us toward a totalitarian state.

That is why I ask you to join me in this crusade; this crusade to make jobs; to put this country back to work; to build a new America with a higher standard of life than we have ever dreamed of before. Democracy is rooted in prosperity. I have undertaken to restore prosperity, to open a greater opportunity for every one of us. And if you give me the chance to do that, I will not let you down.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Willkie On Foreign Policy

AT SAN FRANCISCO on the shores of the Pacific Ocean Mr. Willkie expanded his foreign policy. In addition to reiterating his conviction that Great Britain is "our first line of defense and our only remaining friend," he took the position that in the Pacific "our best ends will be served by a free, strong and democratically progressive China." He is, therefore, in favor of sending more aid to Great Britain up "to the limits of prudence and effectiveness," and he believes we should give economic assistance to China and that we should "explore the acquisition and development of Pacific air bases for the protection of our interests in that ocean." His policy, in other words, is to support the British resistance to the Axis in Europe and the Chinese resistance to Japan in the Far East.

The interesting thing about this statement is that though such a two-ocean policy is undoubtedly in the making, the Administration has been moving cautiously on a line where Mr. Willkie is willing to move so boldly. There is no doubt that the President and Secretary Hull have always felt, as Mr. Willkie feels, that the resistance of China is the best check upon the menancing expansion of Japanese power in the Pacific. But since the outbreak of the European war they have avoided such a direct frontal challenge to the vital interests of Japan as Mr. Willkie advocated in his San Francisco speech. Whether they have been wisely prudent or unwisely timid in avoiding such a conflict with the vital interests of Japan is a debatable question. But the fact remains that on this intensely critical matter they have acted more cautiously than Mr. Willkie thinks the United States ought to act.

IT IS necessary to bear in mind that Japan has staked everything on the effort to subjugate China and that a policy of giving "economic aid" to China, that is to say materials of war, is a direct challenge to Japan. In order to make it possible for economic assistance to reach the Chinese, the remaining highways into free China have to be kept open. These highways pass through French territory in Indo-China and through British territory in Burma. In order to cut off economic assistance to China, Japan is threatening to invade French Indo-China and has committed such hostile acts against Great Britain that, temporarily at least, the British have closed the Burma road.

It is evident that if China is to be supported with economic aid from the United States, the British and, if possible, the French must at the risk of war with Japan open the roads into China. In view of the fact that the British fleet is so seriously engaged in northern Europe and in the Mediterranean, the question of helping China is, therefore, a question of finding ways to reinforce the British navy. For without reinforcement in Europe the British navy cannot afford to risk opening another battle-front in the Pacific. And without adequate assurance that the British navy can continue to control the Atlantic Ocean, the United States cannot afford to risk being involved in a war with Japan in the Pacific.

AS LONG AS the country and Congress were not prepared to give assistance to the British in maintaining their sea power, it would have been a piece of incredible folly to challenge Japan in the Pacific at a time when the destruction or surrender of the British Navy might mean that our own Navy was all that remained to defend the Western Hemisphere. Something has now been done to strengthen the British resistance and to improve our own possibilities of defense in this hemisphere. But the outcome is is still very uncertain, and until it is much clearer that we can and that we will effectively reinforce the British resistance, we cannot prudently, so it seems to me, assume the tremendous risks of the Far Eastern policy that Mr. Willkie advocates. We are compelled to continue the Administration policy of playing for time until, and unless, an arrangement can be devised which makes secure British and American naval supremacy in the Atlantic and in the southwestern Pacific.

It may be that Mr. Willkie had some such arrangement in mind when he spoke of "exploring the acquisition and development of Pacific air bases." We already have undeveloped bases in Alaska, in Guam, and the Philippines; apart from a few unpromising sites on islands off the coast of Central and South America the only new bases we could acquire in the Pacific would be British and Dutch bases. The acquisition of these bases would involve important and far-reaching naval agreements for the defense of both oceans.

SUCH ARRANGEMENTS are probably feasible. But before they could be consummated, it would be desirable to know more explicitly just where, as leader of the Republican Party, Mr. Willkie stands. Is it his view that the President has power without further enabling legislation to send more aid to Britain "up to the limit of prudence and effectiveness as determined by impartial experts in this field?" Is it his view that the President has the power to give economic aid to China without further enabling legislation? If this is his view, then why did he complain so bitterly about the fact that the President did not ask the approval of Congress in the destroyer-bases transaction?

IF, ON THE other hand, it is his view that Congress must be consulted and enabling legislation enacted before executing policies he advocated at San Francisco, does he favor holding Congress in session to pass such legislation? For, obviously, if these policies are to be of any use, they must be acted on at once; further assistance to Britain cannot wait until next January. If he thinks enabling legislation is needed, what assurance can he give that his party will approve this legislation? He spoke in San Francisco: did he consult the ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, Mr. Hiram Johnson, before making his speech? Does he have the support of his campaign manager, who is the leader of the Republicans in the House, of his running-mate, who is leader of the Republicans in the Senate, of the ranking Republican on the House committee, Mr. Hamilton Fish?

THESE ARE NOT trick question. These are fair questions which go to the heart of the practical issue which must be settled before the country can determine whether Mr. Willkie's advice, which has such grave implications and such enormous consequences, is considered responsible advice. They are questions which would not have arisen had Mr. Willkie followed the advice of his best friends, which was to cooperate with the President fully on foreign policy. Had he resisted the temptation to campaign about foreign policy, for once Mr. Willkie made the decision to make foreign policy a partisan matter, the disconcerting problem of his own relation to his own party was bound to rise up and haunt him. Once he took the line that the President and the Democratic Party did not know how properly to conduct foreign affairs, the country was bound to take a careful look at the competence of Mr. Willkie and the condition of the Republican Party.

Md. Factory Jobs, Pay Continue Up During August

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—Continued gains in employment and combined weekly pay rolls in Maryland, with employment climbing for the sixth consecutive month, were reported today by John M. Pohlhaus.

Employment rose 1.7 per cent from July to August, and pay rolls climbed 1.9 per cent. "These seasonal gains were widespread, including almost all the durable goods industries."

Pohlhaus said the report was based on returns by 844 manufacturing industries employing 114,897 persons with combined weekly earnings in August of $3,942,436.

Average weekly earnings in combined manufacturing industries in August were $33.63.

Special Dispatch to The Post

La Plata, Md., Sept. 23.—The Rural Electrification Administration has allotted an additional $84,000 to the Southern Maryland Tricounty Cooperative Association, Inc., Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer advised company officials today.

The co-operative, which operates in Charles, Prince Georges and St. Marys counties, will use the money as follows: $12,000 for construction of an office building, garage and storage facilities; $72,000 to build 50 miles of line to serve 188 families.

Previously, the co-operative had been allotted $963,800 to build 206 miles of line to serve 1,125 members, and $112,500 for the construction of a generating plant.

Browne's Police Record

IF YOU HAVE been reading my series of little mash notes to the gorillas in the American Federation of Labor you may have noticed symptoms of bashfulness in my characterization of George Browne, the president of the stage hands' union or racket. Mr. Browne has no criminal record that I have been able to find, so in calling him a gangster or racketeer I have had to rely on a liberal interpretation of the terms. But I felt sure that a man of his low associations must have left a tuft of his pelt in the police records somewhere along the line, and I was right.

The files of the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital show that at 4 o'clock in the morning of January 27, 1925, George E. Browne, business agent of the Theatrical Protective Union, was brought in, for treatment of a gunshot wound, by an unidentified man who immediately hightailed out of there. The bullet had struck in the left hip. Dr. Schamschow, the interne, iodined the wound and the patient paid $5 and was taken to the Bridewell, or prison hospital, refusing to give any information regarding the shooting.

The next day's papers said the patient told the police, "I'll take care of this myself; don't disturb yourself about it." An old accident report at the detective bureau also says the patient refused to say where or how the shooting occurred. That was in the gangster tradition.

THE SURGEON who operated identifies him as our heodlum friend, George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators and member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

Now we skip out to the moldy rooming house on the North Side and interview a strange and pathetic creature named Herbert Green, who is lying on an iron bed listening to an old-fashioned, banjo-type radio as we knock on the door. He opens the door cautiously, explaining that he was afraid someone was coming to get him. Then he dredges his false teeth out of a glass and sits on the bed to tell his story.

There is a dent in Mr. Green's skull the size of a chickadee's nest, inflicted, so he says, by Browne's boss in the union racket, Mr. Willie Bioff, who has just finished, very belatedly, a six-month sentence for shaking down prostitutes. Mr. Green says he was a candidate for a minor office in the movie projectionists' racket back in December, 1933, and that Bioff, wishing to eliminate this rivalry, conked him with a blackjack. Green came to five days later in the county hospital and, judging from the look of the wound, the person who took the divot was bent on execution, not admonition.

GREEN IS a brother-in-law of George Browne and says he was the one who delivered Browne to the hospital that night in 1925.

"I was working in the Chateau Theater," says Herbert Green, "and this Brooks, he run a saloon on Forty-seventh near Ashland, he called up and says come on over and get Browne as he was playing with that gun of his and waving it around like he always done when he would get drunk. So I got there and he was stinking and waving that gun so as we was going out a guy near the door shot him in the buttocks. He was a little guy. I don't remember his name. I did hear it but I don't remember it. Anyway, he got shot about four weeks after. He got killed about four weeks after he shot George."

IN FEBRUARY, 1933, Tommy Maloy, one of the greediest wolves that ever fanged the union movement, was removed from command of the movie union racket in Chicago by gunfire. Mr. Browne bore his pall, and from that funeral of a beloved brother in the sacred bond went speedily on to the international presidency of one of the most disgraceful unions in the A. F. of L. After Maloy's death Browne and Bioff really went to town.

The police are still baffled by both shootings, but they baffle easily. Indeed, there is no evidence in the official files that they ever made any investigation of the damage done to Mr. Browne's buttocks.

'The Ramparts' Lesson

By Mark Sullivan

Experiences Recalled In Film

THERE IS a motion picture, appearing in various cities, and giving rise to some public commotion. It is called "The Ramparts We Watch."

It consists of two parts, related but quite different. One part is a photographic portrayal of Nazis in the present war, showing their cold ferocity—called by them efficiency—as they attacked Poland. This was originally got up by the Nazis themselves, officially, to show other countries what would happen to them if they resisted Hitler. It was designed to be shown to the Nazis' prospective victims at the strategic time, on the eve of attack, as an advance psychological barrage, preceding the tanks and dive-bombers. A copy of the film fell into the hands of the British, through their inspection of contraband mail, and thence into the hands of the present American producer.

About that German part of "The Ramparts," nothing occurs to me to say, that might not occur to others. Except that I do not see why it should be banned by censors in Pennsylvania or elsewhere. While intended by the Germans as propaganda to create terror, it is not likely, in America, to achieve that purpose, but rather to stir resistance to terrorization. Resistance to intimidation is hardly an emotion about which censors need concern themselves.

However, it is with the other part of "The Ramparts We Watch" that this column deals. This other part is about America wholly, America of a generation ago, between the years 1914-18. It is a picture of the American people, first looking out upon the Great War from a distance, then approaching it, finally rushing to it, taking part in it. Since that experience of a quarter-century ago has at least a partial analogy to the experience we are passing through now, "The Ramparts We Watch" has a lesson for us.

SOME CRITICS assert the lesson goes too far; they say the picture is "propaganda," propaganda for participation in the present war. But our suspicion of what we call "propaganda," and also the almost hysterical pacifism which many of us have fallen into during the past few years, has gone so far that it results in a curious perversion. It leads to a strange syllogism, running somewhat thus:

"Whatever moves us toward a conclusion we do not like, is propaganda. If truth moves us toward an unwelcome conclusion, then truth is propaganda. Propaganda is wrong. Therefore truth is wrong."

Follow that path and you arrive at, "believe only that which it pleases you to believe." Follow it farther, and you arrive in Germany and Russia—government definition of what is truth.

Now "The Ramparts We Watch" is just truth. It is so simply true that I feel tempted to say it is, within the limits it covers, the truest historical record of a period that I have ever seen, whether in a book, on the stage, or in other form of art. Certainly it is safe to agree with Librarian of Congress, Archibald MacLeish, that this picture, being a reproduction of "events as they looked to those who lived them," is superior to history as written later, "with the falsifying aid of hindsight."

TOWARD the conclusion of the picture, as I watched it, an odd observation occurred to me: "Here I have been looking for an hour at a motion picture—and I have not seen, I think, on any actor or actress, any touch of rouge, mascara, or other device for the accentuation of nature." "The Ramparts We Watch" is without lipstick, labial or historical.

This absence is symbolic. "The Ramparts We Watch" has no make-up. It is not a picture of actors, it is a picture of people. It is simple fact. Much of it is literal transcription of fact, for it reproduces many of the old silent news reels taken during the Great War—Woodrow Wilson marching in a parade; Theodore Roosevelt making a speech, vehemently; Edward of England when a charming young prince; Franklin D. Roosevelt, young, lithe, climbing briskly up a freight-car in France; Herbert Hoover, slender and young, and shy, before his Quaker gentleness was steeled by great responsibilities. For that matter, as like as not, you may recognize your brother Charlie, or Uncle Jim, among the recruits marching off to war, or Aunt Susie among those sewing socks for soldiers.

Now the particular truth conveyed by this picture, which causes some to resent it, is not what it contains but what it does not contain. It does not contain a certain fiction, which has been built up by some specious politicians, neurotic intellectuals and pseudo-historians—the fiction that America was taken into the Great War by munitions makers and bankers.

We were taken into the Great War by something we do not now like to admit—by what went on in our own individual hearts, by the aggregate angers of a hundred million people, little rills of personal indignation merging into a rushing national tide.

It would be a pity to overemphasize the polemic aspects of "The Ramparts" to the neglect of its charm. Excluding every art of theatrical glamour, it achieves glamour supreme. It is such a picture as any one of millions of Americans almost might make up out of his own memories and memoirs. From the attic, some bundles of family letters, old newspaper clippings, theater programs, dance lists; from the family album, some photographs and snapshots. Add some camera shots from forgotten silent films—and you have two-thirds of a picture which moves you to say, if you are 30 years or more, "All of this I saw, and much of this I was." If less than 30, you may reflect that your sires were not unworthy men, and say, "Of no mean nation am I."

Bygone Elections

By Paul N. Furman

Jeffersonian Era Begins

Aaron Burr's unsuccessful attempt to steal the Presidency from Thomas Jefferson in 1800 led to amendment of the Constitution providing that separate votes should be taken in the Electoral College for President and Vice President.

GEO. CLINTON

During the first 12 years of the Republic the Republican (now the Democratic) Party formed by Jefferson had been merely a party of opposition. It came into power in 1800.

Under Jefferson the Republicans proceeded to undo all they could of the work of Washington and Adams. Jefferson removed Federalist jobholders and appointed Republicans. The act establishing a judiciary system was repealed and many judges deprived of their office. Others were impeached.

When the election of 1804 rolled around the Federalists deliberately withdrew from real opposition to Jefferson's reelection.

Jefferson was renominted unanimously at a caucus of Congressmen. As Burr had made himself unavailable by his chicanery in the previous election, George Clinton, of New York, was agreed upon for Vice President. The Federalists decided to support for President Gen. Charles C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, who had been Adam's running mate four years earlier, and Rufus King, of New York, for Vice President.

The only States the Federalists carried were Connecticut and Delaware. Jefferson and Pinckney swept the other 15. Then the political era which began with Jefferson's first election in 1800 became so firmly intrenched it enjoyed 40 years of uninterrupted ascendancy. It has come down to today with unbroken succession, but with radical changes in its principles.

Ciano Reported Going to Berlin

Evidence of Haste Believed Dooming Petain Regime

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 23.—There are reports here today that Foreign Minister Ciano is going to Berlin within a week to continue the discussions German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop began in Rome. It was stated that "contacts between the Axis partners will be much more frequent in the future than they have been."

The feeling that major developments are coming very soon is growing, and a visit by Ciano to Berlin would indeed be highly important. The Spanish minister of the interior, Ramon Serrano Suner, is expected in Rome about Wednesday. However, some sources believe that Serrano Suner will wait for Ciano in Berlin, in which case a three-cornered conference would be held there.

One puzzling aspect of the present situation is the apparent evidence of haste. At the same time there is no reason whatever to believe in any friction between the Axis partners. If affairs are being hurried there is some outside power which is precipitating matters.

There is one subject which seems to be coming to the fore and which had not been seriously considered by observers while Ribbentrop was here. That is France.

A report is persistent that Ribbentrop and Mussolini discussed a new disposition of French territory which would involve the disappearance of the Petain government.

No one knows, of course, exactly why or what is now going to happen, except that the first developments will undoubtedly involve Spain, the Balkans and, therefore, Russia.

All information available here still comes from Berlin. The usual Italian political circles have not divulged a single fact while the Italian newspapers are getting their information exclusively from Berlin.

Greece Apprehensive

Copyright by New York Times

Safia, Bulgaria, Sept. 23.—Diplomatic reports indicate an increasing foreboding in Yugoslavia and Greece about an Axis move against them in the future.

While no definite moves have yet been made both Belgrade and Athens anticipate demands that they declare themselves for the Axis and demonstrate their sincerity or face the consequences.

Bulgaria, thanks to the return of Southern Dobruja and the increasing agitation for an Aegean outlet through Greek Thrace, is an admirable partner for any pressure tactics. It is thought that the Axis wishes to avoid war in this area but that it will seek by pressure to place Bulgaria on the Aegean, thus cutting off Greece from her last strong ally, Turkey.

An official Greek source tonight said Greece would resist any attempt to prevail upon them to give up an inch of land, even without Turkish or Yugoslav aid.

Many diplomats think that if the Axis is successful in forcing Greek concessions, Yugoslavia will immediately be mutilated, with Hungary and Bulgaria getting portions, as well as Italy and Germany.

One minister here said Germany, in order to attack Turkey and the Near East, will ask Hungary and Bulgaria to permit transit of Nazi troops in exchange for further territorial concessions. However, the majority of diplomatic observers still hold it unlikely that Germany wishes to disrupt the flow of Balkan goods to the Reich or risk combat with Russia at present.

[The Hamburger Fremdenblatt asserted today, the Associated Press reported from Berlin, that Ribbentrop was returning from Rome with a "rich political harvest," although the negotiations are not finished in their present stage.

[The paper carried a warning to Greece, saying that "in the future a land such as Greece will find it expedient not to give support to British intrigues, which once was the case in Norway and Rumania."]

French Can See London Fires, Berlin Says

'Tremendous' Blazes Reported Visible From Coast 90 Miles Away

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 23.—Deadly air battles over England cost the British 21 planes in Germany's five in the unceasing continuation today and tonight of "full strength" raids on bomb-battered London, authorized Nazi sources declared.

Already, the Germans said, they have set in the heart of the British capital "tremendous fires" visible from the French coast 90 miles away.

Famed Piccadilly Circus and broad wharves along the Thames were listed among the targets in raids throughout last night and this morning.

Since July 10, the Germans said, 50,600,00 pounds of bombs have been 50,600,000 pounds of bombs have been hurled on British targets, 6,000 fac-them in the London area; one-fifth of Britain's electri power and gas plants have been destroyed or badly damaged; $600,000,000 in damage done to food and other storehouses, and hundreds of miles of railroads hit.

On British ports alone, they said, 17,000,000 pounds of bombs have fallen in 200 attacks, and there have been 700 raids on British airports.

Not overlooking the war at sea, the German command announced that one submarine had sunk 29,000 tons of British merchant shipping, while a small speedboat sank a 3,000-ton freighter and "incapacitated" a patrol boat.

In connection with the British announcement that a British refugee ship has been torpedoed—an announcement which the Germans dismissed as a "tear jerker" for United States consumption — the Nazis said they had sunk no ship identifiable as a passenger vessel, but reiterated their declaration of a "total blockade around Britain."

"Dreadful End"

Berlin, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—The Nazi press tonight warned the British that a "dreadful end" is being made ready for them.

The newspapers touched an all-time peak of denunciation for the Royal Air Force raids on Germany and promised that the British nation would be "annihilated" in retaliation.

British Sailors Tell How Nazis Strafed Ship

Bullet Holes Patched In Maryland Port As Steel Is Loaded

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 23.—Officers and men of the British freighter Empire Bison, raked by the fire of a Nazi bomber off the Irish coast, laughed over their narrow escape from death today and said it was "a bloody wonder" the ship came through.

They recounted their experiences today as riveters, smiths and carpenters repaired the bullet-scarred freighter, which is loading steel ingots and billets at Port Covington, where it docked last night.

The Nazi raider swooped down on the 410-foot Empire Bison on its third day out from England, about 240 miles off the Irish coast, puncturing ventilators, damaging lifeboats, smashing three derricks, tearing up the deck and breaking the steering gear.

Three who had narrow escapes were First Mate Albert Robinson, Second Mate Jack Carlton and Seaman Richard Squires.

Robinson had stooped to pick up a signal flag when the shooting started.

"I'd like to get Hitler where that Jerry almost got me," he said. "You can't pin a medal on it, either."

When the bomber began spattering the ship with machine gun bullets and an airplane cannon, Carlton dashed into a cabin to put on his shoes. Then he returned to his bunk to find a shell had come through into the room. Had he sat on the bunk, as usual, to put on his shoes, the shell would have hit him.

Squires was in the crow's nest—but not for long.

"I came down out of there," he said. "I came down fast, and I stayed down. I made for the first hole I saw. I don't remember just where that was now, but I got in there and I stayed put."

Capt. W. H. Harland, who blazed away at the plane with a high-powered rifle, said "eight bombs dropped from the plane and some were very close."

Moses R. Sanger, Retired District Merchant, Dies

Moses R. Sanger, retired merchant and native of the District, died here yesterday at Emergency Hospital. He was 73.

The son of the late Rapheal and Caroline Sanger, Mr. Sanger operated on Seventh street for more than 25 years before retiring in 1935. A nature lover, he joined several friends each Sunday in an exploratory tour of one of the District parks, a custom he maintained up to three weeks of his death.

He leaves a sister, Essie, with whom he made his home at 2714 Ontario road northwest; a brother, David, of WaDshington; a second sister, Mrs. Frank Levine, and another brother, Harry, both of New York.

Services will be hel dat the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with interment to follow in the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Barrymore Seeking Divorce, Seclusion

Los Angeles, Sept. 23 (AP).—John Barrymore filed suit for divorce today from Elaine Barrie in another of their frequent domestic breakups.

He charges the New York brunette with causing him "grevious mental suffering and great bodily injury." Nature of the latter was not specified.

The 57-year-old actor also sought to make the seclusion of his famed "Chinese tenement" (the phrase is his) secure by a restraining order which forbids his wife from "harrassing, annoying or interfering with the peace, quiet and personal freedom of the plaintiff, Barrymore, or fro mentering or attempting to enter the premises at No. 6 Tower road, Beverly Hills, where the plaintiff is now residing."

Barrymore's petition also mentioned recent appointment of a receiver for his assets in a bankruptcy proceedings, forbids Miss Barrie and her mother, Mrs. Edna Jacobs, from disposing of their properties except for living expenses.

Personable Man Laments Dullness of This Unsociable Town; His Best Girl Thinks He Is at Fault; Asks How Tactfully to Change His Unfriendly Attitude

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a man friend whose only fault is his lack of friendliness—if you know what I mean. He could be a great success and a much happier person if only he would make and enjoy a wider, fuller social life. I want to help him and I don't know how to begin.

He is well bred, well dressed, highly intelligent, kindly and very likeable; indeed, a lovable person when you know him. He is sincerity itself; does not have a so-called "line." I admire him greatly, and would like to help him overcome his one difficulty, if it can be done tactfully. He seems so lonely and unhappy at times that it grieves me.

I believe he is somewhat homesick, as his family lives thousands of miles away and his visits "back home" are, of necessity, few and far between. He lives alone here. He has been dating me occasionally for two years, always taking me to the best places. I have a naturally friendly, fun-loving disposition and usually I am able to lift his spirits to the point where he laughs and enjoys himself. But lately I have had an impulse to take him by the shoulders and shake him, as you would an obstinate child.

He complains of "the dull town" and "the unsociable people," honestly unaware of the fact that the fault lies within himself. I don't wish to "reform" him. Nothing is farther from my thought. But I would like to know how to help him "find himself" in a happier social life. I will thank you for any advice. SUE.

Association and Example Are Powerful Agents

DEAR SUE: Association and example are proverbially powerful agents of "influencing," and you have had both agents at your disposal during the past two years—to use in shaping your friend's performance to a socially more cooperative pattern. (To influence, by the way, is "to modify or to determine," by "producing an effect without apparent force or direct authority.") The fact that you haven't improved or "modified" his ingrown disposition in the slightest during these two years suggests that you must be lacking in the very traits and aptitudes you would transmit to—or graft upon—him.

In all the time you have been knowing each other, apparently he hasn't made you the beneficiary of anything more than his introverted "one man's opinion" of things, as seen through a very small loophole; and neither have you pointed him the way to any vaster intellectual or social adventure than that of spending evening after evening at "one (or another) of the very best places."

If you possessed and employed talents for "enjoying life in the wider, fuller sense" you would have swept him into the current of your joyous activities as a matter of course from the very first, and he would have been obliged to accommodate himself to that pace and pattern if he wanted to keep in touch with you. It would have been for him a form of "progressive education;" an exercise in "learning by doing." Without being entirely aware of what was happening, he would have been responding to the "influence" of what you were, and rising to the level of social development you represented.

As it is, I surmise he is a bit bored with you and the type of evening he spends with you—primarily (as you say) because he declines to take the initiative in making the most of himself and such opportunities as he could create; but secondarily because you are almost equally devoid of social initiative and intellectual enterprise.

What you seek to do for him you must first do for yourself. The only way you can help him "find himself in a happier social life" is to make yourself the activating center of that kind of life and draw him into it, as guest and friend. This means that you must send down roots in your community; you must have living quarters that possess a warmly welcoming "home atmosphere;" you must have friends and acquaintances who represent your community interests of various kinds, or who reflect your ability to attract and "get on" with different types (and social levels) of people; and you must develop the knack of establishing a conversational bond between persons when you introduce them to each other. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Washing Black Gloves

Don't be afraid to wash your black leather gloves . . . provided they're of good American-tanned doeskin, mocha, capeskin, suede or pigskin. But . . . don't let them wait for weeks, getting more and more soiled. Wash them as often as you'd wash lighter colors, because black gloves, even though they don't show it, collect just as much soil as any others, and like others, the less soiled you let them get the easier they'll wash.

Reducing Sure Key to That Youthful Look

Effect Can Be Quite Opposite When It's Overdone, However

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN YOU succeed in battling off a few pounds, count on it that your buxom friends will rally around! They will either drop ominous remarks that "reducing seems to be aging," or they will assure you cheerfully that you "looked much better when you had a little more weight."

That's almost invariably sour grapes! When you think it over, you find these remarks usually come from someone who should be on a diet herself and who is just trying to pretend all is well when it isn't.

The excessively overweight people are the ones who look older than necessary. Of course, extreme underweight is aging, too—but that's another story. Normal weight, which is synonymous with high vitality, is the most flattering a woman can have.

Reducing Must Be Slow

Any program that makes the reducer look older has something radically wrong with it—it may be that the diet is lacking in the essential protective elements, or that the weight is lost too rapidly or without benefit of exercise.

Reducing does not cause wrinkles. But if you take weight off so fast that your skin has no chance to contract to a smaller size you will probably discover some new crowsfeet! When the skin has been overdistended it naturally loses some of its elasticity. The longer you have been overweight the more cautious you should be in reducing. To be perfectly safe hold your rate of loss down to one pound per week.

Personally I think an average of one pound to one and one-half pounds per week is the most satisfactory. At that rate your diet is no hardship and you have plenty of energy so that you feel like exercising. If you are to look young, exercise is a necessity! It not only tones the muscles and slims the measurements but it also improves the circulation—your real fountain of youth—and tones the skin.

Exercise to Look Young

If your weight loss shows first in your face, that is your cue to slightly increase the calories and to step up your exercise. You are probably not as much in need of a diet as you are in need of general toning exercise.

You can't look young unless you do exercise! Exercise not only tones the muscles and slims the measurements, but it also stimulates the circulation—your real fountain of youth—and improves the skin.

Designer Likes Way Women Wear Men's Clothes

Hollywood, Calif.—Milo Anderson, Warner Brothers designer, compliments women on the sensible way in which they've turned masculine garb to their own ends.

Smoking jackets were never too popular with men but they're universally liked by women, says Milo, who quotes Ann Sheridan herself. The star has five such jackets. The most elaborate one is light blue quilted satin with huge pockets to top a pair of black crepe lounging pajamas.

Turtle neck sweaters have been out of the masculine picture for years but are being seen everywhere again as occasional standins for feminine blouses. Milo likes them in pastels and rich dark shades with fall suits. Olivia de Havilland is wearing such a sweater in dark gray with a gray and white tweed suit and large gray felt vagabond.

Four in One Wardrobe

Mary Goddard, attractive local girl with an eye for both style and values, models the four-piece costume above. Three of the four pieces are shown—hat, muff and fitted coat, all in Persian curl fabric which closely resembles Persian lamb. The youthful flare to the silhouette, neat stand-up collar, tall pillbox and roomy muff (it's zippered to serve as a handbag) give the effect of a Cossack's costume. Beneath is a simple black, wool dress. The price for all four pieces is surprisingly low.

King-Smith Educator Finds Mothers Are Worst Bother in Teaching School

MANY a maternal ear must burn when Katherine Elliott, director of admissions at King-Smith Studio School, starts talking about "Mothers I Have Known." Problem children are a minor worry for school principals, it appears, in comparison with the obstacle presented by their overanxious mammas on opening day. "Some mothers simply must speak to the principal and no one else," she has found. "It's the busiest day of the year for him, yet he must listen while she tells all for 45 minutes.

Katherine Elliott

"The type that is most trying to a boarding school dean is the mother who installs herself at the Mayflower for a week and lurks around to make sure little Mary is not homesick. Of course she not only makes little Mary homesick, but keeps her from becoming friends with her roommate and getting adjusted to school life. Fathers usually are more sensible: they realize it's a business proposition, so they pay the bill and go home."

Parents of public school pupils are fortunate in being able to join a parent-teacher association, she believes. "It gives them an outlet for their anxiety, and an opportunity to talk to the teachers without those classroom visits which are so embarrassing to their children."

SIGHTSEEING SUGGESTION—Make a luncheon date with the Zoo's sealion some day at 3 p. m. It's fun to watch the slippery animal snatch at his fish, and it's even more fun to watch the gallery of children watching him. "Wish I could eat that much fish," one will say . . . "Wish I could eat that much ANYTHING," volunteers another . . . And a third: "Wish I could eat that much and then go in swimming right away."

Sophie August, local interior decorator, surprised the manager of a hotel here recently by refusing to rent a suite on the grounds that the rooms were left-handed. "I'm so right-handed that sleeping in a bed on the left side of a room leaves me tired and nervous," she explained afterward. "It's as though I'd been riding backward on a train. When I try to cook on a stove so placed that I have to use my left hand frequently, I drop everything I handle and nothing comes out right." She believes her idiosyncrasy is shared unconsciously by many people; if they were aware of it, she says, they could avoid nervous upsets merely by rearranging their rooms.

Mrs. Golden Bell, wife of the former Assistant Solicitor General, is now in the Philippines, where her husband is legal adviser to the American High Commissioner. Callers at her Manila home are shown souvenirs of her eight years in Washington, among them autographed pictures of the President, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members and other national figures. On view with the other photographs is that of a colored woman with the inscription, "Your maid and friend, Mamie White."

Better Ways In Laundering

If you want to keep light colors fresh and clear in washing, first wash the articles before they become heavily soiled. Use fresh hot suds and work quickly. Lightly soiled clothes will be cleansed in five minutes, or even less, in any good washer. Follow with a warm soapy rinse and two liberal cool rinses.

Are your towels as clear-clean as you would like? Soak them 15 minutes in cool water after removing any stains. Run your washer five to ten minutes with the towels in very hot water and a lively, 2-inch standing suds. Follow this with three rinses, and remember that the washer itself is a splendid means for rinsing. First rinse, hot and soapy, then lukewarm, finally cool.

Lemon Meringue Pie Choice of Irish Movie Star

THE DREAM dinner of lovely Maureen O'Hara, the Irish girl who came to our country to star in movies, is a thick juicy steak—and potatoes. She told me this at a breakfast given at the Washington Roof for her and Lucille Ball, who co-stars with her in the picture, "Dance, Girls, Dance."

Maureen's choice for breakfast was chilled grape juice, hot cakes, broiled bacon, and hot tea with cream. She never drinks coffee.

When I asked her what other food she liked especially, she answered "Oh, a fluffy lemon meringue pie."

Her beautiful coppery hair of natural curl, lovely skin, high coloring and expressive eyes, seems a perfect part of her quiet refined manner. So if Maureen can eat meringue pie and have such a lovely complexion, I think it is a recommendation for many of us. She asked me if I had a very special recipe for making lemon meringue pie. I told her I did, for the best lemon pie I have ever eaten is made by Elijah, the chef at Collingwood Tea House, on Mount Vernon highway. Here is Elijah's recipe:

Lemon Meringue Pie

Lemon Meringue Pie Filling—Combine 2 cups sugar, pinch of salt and ½ cup cornstarch in a saucepan. Add 2 cupes water and 3 egg yolks that have been beaten lightly. Cook for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and add 3/3 cup lemon juice and 1 1/3 tablespoons finely grated lemon rind. When cool turn into a 9-inch pastry shell previously baked.

Meringue—Beat 3 egg white until stiff, adding 6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar, a little at a time. Pile lightly on the filling and put into a 250-degree oven for 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

The Gentler Sex

'So Nice to See You'

At long last something is to be done about the formal reception line, nightmare of many a party-goer. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, announced at her press conference yesterday that she soon expected to revolutionize the procedure of greeting guests.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I had hoped," said the intrepid reformer, "that with the world in the state it is we would all at least have the good taste to tone down our partying. But with the arrival here of so many soignee members of Continental Cafe society. It is certain we are going to have plenty of social hullabaloo—in fact, a mammoth fiddling party.

"However, I should worry! Such things make work for the reformers—as well as the revolutionists. So I expect to make the reception line the start for a series of reforms in so-called society."

Rows of 'Ninepins' Not Necessary

"But don't you think the gracious hostess should greet her guests, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a society columnist.

"Certainly. But there is no need of her reinforcing herself with a row of smirking robots. One of my first measures will be to limit the reception line to not more than three persons."

"But what about clubs?" asked a club calendar columnist. "You can't leave any of the officers out of the reception line."

"Who on earth needs any introduction to the officers of a club?" replied Mrs. DeGoofey. "Anyway, why should they all have to stand like a row of ninepins? However, I am not objecting to the reception line so much in itself as the way it is conducted. For instance, there is this farce at large parties of being greeted by a hostess who hasn't the least idea who you are and who is looking over your head at the next guest while giving you a clammy handshake. Now, why go through with all that? Why aren't you just permitted to go quietly and get your victuals, greet the persons it will be to your advantage to greet, and go home?

'Get Along Little Doggie' Handshakes

"Moreover, there should be some kind of a test whereby women could qualify for service in reception lines and whereby others could be eliminated. An example of the latter type is the Virginia reel handshaker—the one who takes your hand and, without even looking at you, hurls you on to your next partner. I also would eliminate from reception lines all persons with dead pan faces, glassy eyes or fishy handshakes."

"But what about the guests themselves?" asked an etiquette columnist. "Don't they need reform?"

"I expect to do something about that, too. Certain types of guests will not be permitted to traverse the reception line. One of these is the dowager of importance who holds up a long line of people (most of them wearing shoes that hurt) while she talks interminably with the hostess or some other receptionist. Another is the chirpy little woman who has such a lot to tell about herself to the guest of honor—especially if he or she is a visiting lecturer or social lion."

"What immediate steps are you planning in your campaign, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked an obituary columnist.

Rag for Loot Offered for Prize

"First I am holding a contest for the best suggestion for a standardized remark to be used in saying good-bye to the hostess. There is no sense in people worrying themselves into nervous breakdowns trying to think of something original in saying farewell. What we need is a good routine good-bye such as 'The food was marvelous,' or 'This was not nearly as big a bore as I had expected.' For the best suggestion I will give a handsome cellophane container disguised as an afternoon or evening bag in which a party-goer may carry home canapes and sandwiches.

"Second, I plan to have made some robots that can be dressed to resemble prominent women and who will sub for them in the reception line, thus permitting the originals to mingle with the crowd, sit in a corner or even stay at home.

"In fact," continued Mrs. DeGoofey with a sudden gleam in her eye, "this whole idea of the wax robot for use in social life intrigues me greatly! I may have some interesting news along that line later."

Something New Accents Wedding Of Mrs. Baxter to Judge Goodrich

Couple Greets Guests at Door Before Ceremony Performed Just Where They Stood When 4:30 Came Around

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SOMETHING NEW in nuptial events accented yesterday afternoon's social calendar when guests arriving for the wedding of Mrs. Mary Dern Baxter and Judge Herbert Funk Goodrich, of Philadelphia, were greeted at the door of the drawing room by the prospective bridegroom and his fiancee.

The ceremony, witnessed by relatives and a few close friends, was followed by a reception that gathered in a hand-picked crowd of official and residential Washingtonians who were closely associated with Mrs. Baxter's late father, former Secretary of War George Dern.

Mrs. Dern's residents at 2118 Bancroft place was the scene of both the wedding and the party later. The reception hall and dining room downstairs and the second floor drawing room had been transformed into a bower of blossoms, featuring dahlias, chrysanthemums and roses in massive bouquets. Pastel tints sprouted from tall vases everywhere except in the dining room, where an all-white motif was emphasized.

There was no improvised altar, and the couple to be married had decided to dispense with attendants and to have the knot tied wherever they "happened to be standing when 4:30 rolled around." At the appointed time, they were at one end of the drawing room, and there the Rev. Fred S. Buschmeyer read the ceremony.

THE FORMER MRS. BAXTER, one of Washington's most attractive women, wore a floor-length frock of grey crepe, fashioned with a plaited skirt and a jacket-blouse of silver lame. A corsage of green orchids further accented her costume.

Among those attending the wedding were Judge Goodrich's two daughters, Ann Goodrich and Mrs. Sam I. Kalstein, of Philadelphia. Guests there from out of town were Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kelley, of Chicago; James Dern, John Bruton and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Brown, of New York.

Just as the final words of the wedding ceremony were read, guests began arriving for the reception. Greeting them at the front door were John and Joanna Baxter, son and daughter of the former Mrs. Baxter. Meanwhile up in the second floor drawing room Judge Goodrich and his bride and the latter's mother were welcoming the company. Mrs. Dern wore a floor-length frock of brown lace drawn with silver threads. Miss Betsy Dern, who generally assisted, wore a smart black crepe frock, trimmed in powder blue.

During the reception many of the guests lingered in the dining room, where a tall wedding cake dominated the table. Toasts to the bride and bridegroom made the rounds with champagne punch as the cake was cut.

Among those wishing Judge Goodrich and his pretty bride health and happiness were Mrs. Cordell Hull, smartly attired in a black outfit; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, a center of much attention; the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson; Mrs. Bennett Clark, whose dark green frock and matching hat, accented with a brown veil, was one of the most attractive costumes there; Mrs. Claude Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Homer Cummings, Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. L. W. (Chip) Robert, whose natty pink suit was a becoming accent for her blonde beauty. Incidentally, the glamorour Evie spent a good deal of her time telling friends it was really true that Chip has resigned his post as secretary of the Democratic National Committee. He is now in New York.

Still others at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell and Judge and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, brother and sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

Shortly after the reception the couple left for a Northern honeymoon. For traveling, the bride wore a frock and matching coat of marine wool mottled with brown, and brown accessories. After the middle of October she and her husband will be at home at 7701 Cresheim road, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia.

Judge Goodrich is a member of the United States Court of Appeals of the Third Judicial District and is a former dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Mrs. Atwill to Entertain Friday

Giving impetus to the predebutante season will be the party which Mrs. Lionel Atwill plans to give on Friday night in honor of her niece, Miss Christine Cromwell.

The vivid brunette daughter of James H. R. Cromwell dislikes being known as a glamour girl. She has come to Washington to study art. On Saturday night she will be guest of honor at a party to be given at Friendship by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean.

Mrs. Atwill, who is still toying with the idea of buying a Georgetown house, is going to Baltimore today for her birthday party, which will be given by her daughter, Mrs. William R. Howard 3d.

Miss Cromwell, daughter of the erstwhile Minister to Canada, was presented to society recently by her grandmother, Mrs. Hugh Dillman, at her estate on Grosse Point, Mich.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

Newly arrived French Ambassador Henri-Haye has decided to dispense with a social secretary. This is most unusual for a bachelor envoy who must learn his way around the mysterious ramifications of Washington social life. But M. Henri-Haye says he will not entertain as long as Frenchmen are in danger of starving.

The Thailand Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri will not hold their annual reception September 28 to celebrate the King's birthday. This affair in past years has always been the first big official get-together of the season.

IF LONDONERS can go on giving dinner parties while the air is thick with falling Nazis and shrapnel, it certainly would be silly to predict that this won't be an interesting season socially in Washington. No matter how depressed and anxious people are, they will continue to see one another. But parties, except for a few debutante dances, will be mostly small and informal ones. In some cases even the mothers of debs have made their ballroom reservations only tentative.

People will continue to meet this winter, only perhaps in not such a herd fashion as formerly.

THE CAPITAL is awaiting with interest the return of Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Roosevelt's social secretary. Shortly after she arrives in October the annual White House schedule for entertaining will be announced. Will the diplomatic reception, extremely tense last year, be canceled along with the state dinners this season? Like more important things, this doubtless depends on the Battle of Britain.

COL. EMMANUEL LOMBARD has gone to Walter Reed for a rest. When it is remembered that until very recently he was Military Attache of the French Embassy, this news is not surprising. Though no longer connected with the Embassy, the Lombards will continue to live in Washington. Mme. Lombard's family have made their home for many years.

Many French Embassy friendships these days are undergoing a severe strain owing to ideological reasons. For example, members of the staff, ostensibly Petain sympathizers, could hardly be expected to be clubby with the Countess de Gramont, whose husband escaped to fight with Gen. de Gaulle. Nor do supporters of the Vichy government feel quite the entente cordiale with the British Embassy as formerly.

COMPARED TO THE difficulties of traveling abroad these days, a trek over the Sahara barefoot sounds like a picnic. A friend who must go to Switzerland for one day of important business was describing the complications. The eastbound flights of the Clipper, formerly scantily filled, are now booked to capacity, and he must wait two weeks for a reservation. To get a Portuguese visa, he has first to obtain visas from France and Spain. An overcrowded Portugal is not in a very hospitable mood these days and wants every foreigner to get out as soon as possible. To reach Switzerland, he is met at the French border by a sealed bus run by the Swiss government, the trains being on a spasmodic schedule or none at all. And to get back to this country, he must pay the American Export Line $317. In return for this sizable sum, the officials promise him only a mattress with no guarantee as to where on the ship he can put it!

Mrs. A. I. duPont Guest of Honor At Luncheon

Mrs. Claude Pepper Is Hostess at Party In Her Apartment

Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, of Wilmington, Del., who came to town yesterday to attend the Goodrich-Baxter wedding, was honor guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, in their apartment at 1601 Crescent place.

Small and informal, the party that got under way at 1 o'clock and was still going strong a couple of hours later. Mrs. duPont, just here for a day, returned home last night. Always on the wing, by her own admission, she plans to be off to the banker's convention in Atlantic City this weekend, but hopes to get back to Washington for a longer stay later.

New Cabinet Hostess Is Among Guests

It wasn't planned as a party for Texans, but the luncheon turned out to be almost exclusively a Lone Star State fete. Mrs. duPont has lived in Texas and so has six others in the company of ten. "It's all a coincidence," said the hostess who, of course, is from Florida.

However, among those present who have called Texas "home" one time or another were Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Lady Lewis, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller. Mrs. O. W. McNeese, another guest, said she felt as if she "had a perfect right to be present," since she originally "came from next-door, Louisiana."

Christy Portrait Is Admired

Miss Pauletta Guffey and the hostess were the only two there who had no connection with Texas. Mrs. Pepper, incidentally, was trimly turned out in a tailored blue chiffon frock, set off with a white collar. She looked every bit as pretty as she does in that handsome Howard Chandler Christy portrait of her that all the guests admired. A Christy portrait of Senator Pepper hangs in an adjoining room.

Mrs. duPont, who wore a black failled frock trimmed in white and a smart black felt beret-effect hat, had an interesting story to tell about her horse, Time-of-War, who has been winning race after race ever since she purchased him at auction some time ago.

Van Roijens Buy Country Place

Blueprints are occupying the time of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dudley van Roijen who are planning to build on 794 acres they purchased recently near Warrenton, Va.

The Van Roijens will add a diplomatic flavor to the hunt country set for he is the son of the late Jan Herman van Roijen, who served for seven years as Minister of the Netherlands in Washington. His mother, the late Mrs. Van Roijen, was the former Miss Albertina Taylor Winthrop, of Boston.

The place is known as St. Leonard's. It was once the property of Judge Barton Paine, a prominent Virginian, who gave it jointly to William and Mary College, Washington and Lee University and the American Red Cross.

Mrs. Van Roijen is the former Miss Hildegarde Portner Graham, daughter of Mrs. Augustine L. Humes, of New York City, and of Lieut. Comdr. Lorimer C. Graham, U. S. N. The Van Roijens were married two years ago in New York.

Smiths Entertain For Mary Holmes And Her Fiance

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kingsbury Smith entertained at cocktails yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Mary Catherine Holmes and Dr. Dana Coman, of New York, who will be married in St. John's Church this afternoon.

Following the party Dr. Coman was guest of honor at a stag dinner given last night by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter at his home. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. George R. Holmes.

Berles Entertain Chilean Official

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolph Berle entertained at a dinner party last evening in honor of the Minister of Public Works of Chile, Oscar Schnake, and Senora de Schnake.

The Berles entertained at Single Oakes, their home on Cathedral avenue. Among the guests were Dr. Edward Ernst, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Mary Winslow and Mrs. John Enochs.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope are spending a few days at the Shoreham while their new home at 2310 Woodland drive is being made ready for occupancy.

The Power Commissioner and Mrs. Basil Manly have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. William Merriman, of Oakland, Calif.

Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner has canceled the Midshipmen-Cadet ball which was to have been held at the Mayflower Hotel this year on December 26. The fete has been canceled due to the fact that the cadets and midshipmen will have no Christmas leave this year.

Mrs. H. Thomas Allen was guest of honor at a surprise shower given last evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Becker on Connecticut avenue. The bride was the former Miss Margaret Brown, of Arlington, Va.

Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, debutante daughter of Commander and Mrs. Allen L. Price and Miss Mary Dulany Glenn, of Bernardsville, N. J., will be guests of honor at a luncheon Octobr 1 in the Louis Seize room of the Shoreham. Hostess at the luncheon will be Miss Price's cousin, Mrs. Virgil Green Damon, of New York.

Mrs. David J. Dunigan has returned from Gibson Island and has taken an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Dunigan's daughter, Helen Marie, will attend Sacred Heart Academy, while her son, Robert, plans to enroll in London.

Mrs. Whiting Paine, Daughter Are Here

Mrs. Whiting Paine and her daughter, Miss Patricia Eleanor Paine, of Coral Gables, Fla., are at the Shoreham Hotel for ten days.

Miss Paine is the fiancee of John L. Hamilton, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hamilton. Their engagement was announced this summer. The wedding will take place in Coral Gables this fall.

General Trujillo Is Honor Guest At Dominican Legation Reception

Leaders of Society, Diplomatic Circles Attend Party

By Carolyn Bell

Although dapper Gen. Rafael Trujillo was an hour late for his own party it was a tremendous success.

One of the first official functions of the season, the reception had a definite Latin-American flavor. The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza had invited several hundred people to meet Gen. Trujillo, "strong man" of the republic, at the legation.

Early guests were disappointed not to find the general in line. However at 6 o'clock on the dot a battery of flash bulbs went off and the handsome dictator arrived sporting a bow tie. Gen. Trujillo is here as a "special envoy" to sign a treaty with this country furthering Pan-American relations. Although the signing was scheduled for yesterday it was postponed until today.

Senora de Pastoriza Receives With Minister

Wearing a pink crepe gown edged in gold embroidery, Senora de Pastoriza received with the minister. Secretary of the Presidency J. M. Bonetti from Santo Domingo received with his hosts. He was accompanied by Senora de Bonetti. Also in line were Dr. and Senora de Brea, son-in-law and daughter of Gen. Trujillo. An attractive dark-eyed Latin, Senora de Brea wore a dull green frock and matching hat with flowing veil.

Greetings were in order for many guests recenily returned to town from various resorts. Chatting together just inside the door were Robert Woods Bliss and Senor de Espil, chic as always. The Mexican Ambassador shook hands on all sides as he traveled through the dining room to the miniature bar on the sun porch.

Ambassador of Ecuador Among Those Present

Bright yellow chrysanthemums decked the piano in the attractive drawing room. Matilde Pastoriza, daughter of the Minister and Senora Pastoriza, dashed here and there assisting guests. Also playing host were the two Pastoriza boys, Andres and Tomas. The Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro were there as were the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Rodriguez, the Minister of Chile, Don Alberto Cabero and the Charge d'Affaires of Germany and Frau Thomsen. Frau Thomsen, who defied the arrival of autumn in a white ensemble, went into raptures over her recent vacation in Colorado.

Mrs. Robert Jackson Is an Early Arrival

Many guests gathered in the dining room where a splendid repast had been laid. The table was centered with scarlet roses. There were shrimp and artichoke, to be dipped in mayonnaise, hot rolls and sandwiches as well as a varied assortment of sweets topped by ice cream.

Mrs. Robert Jackson, Is Among Early Arrivals at Affair

Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, was among the early arrivals. Others there were Senora de Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Gen. and Mrs. Albert Lyman Cox, Senator Theodore Greene, Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, and the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope.

Gathered in the small den, where an impromptu bar had been put up, were a group of young people. Blonde Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchinson whose lipstick red frock was topped by a swooping black hat chatted with Tony Montero. Richard Hutchison was not far away talking to Marguerite Montero and Miss Meredith Howard. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Albertini, Mrs. Moran Drury, sporting orchids, Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Col. and Mrs. Joseph Fegan, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Vera, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Benton, and Mrs. Catherine Connor swathed in a dramatic veil.

Garbed in a cool white linen suit, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, of the Pan-American Union, attended the party as did Mrs. John Shugrue, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Abbot McGinnis, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Adolph Berle and Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, who delighted over their latest grandchild who arrived on Sunday.

Notables See Play Open

While front-page notables were pricked with "Pins and Needles" last night, a number of social celebrities had a 17-lesson course in "Social Significance."

The event was the opening of Labor Stage's new musical review at the National Theater; and also, the opening of Washington's theater season for 1940-41. Not noticeably a tophat and tiara audience, the turnout nevertheless had its share of names well known in Washington circles.

Occupying their regular box were Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, who had with them the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck was there with Mme. C. V. Soong, of China. Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph were seen in the crowd; also Miss Kathryn Lewis, who particularly enjoyed the skit in which her father, John L. Lewis, was lampooned; Mrs. A. D. Lewis, Mrs. Irene Calwell, who arrived with Mrs. Albert Warner, Jerome Frank and Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell.

Among others there were Dr. and Mrs. Frank B. Schultz, the former of whom is directing The Villagers, new Falls Church dramatic group; Col. and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, just back from California; Mrs. J. Sim Lee, Mrs. Ernest G. Walker and Mannix Walker.

Dr. Bloedorn Gives Luncheon In Honor of Dr. C. S. White

Dr. Charles Stanley White was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday given at the Army and Navy Club by Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the school of medicine of George Washington University.

The luncheon followed the opening assembly of the academic year at the school of medicine at which Dr. White delivered the principal address. His subject was "A Medical Partnership."

Other guests at the luncheon were Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university; Harry Cassell Davis, Henry Parsons Erwin, Joshua Evans, jr., Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, Walter R. Tuckerman, Brig. Gen. Raymond F. Metcalfe, Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Cumming, Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland, Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Col. J. F. Siler, Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Admiral E. R. Stitt, Rear Admiral Harold W. Smith, Capt. Dallas G. Sutton, Dr. E. A. Bocock, Dr. Thomas Parran, Dr. P. S. Rossiter, Dr. George C. Ruhland, the Rev. A. J. McCartney and Dr George B. Jenkins.

C. L. Higginbotham Visits Washington On Way to Georgit

Cabell Lee Higginbotham is en route to Atlanta, where he will attend the University of Georgia. During his stay in Washington from New York he was the guest of Mrs. Leo Kasehagen.

For the last few years Mr. Higginbotham, whose home is with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sweeny, in New York, spent his vacations abroad. His aunt, Mrs. Carpenter Holland-Grimith, maintains a home in Biddenham Close, England.

Mrs. Kasehagen will spend this week in New York where she plans to visit the World's Fair. She will be on hand tomorrow for the "Mary Ball, Mother of Washington, Day," sponsored by the National Society, Daughters of the American Colonists, of which she is State corresponding secretary for the District of Columbia Chapter. During her stay in New York Mrs. Kasehagen will be the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery Sweeny, at their home on Long Island.

Women Told of Drive Against Malnutrition

Dr. Harriet Elliot, of Defense Board, Describes Underfeeding as Menace To National Welfare in Emergency

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

Undernourishment and malnutrition are two subversive elements against which part of the national defense program is being directed, Dr. Harriet Elliott, head of the consumer division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, told members of the Business and Professional Women's Club last night.

Addressing a dinner at the Admiral Club, she declared that "nearly 40 per cent of our population is suffering from malnutrition. Hungry, undernourished people do not make for strong defense. We have a definite responsibility for raising standards which are dangerously low. We are working through such organizations as yours, the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, Public Health Nurses and many others for a coordinated program to raise nutritional levels, particularly where low levels directly undermine the effectiveness of defense or are themselves a defence menace."

"Total defense means that every one has a stake in the preparation and execution of our defense program," said Dr. Elliott. "This is the first time that in a national emergency we have considered human values and military needs together and tried to coordinate them. Modern defense demands this action. The efficiency of military preparations, the physical fitness of all the people and the morale and stamina of every individual in the country must be considred if total preparation is to be achieved."

Dr. Elliott discussed the organization of the Defense Commission and its seven main fields of activity, explaining that the division acts as a unit and that the work in the various divisions is coordinated to evolve a well-balanced program of defense.

The consumer division, of which she is in charge, makes recommendations to the commission which balances military and civilian needs, encourages the free flow of consumer goods, takes steps to prevent unwarranted price increases and to promote health and welfare.

In cooperation with the Consumer Counsel of the Department of Agriculture, the consumer division is now publishing a special issue of the Consumers' Guide, she said, to call attention to the necessity for a program that will wipe out undernourishment and malnutrition.

Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor, who was also a guest of honor at the dinner and spoke briefly, urged that women as well as men who are in need of employment, be given opportunities for work in the program of expanded production. She emphasized that efficient production where women are involved, calls for their employment at jobs they can do well, under safe working conditions and with sound labor policies.

Dr. Florence Armstrong, new president of the club, presided at the meeting and introduced Miss Anderson. Dr. Elliott was introduced by Mrs. Jewell Swofford.

Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, who is a member of Dr. Elliott's staff, and presidents of business and professional women's clubs in nearby Maryland and Virginia were among those who attended.

The club is preparing for the observance of National Business Women's Week, October 6 to 12. In that connection it has received posters from national headquarters, one of them showing a businesswoman casting her ballot. One of the subjects of discussion last night was what to do with the posters in the voteless District. It was suggested that the inscription be made to read "Vote but don't try it here."

Women's American Ort Unit Meets Tomorrow

An open meeting of the Washington Chapter of Women's American Ort will be held tomorrow night at 8:15 in the little auditorium of the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, with Aron B. Tart, of New York, as speaker.

Panhellenic Alumnae Open Fall Season

A dinner meeting tomorrow night at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women will open the season for the Panhellenic Alumnae Association of Washington.

Delegates, alternates and presidents of the 22 local sororities associated with the National Panhellenic Alumnae Association will attend.

Mrs. Preston Kavanagh, of Kappa Alpha Theta, is president of the association this year. Serving with her are Mrs. Floyd Rothballer, of Kappa Gamma, vice president; Mrs. Richard Tatlow, Delta Gamma, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. L. Gilfillan, of Alpha Phi, recording secretary; Mrs. James A. Rolls, Gamma Phi Beta, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Williams, Alpha Chi Omega.

In addition to continuing the social planning meetings, including city, professional and college groups, which were inaugurated last year, the association plans the establishment of a speakers' bureau. Each sorority will list members prominent in their fields. From this group the different sororities will be able to choose speakers.

As has been the custom in previous years, the association will have a formal luncheon in the spring, with a speaker of national note. This season, Richmond, Baltimore and Annapolis representatives of Greek letter societies will be invited to attend.

Plans already are under way for the luncheon. Committees include: Speakers, Mrs. George C. Ober, Pi Beta Phi, chairman; Mrs. Vaughn Huse, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Mrs. Rothballer; decorations, Miss Zoe McFadden, Delta Zeta; finance, Mrs. Rolls; hostess and speakers' table, Miss Louise Jaquette, Phi Mu; hotel arrangements, Mrs. Ronald A. Cox, Delta Delta; invitations, Mrs. Judson Cobb, Beta Sigma Omicron; publicity, Edythe MacPherson, Phi Omega Pi.

Pi Beta Phi Juniors Plan 'Cookie Shine'

Members of the Junior Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi will give a sorority "cookie shine" at 8 o'clock tonight at the home of Miss Betty Rose, 7315 Fifteenth place.

This will be the second regular meeting of the Junior Club for the 1940-41 season. Pi Phi alumnae in the vicinity who are interested in the junior group's activities and would like to have transportation to the "cookie shine" are to communicate with Mrs. Victor Knoop, president of the club, or with Miss Elsa Winters.

D. A. R. Provides Two Ambulances For Britain

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has forwarded funds for two ambulances for use in caring for wounded civilians in Britain, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, has announced. The Walter Hines Page Chapter of the D. A. R. in London has joined with other Americans residing in England in an effort to provide ambulances especially for civilians injured in raids.

"There has been no drive for these funds," Mrs. Robert said. "They are gifts from chapters and individuals in many States who want to share in this work of their fellow members in Britain. Additional contributions are being received daily."

"Units to work for the American Red Cross have been organized in nearly every State," Mrs. Robert added. "Individual members are interesting themselves in the cause of receiving children from war-torn areas. One chapter in Ohio has deferred the conversion into a museum of a historic tavern in its possession and has arranged with the cooperation of the community to house 20 refugee children in this building for the duration of the war."

Undernourishment and Malnutrition Nation's Serious Subversive Elements

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

LAST SPRING, May 14, to be exact, there was a private preview of Melanie Aslanian's adaptation of Schiller's "Mary Stuart" in the studio of Theodora Irvine, in New York.

Miss Aslanian herself took the leading role and at the end of the play Miss Irvine told her she could think of nothing but Eleonora Duse during the performance.

"Miss Irvine wrote of her afterwards: "Miss Aslanian has a strange, haunting quality that is reminiscent of Eleonora Duse. Her hands are lovely and have something of the same sensitiveness and delicacy as Duse's.

"Miss Aslanian conveys her thoughts with a fine economy of gesture. She is a very appealing actress, with an unusual quality that deeply moves her audience."

Miss Aslanian, who has under way plans for production of the play on Broadway, is at present in Washington with her husband, Leonard Nils Waldal, and may make an appearance here before returning to New York later in the fall.

A NATIVE of Constantinople, the young actress came to this country with her parents in 1921. Her father, a high official in the Imperial Ottoman Bank, was forced to leave as a result of political changes following the World War.

The family settled in Hinsdale, Mont., where Melanie mastered English and won honors not only in her school work but in debate and music. It was the winning of an essay contest conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs that gave her her first public acclaim. Then she was invited to address a regional meeting of the American Association of the University Women in Missoula and this encouraged her still further. As a student at the University of Montana she led her class of 500 and became well known as a singer over the university radio station.

Coming East to Boston with her mother in 1928, she entered Boston University on a scholarship and there took English, dramatic art, philosophy, social science and medicine. Her professor in each subject urged her to make that her profession. The decision came after her portrayal of Ophelia in the class of Prof. Agnes Knox Black. Prof. Black, predicting a great career for her, sent her to Clayton Gilbert, head of the drama department of the New England Conservatory of Music.

LATER she was granted a two-year scholarship by the Leopold Schepp Foundation for graduate study of play production at Columbia University, and Jane Manner took her as a protege for the study of interpretive reading. She was also at that time a member of the Morningside Players.

A nervous breakdown as a result of her heavy work and her mother's opposition to a stage career for her interrupted her progress. On her recovery she received an offer to teach on the faculty of the Cornish School of Drama in Seattle. Following this she was head director of the Junior Educational Theater there, a civic project.

Later she launched herself as an independent producer, presenting "Pinky and the Fairies" in connection with the annual Potlatch Festival in Seattle, with eminent success.

Another illness, the death of her father and the illness of her mother coming at close intervals interrupted her career again and again, just at the time when rare opportunities were about to open for her. In 1936 she was married and went to California to live.

51 Capital Homes Await Young Refugees From Europe's War

Officials of the District branch of the United States committee for the care of European children were trying to learn yesterday whether any of the children lost in the torpedoing of a liner last Tuesday had been bound for Washington.

No children requested through the agency of the committee have arrived here, said Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman of the local unit.

Fifty-one homes have been offered to refugee children by families in Washington and vicinity.

Information on the identity of children lost can reach the local branch only through the central New York office of the committee, it was explained.

Because of numerous requests for information on how to obtain refugee children received recently, Mrs. O'Connor outlined these steps:

1. An interview with a member of the staff of the committee at its headquarters, 1101 M street northwest.

2. A signed affidavit guaranteeing that the child will not become a public charge, in a form acceptable to the State Department.

3. A payment of $63—$10.50 for head and visa tax; $2.50 for credit investigation; $50 as a trust fund.

4. Visitation of the home by a social service worker. Protestant homes are visited by a representative of the Children's Protective Association; Catholic homes by Catholic Charities, and Jewish homes by the Jewish Social Service agency. At this time two references must be given. They will be visited, as well as the family physician.

5. When a child is available to the family desiring one, he first can be visited at the New York reception center before being taken permanently.

6. After a child has been placed with a family he will be visited regularly by a social service worker.

In the case of a "specified" child requested by an American family, a visa for his entrance can be obtained in 48 hours, "while it would take two months to obtain entrance paper through regular consul channels," Mrs. O'Connor said.

British Effort To Seize Dakar Gratifies U. S.

African Port Held Most Likely Base For Attack on Brazil

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

Because of the strategic position of Dakar, Senegal, in relation to the security of the Western Hemisphere, official Washington last night was unofficially pleased to learn of the British attack on that port and the intention of Britain to establish a friendly French regime there under Gen. De Gaulle.

Ever since the German victory over France Dakar has been regarded as the most likely point from which an eventual Nazi attack against Latin America could be launched, lying as it does on the westermost point of the African bulge toward South America and only about 1,700 miles from Natal, Brazil.

Reports that German technicians and experts had actually landed at this French African jumping-off place led the State Department recently to order a consular observer there. This far, officials said yesterday, no reports have been received from him.

With airports already established along the Brazilian coasts and German airlines in Brazil having access to them, it was felt Dakar offered a fine springboard for air as well as possible naval attacks on Brazil, in conjunction with a Nazi-inspired internal movement in the South American country.

With the British, or those French elements acting as their allies, in possession of Dakar, the danger of Nazi attacks on the Americas would be greatly diminished, officials privately believe. There has been talk in diplomatic circles in recent days that the United States Navy would like the use of the British port of Freetown, Sierra Leone, commanding Dakar from the South.

Washington, however, looked upon it as one of the tragedies of Nazi aspirations for world domination that the French, on the same day, were fighting the British at Dakar and the Japanese, who have been markedly unfriendly to the British in French Indo-China.

New Uprisings Break Out in Mexico

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Mexico City, Sept. 23.—While a small band of insurgents in the State of Chihuahua are still on the run, hotly pursued by federal forces, news now has leaked out that trouble has started in at least three other states, where federal troops have taken the field against several incipient attempts at revolt.

The revolutionary movements, though numerous, are at present hardly on a scale to cause much alarm since not more than some scores or at most some hundreds of men are involved in any of them, and they are all unrelated and scattered. It is thought that unless fresh outbreaks complicate the situation the government should be able to reestablish order without much difficulty.

[Mexico City newspapers said the small bands of rebels were sympathizers with Gen. Juan Almazan, claimant to the Presidency, the Associated Press reported.]

Five armed bands are known to be operating in the State of Tamaulipas. In this state six rebels belonging to a band commanded by Romulo Garcia, surrendered in Huetusco. The air force is searching for another group commanded by Fulgencio Jasso. A third group commanded by Col. Macario Castro offered to surrender in Palmillas and some of its men already have done so in Jaumasco.

In the same neighborhood eight men belonging to a band commanded by Venturo Contreras were captured, and in the Irapuato region troops were sent out against a band that had risen in arms and taken to the hills.

The other two states where military operations are in progress are Puebla and Michoacan. In Puebla a small group of insurgents are being pursued in the region of Zapotitlan Lagunas. In Michoacan one small band surrendered near Llano, after being bombed by airplanes, while another group composed of 150 men were surprised by federal troops while advancing on Huetano and were obliged to disperse. Many were either caught or surrendered.

Italian Drive Brings Martial Law in Egypt

British Fleet, R. A. F. Pound Fascist Army Moving on Suez Canal

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 23.—Italian armed penetration of her territory roused neutral Egypt to a declaration of martial law today while British units, acting under a military alliance, hammered at Fascist invasion bases.

The British fleet and the Royal Air Foce, fighting Italian columns heading eastward toward the vital Suez Canal, declared they had bombarded "successfully" newly established positions along the invasion route.

Though martial law was invoked by a cabinet head pledged against immediate war, the Saadist Party, a nationalistic minority, was reported attempting to arrange a special session of Parliament to settle the issue of war or peace.

Egyptian authorities pushed a roundup of all Italians as a precautionary measure. Cairo officials alone were reported to have detained 7,000.

Saturday four members of the party resigned over the failure of Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha to consider a declaration of war, asserting war is to be preferred to the "shame and cowardice of counting on others" to defend Egypt.

The British declared their Mediterranean fleet Sunday had followed up last week's attacks by again pounding newly-established positions at Sidi Barrani, 240 miles west of Alexandria. Italian camps and supply dumps were the target of scores of shells.

The Italians apparently were caught by surprise, the British declared, and now Marshal Rodolfo Graziani must reorganize his positions before the advance can be attempted again.

[An Italian communique declared the fire of the British fleet caused no casualties at Sidi Barrani and damaged only "various dwellings."]

The British Royal Air Force reported "a raid on Benghasi harbor Saturday night resulted in a direct hit on a ship. Bombs also were dropped on warehouses alongside the mole. Fire broke out among the warehouses." Raids on half a dozen Italian air fields were also reported.

"There have been two enemy raids on Aden with no damage," the R. A. F. said.

Malta Heavily Bombed

Rome, Sept. 23 (AP).—Military reports emphasized today a heavy Italian air bombardment of the British naval base at Malta.

Amplifying a high command communique, which said merely that a large fire resulted from a hit on a supply dump at Malta's Micabba air base, Stefani, official Italian news agency, detailed extensive damage.

Two underground gasoline tanks were destroyed in the attack yesterday, it said, declaring that the raid was aimed at completing devastation of fields, buildings and supplies begun in previous raids. Two buildings were seen to blow up, while flames from the burning supply dump set fire to others, the newspaper, La Tribuna said.

The high command acknowledged that "one empty steamer of ours" was sunk by a British submarine off the Italian west coast, and declared that a British cruiser, previously reported torpedoed, now is known to have been sunk.

For the second successive day, its communique reported, both sides' planes bombed the other's ground forces in Africa.

British to Talk Trade With S. A.

London, Sept. 23.—The British, with United States approval, are sending a strong diplomatic-trade mission to tour the South American Continent next month under the 74-year-old Marquess of Willingdon, former viceroy of India.

The mission hopes to arrange for large stocks of goods to be sent to the Argentine for "spot sale," thus to avoid shipping delays and at the same time counter German propaganda that Britain is unable to deliver goods because she has just about lost the war.

Removal of British Children To Continue, Despite Disaster

New Study of Means to Convoy Ships In Safety Predicted; Destroyers Obtained From U. S. May Help, Paper Hints

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 23.—Although the British public was numbed by the news that the Germans had torpedoed a liner trying to take children safely to havens far away from the scenes of death and destruction, the overseas evacuation will continue, it was learned today.

To date, two ships taking children away from this country have been torpedoed, but in the first instance not a single child was lost. It was pointed out that eight other ships, one of which carried 500 youngsters, reached their destinations safely.

More than 3,000 children now are enjoying life in new homes, most of them in Canada, and several hundred in South Africa.

The authoritative London Times predicted a new study of means of safely convoying the ships and said, "New value and emphasis is lent to the acquisition of 50 United States destroyers."

[Appealing for more offers of "foster homes" in this country, Marshall Field, president of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, announced today that his group had arranged four more sailings and "as far as I know, these sailings will stand," the Associated Press said.

[Field said that the torpedoed ship, bound for Canada, was not carrying children evacuated by his committee. Private advices to a marine source here reported the vessel was the City of Benares, 11,081 tons.]

New York, Sept. 23.—Rogers S. Lamont, a former partner in the Wall street law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell was almost "instantly killed" in action during the British evacuation of Dunkerque, according to an announcement made today by John Foster Dulles, a member of the firm.

Lamont, 40, resigned from the law firm a year ago and went to London, where, after taking the oath of allegiance to King George VI, he became a military cadet. After serving in a training school for the artillery he was commissioned as a captain in the Tenth Field Regiment.

Vichy, Sept. 23.—Specific details are now obtainable on the categories of refugees not to be permitted to return to the occupied zone by the German authorities. They are: Jews by race (regardless of religion), Poles, Czechs, Moroccans, black races, natives of Martinique, Indo-Chinese and in general "all bronzed races, including Tunisians and Algerians."

Tokyo, Sept. 23 (AP).—The foreign office today protested the arrest of six Japanese, including a Japanese consulate employe, by the British at Singapore.

(Singapore dispatches said four had been released, but that two others, including the consulate employe, were charged with violating the colony's antiespionage law.)

The foreign office accused Singapore authorities of attempting to secure possession of certain "secret documents."

Istanbul, Turkey, Sept. 23 (AP).—Forty-four Turkish army and naval officers left Saturday for the United States to study technical subjects at various universities. Most Turkish officers studied in Germany before the war.

Col. Harper's Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Retired D. C. Banker Served as Director Of Power Company

Funeral services for Col. Robert N. Harper, 79, retired banker who died early yesterday in Georgetown Hospital, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. He had been ill nearly six months.

Col. Harper was active in District banking circles for nearly 30 years, and was the last president of the now defunct District National Bank. His residence was the Wardman Park Hotel.

Born in 1861 near Leesburg, Va., he was educated at the Leesburg Academy, and later attended the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, where he received the degree of Ph. D.

In 1886 he moved to the District, and in 1900 was a delegate from Washington to the Democratic National Convention and again in 1920. His title of colonel was obtained while serving as surgeon general on the staff of Gov. Montague of Virginia.

Active in public enterprise, Col. Harper served on the inauguration committee of President Wilson in 1913 and 1917, and was chairman of the civic section at the second inauguration of President Roosevelt in 1937. He was the first president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce and was noted for his efforts to obtain a convention hall for the District.

At the time of his death he was a director of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Peoples National Bank in Leesburg.

He leaves a son, William J. Harper, of Washington; and a brother, Dr. Charles E. Harper, of Danville, Va. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Wallace Assails 'High Finance,' 'Monstrosities'

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Sept. 23.—Henry A. Wallace struck at "high finance" and "financial monstrosities known as holding companies" in a campaign speech here tonight. He declared that the New Deal has "rescued the capitalist system of production, which had been almost killed by the effects of financial management before 1933."

The Democratic Vice Presidential nominee and former Secretary of Agriculture, in his prepared address, termed capitalist enterprise "the most efficient system" of producing and selling goods and services and asserted that the "great collapse" of 1929 showed the need for protecting the system "against the growing powers of high finance."

Drawing a distinction between "capitalism" and "finance," he said that "often the profits of finance are most easily gained by controlling production, by forming monopolies and to hold up prices, by creating artificial scarcity."

"I do not like production control," he continued, referring to his administration of a system of production control in agriculture, "but with so much of industry successfully cutting production and pegging prices, there was no other way to save the farmers from ruin, especially when a great market for farm products overseas suddenly disappears."

As an example "of how a whole flock of sound, productive capitalistic enterprises can be held in the meshes of one of those financial monstrosities known as holding companies," Wallace cited the Associated Gas & Electric Co., which is now in receivership.

"It is a long and slow process," he said, "to repair the damage done to free capitalist enterprise by the growth and collapse of financial structures such as the Associated Gas & Electric system."

House Votes $20,000,000 for Construction in District Area

Fifth and G streets northwest, which presently serves as a G. A. O. center, so that all G. A. O. offices could be placed in it. This was to cost $4,700,000. Expansion of G. A. O. personnel, the committee explained, made remodeling impractical. Thus the necessity for a new, large building.

The two three-story office structures will be of the concrete type, similar to the Navy and Munitions buildings along Constitution avenue. One of these will be located in Arlington County and used by the Navy Department; the other may also be built outside the city, and is expected to serve as a substitute for a proposed $8,550,000 East Capitol street office building, which was eliminated by the Appropriations Committee.

"The committee feels that with the great need for space that will occur during the life of this emergency and with undoubted legacy of some permanent space need that will remain after the passage of the emergency," the report stated," that Congress should not provide for all of the Federal office needs in Washington from now on with monumental or semi-monumental buildings on expensive sites.

"A change in program is needed both in the interest of conservation of funds and the avoidance of excessive traffic congestion. Some activities must be housed in suburban areas on less expensive land and with less traffic problems."

Besides the three office buildings, the supplemental supply bill has $1,500,000 for a west central heating plant to be located on Government land north of K street, between Twenty-ninth street, Rock Creek, the canal and the railroad. The ultimate cost is $3,900,000.

An appropriation of $322,000 was included for the acquisition of property to permit the widening of Independence avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets and the installation of car lines to serve the new Social Security, Railroad Retirement and Census buildings.

The House bill allows $2,700,000 for the construction of five additional hangars and appurtenances at Washington National Airport, along with $80,000,000 for the development of military and civil landing fields in the United States and Territories.

The latter program, which will be financed entirely by the Federal Government, will cost more than $500,000,000 ultimately, the report stated.

The Appropriations Committee expressed disappointment that the proposed rates for concessions at Washington National Airport are so low that the anticipated net revenue is only $123,000 a year, whereas the total cost of the airport to the government is $13,600,000.

In an effort to boost this revenue in the future, the committee inserted a provision limiting leases on the hangars to three years and on all concessions but the restaurant to five years. No explanation was given for the exception.

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, in a speech during the general debate, defended the large investment in the airport on the ground that it should "serve as a model for the metropolitan terminals throughout the United States."

He praised Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the Interdepartmental Engineering Commission, for the speed with which the flying field has been built and called attention to the growing air traffic in Washington.

District appropriations of $9,320.99 in the bill included $3,600 for Washington's pro rata contribution to the expenses of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, a project set up to reduce pollution.

The committee clipped $400,000 from a $500,000 budget estimate asked by the Civil Service Commission to enforce the Hatch Act among the State agencies which receive Federal funds. The report explained that the commission admitted that it didn't know how much money was needed but had contemplated adding 155 employes. The committee said $100,000 was but aguess, but at least would last until Congress met again in January.

The House bill allows ..125,000 to enable the Federal Communications Commission to perform its duties, heretofore blocked by lack of funds, for regulation of the telephone industry and $175,000 for the relocation of primary monitoring radio stations which will aid in checking up on unauthorized radio communications.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

District Students Increase by 800

Decrease, However, Is Shown in Number Of White Pupils

(Pictures On Picture Page.)

A total of 84,287 students, an increase of 800 over the first day of last session, flocked to District public schools for the opening yesterday.

American citizenship in a year of crisis, and traffic safety, were keynotes sounded repeatedly as the schools began organizing the new session's work.

A traffic injury to a 6-year-old boy on the first day of the session served as a warning. Jackie Tyler, pupil at Gales School, received head injuries when struck by an auto at Second and Massachusetts avenue northwest during lunch period.

Decrease in White Pupils

The increase of 1,286 in colored schools was offset by a decrease of 486 in white schools, in comparison of opening day figures of this session and last. White schools yesterday had 52,728 pupils enrolled, and colored schools 31,559.

School officials predicted that enrollment would go to 90,000 by the end of the week.

The opening day brought a celebration for pupils who reported to new buildings—Calvin Coolidge High School and Jefferson Junior High School. Both schools had special opening programs.

A send off for the safety program throughout the school system was given by the American Automobile Association at a breakfast at the Willard Hotel for police coordinators, police officials and school officials. Speakers stressed that the program was off to a more promising start this session, because 200 boy officers of the patrols were given intensive training at camps the last summer.

Night Schools Open

On the heels of the youngsters' enrollment, night schools opened their sessions for older students last night. Expanded opportunities in vocational courses reflected mounting interest in trades related to national defense.

Crippled children, who formerly attended Langdon school, were transferred to the Health School on Allison street, which had been remodeled during the summer for their special use. A therapy room, a room with special rest facilities, a cafeteria for hot lunches, and ramps where the buses unload were some of the features prepared for the 50 children who enrolled yesterday.

At the new Calvin Coolidge High School, approximately 700 students enrolled yesterday, with the number expected to reach 750.

Citizenship Stressed

American citizenship and the part that this school can play in its promotion were stressed by school officials who spoke at the opening assembly at Coolidge yesterday. They were Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the board of education; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent; Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent.

At the new Jefferson Junior High School, approximately 660 students registered, a slight increase over the number on the opening day in the old building last year.

Yesterday's opening served as a homecoming celebration for representatives of former classes at Jefferson. Hugh S. Smith, principal, introduced P. R. Oliver who attended school in the old building in 1874. Alvin Gheen brought greetings from the class of 1924. Abraham Lynn, who was named the outstanding citizen of the school in 1930, returned to play two violin solos.

Cantrell Speaks

The Rev. Harry V. Porter delivered the prayer of dedication. Other speakers included L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools; Mrs. Ellis Cook, retiring president of the Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. J. E. Allison, incoming P.-T. A. president; Miss Mary Stewart, representing retired teachers; Bernard Gilliam, representing new teachers; Retha Ferrell, president of the student body.

Pupils will assemble at the old Jefferson High School building today when schoolbooks, stored there, are given out. With each pupil carrying his share, approximately 5,000 books will be transported easily to the new building several blocks away, the principal said.

At the AAA "safety breakfast" yesterday morning, speakers included Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of public schools; Robert Eaves, chairman of the schools' safety committee; Burton W. Marsh, director of traffic safety and engineering for the AAA; Grant L. Clarke, in charge of safety education for the District division of the AAA; Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District division.

The 13 police coordinators, one from each precinct, who supervise the work of the school safety patrolmen, were present to hear challenges for a year of intensified effort.

Scores of Refugees Enter D. C. Schools

Scores of men and women—refugees from war in Europe—went to school in America for the first time last night as public school night sessions opened with an enrollment of 5,191.

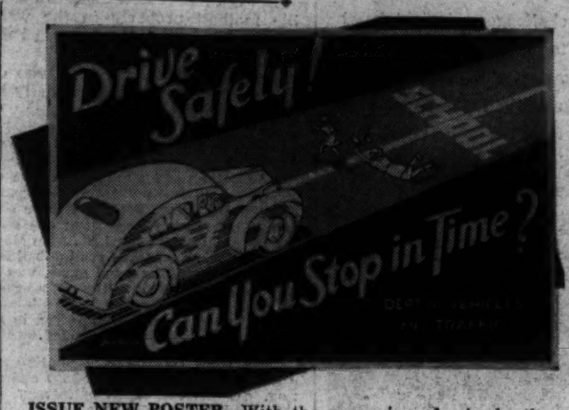
Edward J. Lockwood, director of night schools, said no figures were available on alien attendance, but that he had interviewed more than 30 prior to opening of classes, that the longest any of them had been in America was eight months and that all spoke English with perfect syntax.

Many of the aliens, Lockwood said, are taking courses in oral English to improve their accent.

During the school year the night enrollment will be increased to between 12,000 and 15,000, Lockwood said, but added that the enrollment this year would be lower than last because school shops are filled with students taking instruction for defense industries.

Classes are being conducted at Abbot Vocation School, where 117 enrolled; Chamberlain, 54; Central 11; Hine, 464; McKinley, 1,436; Roosevelt, 1,491; Western, 348, and Webster, 302.

Take Heed, and Play Safe, You Motorists



ISSUE NEW POSTER—With the reopening of schools, the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council yesterday issued its third in a series of safety posters designed to caution motorists against careless driving habits on streets frequented by playing children. The new poster, bearing the sloan, "Drive Safely—Can You Stop in Time?" will be distributed throughout the city by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic

Dog Lovers Pay Tribute To 'Man's Best Friend'

"NICE DOGGIES"—Ann Marie Hutchison and Virginia Briggs, both 3 years old, would be happier if these "pooches" were not in the Pound

"Dogs are more than partially human and must be treated with kindness accordingly," Poundmaster Frank B. Marks told dog lovers at a meeting yesterday at the District Pound which marked the opening of National Dog Week here.

With Wimpy, his favorite spitz, looking on approvingly, Marks said that greater kindness would have saved the lives of most of the 5,287 dogs who were destroyed at the Pound during the past year.

Aurelian Pinney, president of the Humane Society of Panama, told the group that Panamanians generally are kinder to their own pets than people are here, but "seem to care nothing for the welfare of anyone else's dog."

Mrs. Jere Mackie, secretary of the National Capital Kennel Club, urged tags for all dogs to prevent them from being destroyed after they are lost. She asserted she "would rather see a puppy quietly put to sleep for good than be allowed to roam the streets and go hungry."

Among those who attended were Mrs. H. D. Albin, president of the Animal Protection Association, and James P. Briggs, president of the Humane Education Society.

Today, the dog week program will include a talk by Robert E. Acorn, writer of dog stories and local attorney, at the League for Larger Life headquarters, 1414 Sixteenth street northwest, on "Dog Pals I Have Had."

Chairman of the week's events is Arthur Scharfeld, attorney.

Dog Barks Alarm to Rescue Mistress, Tries to Bar Firemen

Snowball, a Spitz-Eskimo huskie, barked out a fire alarm last night that resulted in the rescue of his mistress, overcome by smoke.

But when firemen arrived, his watchdog instincts came to the fore, and he tried to keep them from entering.

The once-white Snowball's barking attracted neighbors' attention to smoke that rendered his mistress, Mrs. Mary Spooner, 37, unconscious as she slept in the flat above a lunchroom at 1006 Seventh street northwest.

Firemen put a ladder up to the window, but the dog's vicious snarls and barks made them pause before they forced their way past him and dragged Mrs. Spooner through the window.

The woman, wife of Lawrence E. Spooner, a cab drived, was revived and went back to bed after the blaze was extinguished. Apparently starting in a trash pile, the flames damaged the entrance steps and landing at the bliding's rear.

Citizens' Unit Offers to Aid Draft Work

Mid-City Body Also Approves Proposed New ABC Rules; Seeks Playground

Mid-City Citizens Association last night voted to offer the services of its members to Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox in connection with the registration of men in the District under the Selective Service Act.

The association also voted to intensify its efforts to obtain a new playground for the area bounded by Florida avenue, H, Ninth and Sixteenth streets northwest.

Approval of the proposed new ABC Board regulations was voted by the association.

To further efforts for cross-town bus service from Brightwood to Brookland, A. J. Driscoll, president of the association, appointed Nathan M. Lubar to push a concerted movement among citizens' associations.

The association voted its approval of the proposal to permit traffic to pass on both sides of street cars' loading platforms, unless two platforms are adjoining. Lubar, who spoke for this motion, said it would help to relieve "bottlenecks."

A letter to Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, expressing appreciation for his services to the District and regret at his defeat in the recent primary election, was authorized by the association.

Dr. F. Thomas Evans, E. Brandstatter and J. L. C. Sullivan were appointed by Driscoll as the nominating committee for the election of officers at the October meeting. George A. Warren, Miss Maud L. Miller and A. F. Wynne were named on an auditing committee.

Mrs. A. G. Black, a volunteer in the speakers' bureau of the Red Cross, made a talk on what the organization means to the average citizen. A group of other volunteer Red Cross workers presented a skit calling attention to the current membership drive. The meeting was held at Thomson School.

Textbooks May Tell Of Voteless District

The fact that citizens of the District do not have a vote should be included in all textbooks in history and civics, "where it is seldom found," Ralph W. Donnelly, of 307 S street northeast, told a meeting of the North Capital Citizens Association at McKinley High School last night.

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, attending the meeting, termed the idea "the most sensible I've ever heard in a suffrage speech."

Claiming that too many District citizens have "a myopic point of view on the question of suffrage," Donnelly asserted that publishers in the textbook field should be approached with the purpose of including the fact that Washington is voteless in future publications.

Estate of Dr. Cole Is Willed to Family

Dr. Charles D. Cole, 58, dentist killed in the plane crash near Leesburg, Va., August 31, left a net estate of more than $100,000 in trust for his family.

Dr. Cole, whose home was 5305 Forty-first street northwest, practiced here for 30 years. Petition for probate of his will, with two codicils, was filed in the District Court yesterday by his wife, Mrs Henrietta Cole, and the National Savings & Trust Co., named as executors.

Dr. Cole directed that the National Savings & Trust Co. hold his estate in trust and pay one-third of the income to Mrs. Cole, one third to his daughter, Mrs. Virginia C. Descher, Bethesda, Md., and divide the remaining third equally among his father, Douglas A. Cole; his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Cole, and his sister, Mary C. Cole, all of Maple Rapids, Mich. Upon the death of all these, the estate is to go to Dr. Cole's descendants.

Plans for Street Projects Told By Whitehurst

Highway Director Addresses Trade Board Traffic Committee

Contemplated highway projects to meet demands of the city's increasing traffic volume were outlined yesterday to the traffic committee of the Board of Trade by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Speaking at a luncheon in O'Donnell's Restaurant, Capt. Whitehurst reported that plans for widening and grade separations at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest and construction of an underpass at Scott Circle already are under way. As future needs develop, he said, the highway department will attempt to keep pace with new roads, bridges and possibly a system of elevated highways connecting the business area with outlying sections.

Among street widening projects planned for 1942, Whitehurst listed: Sixth street northwest from D to M streets; Wisconsin avenue northwest from R to Thirty-seventh street; Third street northwest from H to New York avenue northwest (the truck route through Washington); M street southeast from Fourth to Eleventh street and U street northwest from Tenth to Sixteenth street.

Whitehurst also announced two street paving projects, Massachusetts avenue northwest from Nebraska avenue to the District line, and Alabama avenue southeast from Pennsylvania avenue to the District line. Also scheduled is the extension of South Capitol street from Nichols avenue to the District line.

Whitehurst said results of current surveys on traffic flow and parking facilities will not be available until early next spring.

Chairman P. Y. K. Howat presided at yesterday's meeting, the first on the committee's fall and winter schedule. A record attendance of 87 was reported.

Two Bandits Take Taxi From Driver

Two armed men yesterday took his taxicab and $2.30 from Quincy S. Shrie, 1105 East Capitol street, at the point of a gun after they hired him to drive them from Washington to Chevy Chase, Md., Shrie told Montgomery County Police at Bethesda, Md.

The two men entered the cab at Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest and ordered him to go downtown, then changed their minds and told him to drive to Chevy Chase, Shrie told police. They forced him from the cab in Kenwood and drove away.

G.O.P. Representative Invades Democratic Hall to Campaign

John M. Vorys, a Republican member of the House, made a campaign speech last night at the headquarters of the Democratic Central Committee at the Burlington Hotel.

For his governance—and protection—and for that of his opponent, Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama—Russell Balderson, meeting chairman, laid before the audience of approximately 200 Democrats and 20 friends of Vorys, presumably Republicans, these rules of procedure:

"Willkie's man shall talk first. Each man shall be allowed 15 minutes for his opening speech, five minutes for reply, five minutes for rebuttal, five minutes for surrebuttal and so on until the audience is exhausted at which time both men shall talk at once for five minutes.

"Robert's Rules of Order, Jefferson's Manual and House rules shall cover all points of order and parliamentary inquiry and if these shall not suffice Marquis of Queensberry rules shall govern.

"Willkie's man shall be allowed a bodyguard of ten and a cheering section of three placed as he desires in the hall. The Roosevelt man shall have no bodyguard but the protection of the Democratic Central Committee. He shall be permitted five persons to laugh at his jokes and lead his cheering."

Vorys represented ten qualifications for the Presidency on which he graded each candidate on the basis of ten points for each qualification in what he called a "selective service examination."

The first qualification was voice and the score Roosevelt, 10; Willkie, 0. The second was "the common touch, a quality of understanding the common man which every candidate must have," and again the score was 10-to-0 for Roosevelt "who has touched more common men more times than any man in history."

Another qualification was on ability to pick men. The score on this one went eight for Willkie and two for Roosevelt "because he picked Stimson and Knox."

Patrick attacked Willkie as lacking political experience—"he hasn't even been elected justice of the peace." He called politics a science and declared that even the Republicans do not want Willkie to win because "they know he won't be able to get Congress to work with him and the country will hold them responsible for what happens."

"The stop-Willkie movement failed at Philadelphia," Patrick said, "but the Democrats are going to join them." He closed with praise for Vory's "sportsmanship and courage."

'Pat' Prochnik Sings in Band 'To Take Care' of Herself

Miss Patricia Prochnik, 18-year-old debutante daughter of former Austrian Minister Edgar L. G. Prochnik, is aware that heaven will protect the working girl but she wants to say a word on her own account.

She didn't take to singing with a nationally known dance orchestra to help support her family, she said here yesterday, in spite of reports to that effect.

Many, she said, accept such a thing as true, "although, of course, my friends know better." The report has embarrassed the family, she said. And it has saddened the polite Miss Prochnik.

She did not join the band either in "search for publicity or through any flare for the bright lights," she explained, "but simply and entirely because I wanted to do as any normal girl would want to do—stand on my own feet."

She had been quoted as having said: "I'm doing it to get my family on its feet. Father is writing a book and it will be at least two years before any money comes in."

What she actually had said "was twisted around," she asserted. The truth of the matter is that she has a contralto voice of considerable range and "I want to see what I can do with it. I want to see how far I can go in that field. I enjoy it, too. I like the American songs I sing. And I want to see if I can really take care of myself."

Aside from this, the record shows that her father, besides writing, has been lecturing at Georgetown University School of Foreign Service since 1938.

Miss Prochnik is visiting briefly at her home, 1813 Twenty-fourth street. On October 3 she is expected to be maid of honor to the "Queen" of the ninth annual Mountain State Forest destival at Elkins, W. Va.

4 Children Are Injured In Accidents

44 Collisions Occur On Crash Squad's Second Day; None Hurt Going to School

Four children were injured yesterday in four of 44 traffic accidents which the police's new Accident Prevention Unit was called on to investigate in its second day of activity.

It was the opening day for District schools, but the more serious accidents, it was understood, did not involve youngsters going to or from classes.

Most severely hurt was John H. Hamilton, 7, of 2309 Virginia avenue northwest, who was taken to Emergency Hospital after a hit-run driver knocked him down at Twenty-second street and Virginia avenue northwest.

Collarbone Fractured

The child was treated for a fractured collarbone and head injuries. James Ellington, 24, of 1214 N street northwest, surrendered to police three hours later and was charged with leaving after colliding and driving after his permit had been suspended.

Two young bicyclists were taken to Garfield Hospital by the drivers of automobiles which struck them.

Calvin Long, 13, of 4317 Kansas avenue northwest, suffered a chest injury at Eighth and Upshur street northwest. The car's driver was listed by police as Benjamin P. Gray, 23, of 6414 Seventh street northwest.

Vance Nessly, 10, of 518 Concord street northwest, was bruised about the hip and arm by a car driven, police reported, by Buford G. Painter, 23, of 708 Longfellow street northwest.

Crossing the street, June Blalock, 3, of 352 W street northwest, was struck by an automobile at Fourth and W streets northwest and taken to Children's Hospital with a head injury. Lemuel T. Duke, 45, of 30 Channing street northwest, drove the car, police said.

Two Accident Prevention Unit cars and two scout cars were called to Fourteenth and Riggs streets northwest about 4 p. m. on a report that a number of persons had been injured in a street car-truck collision.

It turned out, however, that the crash caused only minor injuries to the street car's motorman, Elias Wright, 40, of Brentwood, Md., who was treated for leg injuries at Emegency Hospital and dismissed.

When Is a Shooting Not a Shooting?

An anonymous phone call reporting a shooting at 615 H street northeast brought a scout car, a patrol wagon and three detectives to the restaurant at that address last night. But nary a gunman was in sight.

The call, it was believed, came from a disgruntled customer, who had been turned away because he had had "one too many."

Furr Knocked Out by Armstrong in Fourth

15,000 See Champion Defend Title

D. C. Welterweight Surprises Record Crowd With Dazzling Attack at Start

By Al Hailey
Post Staff Writer

In a desperate attempt to beat Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong at his own game, Phil Furr gambled his all for 3½ rounds last night at Griffith stadium and was bombed into insensibility for his pains.

A howling mob of 15,000 gazed on in amazement as Furr tried to slug it out toe to toe with the colored titleholder in some of the most furious fighting ever seen in a Washington ring.

The 30-year-old former soldier was hammered to the floor twice in the third round and three times in the fourth, but he was fighting purely on instinct from the time of that second knockdown late in the third. The knockout was timed at 1 minute, 45 seconds of the fourth.

Phil fought just the kind of a fight Armstrong wanted him to, but there was nothing else he could do.

Furr Forced to Crouch

Intending to box the champion and keep moving away, Furr had to go into a crouch from the first moment that Armstrong flailed a sizzling barrage of left and right hooks into his body.

In vain hil tried to protect his jaw by thrusting his head forward on Armstrong's shoulder while flailing away with both hands at the champion's body.

But this was all to Hammerin' Hank's liking, and he bulled Furr around, slammed him sick with mauling punches to the stomach, heart and kidney. In close, he shot short jarring uppercuts to the chin.

It was Armstrong's overhand right smash to Philbert's jaw and chin that did the actual knockout work, however, and it was a punch that Phil was wide open for.

Down in Third

Armstrong sent Furr down for no count midway of the third with a short hook to the body that few ringsiders saw, and this seemed to be the signal for him to go into full speed.

As Furr came up, Armstrong was all over him, and he dropped Furr like a sack of salt with that overhand right to the chin. Phil rolled helplessly on the floor, looked around foolishly trying to find his corner. He came up and took another right to the jaw, falling into the ropes as the bell rang.

Furr appeared to come back briefly at the outset of the fourth round, but his arms were heavy and his punching ineffective. Again that overhand right caught him on the chin, and he bounced hard on his knees. The second time Furr went down he jumped right back up, but his eyes were glazed, and Referee Ray Bowen was about ready to stop it when Armstrong clipped him the final time.

This time, Phil was through—knocked out for the first time in his 10-year career in the fight business. He fell flat on his face, tried to rise but couldn't.

Phil Kept Pitching

Despite the fact that he was anywhere from a 5-to-1 to a 25-to-1 underdog in the betting, Phil was in there pitching until the last moment. He actually won the first round when he found that he had to slug it out with Henry to survive.

He couldn't keep the onrushing champion away, and he had to stand in one place and flail away with both hands. The crowd loved it, and they gave Phil a big hand, for none dreamed that nothing but a miracle would win for Furr from the outset.

The paying customers numbered but 13,134, and the net gate was $20,444—the largest gate in Washington in two years. In the collection of Senators, Congressmen, diplomats and socialites who dotted the stadium was Mickey Rooney, the "all-American boy" from Hollywood, but he could not be prevailed upon to take a bow.

Knockouts in Order

Knockouts seemed to be the order of the evening, for in the six-round semifinal, a brown bombshell identified as Buddy Moore, New York heavweight, put the chill on Maynard Daniels, local Marine, in just 2 minutes 55 seconds of the first round.

He sent a smashing right to Daniels' jaw as the round opened and then hammered him with lefts until the Marine was a helpless hulk of battered heavyweight.

A beautiful left straight to the jaw of Everett Rightmire, world's seventh ranking featherweight, sent Rightmire to the happy hunting grounds before the fight was 60 seconds old in the co-semifinal.

Billy Bullock, Washington battler, did the pitching, and when he nailed Rightmire, the Sioux City puncher went out like a light. He sailed halfway through the ropes and when he came back he couldn't stand up.

Landis Is Victor

In the four-round curtain raiser, Ray Landis, 133½, protege of Furr, hammered out a decision over Pedro Sisco, 138½, of Los Angeles. Landis had Sisco in trouble throughout the last two rounds from right-hand smashes to the jaw, but he couldn't finish him. Landis' old cut over his left eye was reopened.

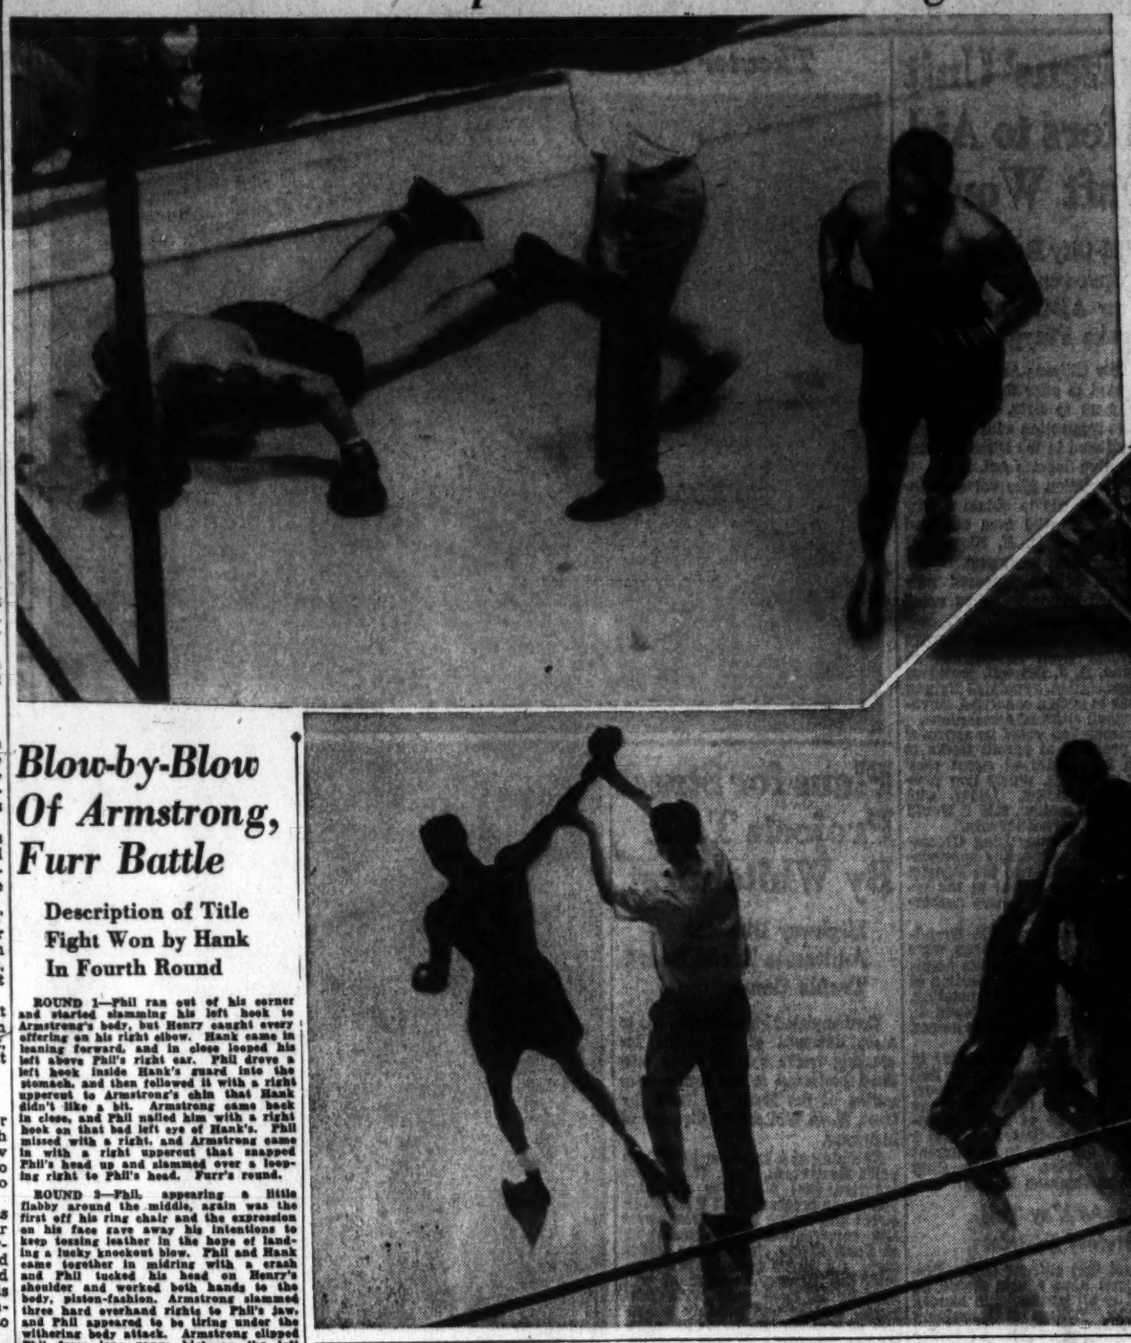
After a dull 6-rounder which saw Tiger Jack Flowers, 159, Washington colored fighter, decision Kid Wolf, 162, also of Washington, Jackie Carter and Justo Jiminez took over the ring and indulged in a slam-bang bit of comedy and bloodshed that included a back flip through the ropes by both boys.

Carter had backed the Mexican into the ropes and was fighting in close, when both suddenly locked, lost their balance and fell end over end into the ringside. Jiminez took the decision.

Northwestern Coach Lauds Second String

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 23 (AP).—Northwestern's green second-string linemen received a pat on the back today from Coach Lyn Waldorf for their fine showing in Saturday's intra-squad game.

Winner—and Still Champion—Walks Out of Ring With Furr Still on Floor



At left—Henry Armstrong strides to his corner with Phil Furr down for the count of ten after 1 minute and 45 seconds of the fourth round last night following the fourth knockdown of the challenger. A right-hand punch to the chin was the finishing blow. Below—Armstrong's hand is raised in token of victory after the ten count, as Furr's handlers lead the beaten challenger out of the ring

Blow-by-Blow Of Armstrong, Furr Battle

ROUND 2—Phil, appearing a little flabby around the middle, again was the first off his ring chair and the expression on his face gave away his intentions to keep tossing leather in the hope of landing a lucky knockout blow. Phil and Hank came together in midring with a crash and Phil tucked his head on Henry's shoulder and worked both hands to the body, piston-fashion. Armstrong slammed three hard overhand rights to Phil's jaw, and Phil appeared to be tiring under the withering body attack. Armstrong clipped Phil from long range high on the left cheek, and he took a hard right hook in return. Phil wasn't wasting a minute, but Armstrong kept hammering Phil with short uppercuts and overhand rights. At the bell Phil appeared tired and he was missing wildly with his left. Armstrong was puffing heavily but apparently unharmed. Armstrong's round.

ROUND 3—Phil greeted the champion with a hard left hook to the cheek and Armstrong responded with a smashing right hook on Phil's jaw. Phil was fighting a desperate fight, and in closed flailed with both arms into the midsection. Phil slipped to the floor one one knee, and then came back up to run into a barrage that had him almost out on his feet. He was fighting just the way Armstrong wanted him to, and he was swinging wildly. Henry stepped back as Phil was swinging weakly with both hands and Armstrong came in with a driving right hook to floor him for a seven count. He was out on his feet and bleeding from a small cut over his left eye when Henry came back at him to knock him onto the ropes, a helpless fighter. Only the bell saved Furr from a knockout and he appeared not to know where or who he was. Armstrong's round.

ROUND 4—Furr came out with new strength to pump his left hook into Armstrong's body and head six times without much effect. Armstrong moved in close, chopped at Phil's body and then slammed him to the canvas with that smashing right to the jaw again for a nine count. Up came Furr only to go down again under that smashing right hook. He came up after no count, only to run into another barrage. He was fighting merely by instinct and could not find his corner for directions. Then came Armstrong's right hook flush on the chin and Furr dropped like a shot. At eight he rose to one knee, teetered precariously and fell back to the canvas as the timekeeper tolled ten.

Furr Gets $3,066 Out of Armstrong Benefit Battle

Here's the way the parties to the scheduled 15-round welterweight championship fight last night at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the Variety Club's welfare fund fared in the financial way:

The fight netted $20,444, and it was split up approximately as follows:

Armstrong, $8,176.60; Furr, $3,066.60; Variety Club welfare fund, $5,622.10; Promoter Joe Turner & Co., $5,622.10. The Variety Club received 50 per cent of the net profits after the fighters had been paid.

Fenelon Wins 48th Running Of Lawrence

Gallahadion Third, Never a Contender; Your Chance Second

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 23.—William Woodward's Fenelon, son of Sir Gallahad 3d, put in his bid for the three-year-old championship today by taking the forty-eighth running of the historic Lawrence Realization at Belmont Park.

Taking command from the start, under neat riding by Jimmy Stout, the bay colt made every pole a winning one, fought off the vaunted stretch rush of Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance and wound up two lengths on top, going away and with plenty of run still left in him.

Five and a half lengths back of the winner, three lengths back of Your Chance and half a length more out of the money came the Kentucky Derby winner, Gallahadion, from Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' stable.

For the stiff struggle it was between Fenelon and Your Chance, the time of 2:44 4-5 for the mile and 5 furlongs was remarkably slow.

For the victory, Fenelon picked up $18,070, boosting his earnings for the year to $49,520. He returned $5.60 for each $2 win ticket, while Your Chance, 7-10 to win, was only $2.30 to place.

In the day's companion feature, J. W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett, at $8.80 for $2, won the Fall High Weight Handicap. He ran the 6 furlongs in the good time of 1:12 2-5. W. L. Brann's Pictor was second and Herbert M. Wolff's Joe Schenck was third.

Dorothy Traung's 78 Wins Qualifying Medal

Former Finalist Paces Women's National Golf Tournament Field at Del Monte, Calif.; Mrs. Myron Davy in Play-Off This Morning

By the Associated Press

Del Monte, Calif., Sept. 23.—Heavy-hitting Dorothy Traung set a two-over par pace today to win medal honors in the qualifying round of the 1940 National Women's Golf Championship.

The buxom San Francisco girl, a finalist in the 1934 championship and co-medalist two years ago, batted around Pebble Beach, as tough a course as they come, in 78. She was out in even par 36 but faltered on the back nine to take a 42. The 6,548-yard course requires a pair of 38s as standard figures.

Aside from Miss Traung's performing, the opening day of firing was distinguished by an overdose of shaky golf. Only three of the 157 starters were able to come in under 80 shots. The other two also were Californians, Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, and Mrs. Frank Russ, of Alameda, who tied at 79. Each turned the first nine in 40 and the second in 39.

Champion Has 84

Defending Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., checked in wit han 84, which is about what she figured to shoot, as evidenced by her practice round scores.

Most of the top notchers were among the 64 qualifying for the first round of the championship flight which opens tomorrow. There were some exceptions, however, notably Miss Codie Austin, of Honolulu, and Joan McGowan, of Los Angeles. Miss Austin, a golfing celebrity as a 15-year-old girl, had four sevens on the first nine for a final 97. Miss McGowan, also posting a 97, chalked up four sevens and an eight.

Mrs. Myron Davy, of Congressional Country Club in Washington, tied seven other players with 93s, and they will play off for two places to th echampionship flight tomorrow morning. Mrs. Davy was out in 44 and back in 49 for the score that made the playoff.

The last players straggled in long after darknes sset in. It proved a severe handicap for the late finishers, but only one, Mrs. Anne Decker, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., failed to complete the round. Tournament officials permitted her to pick up near the eighteenth green, where she lay five. She had two strokes for a 92 and will play out in the morning.

Cards Acquire Zontini, Williams

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Chicago Cardinals announced today the acquisition of Halfback Lou Zontini from the Cleveland Rams and Center Tex Williams from the New York Giants.

Zontini was a Notre Dame regular a year ago, while Williams is an alumnus of Texas Tech. The Cards released Nick Padgen, former Creighton center, to make room for Williams.

The Cardinals, after tying their first two games, face the acid test in their efforts to climb out of the National League cellar in an engagement with the Chicago Bears Wednesday night.

Rain Cools Off Husker Practice

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 23 (AP).—Cool weather finally came today to the University of Nebraska football team, which had been scrimmaging in 95 degree heat—but rain came with it and drove them inside.

Camilli Homer Beats Giants For Dodgers

3-2 Margin Taken With 9th-Inning Blow; N. Y. Lead Fizzles

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 23.—Dolph Camilli blasted a ball into the centerfield stands in the ninth inning today for his twenty-third home run and brought the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-to-2 victory over the New York Giants.

The centerfield stands are 399 feet from home plate and Camilli's tremendous clout landed high up in the second tier.

The Giants were held to seven hits by four pitchers, but got a run in the first and another in the sixth before the Dodgers finally dented Hal Schumacher with two runs in the eighth on a walk, Pete Coscarart's triple and a fly.

Tex Carleton got credit for the victory by pitching the ninth inning and turning in an unassisted double play with the bases loaded.

Armstrong and Furr Swap Tributes; 'Game Guy,' Says Champ; Action Pleases

Long Right in Third Round Was Only Blow That Hurt Champion

A few minutes after they had left with Washington fight fans the most furious toe-to-toe punching spectacle in the history of legalized boxing here, Champion Henry Armstrong and Challenger Phil Furr were swapping mutual tributes in the dressing rooms last night.

"As game a guy as I ever met," said Armstrong as his handlers scissored off the sodden gloves that had earned him his four-round knockout victory.

"He punched too hard," a chagrined Furr was telling his manager, Chris Dundee. "Those short ones to the stomach slowed me down."

Armstrong was breathing lightly in the dressing room despite the pace of his ceaseless punching and confessed to being hurt by only one of Furr's punches.

"He stung me in the third round with a long right when I rushed him to the ropes," said the champion. "It was my own fault. I ran into the punch trying to finish him off. I didn't think he had that kind of a punch left. He surprised me, and it hurt. Furr can lick many a good boy in the welterweight class."

For a few brief seconds after the knockout, Furr's manager, Chris Dundee, was angry with Furr.

"I tell him to stay away and box for a few rounds and he goes out there slugging like a fool. He fought Armstrong's fight," said Dundee.

But in the dressing room, Dundee was calmer. He draped an arm around Furr and said "What I said out there don't go, Phil. It was a great show you put on for that crowd."

Any ideas Furr had of attempting to stay from Armstrong in the early rounds vanished with the opening bell, the challenger said. He kept bulling me around in there and shucks, I can't box and I know I'm too slow to run. The only way I can fight is to keep punching and I knew it ten seconds after the fight started.

"Those short ones to the body licked me. I had to bring my guard down to protect myself and that's when he started bringing 'em up. Don't ever say Armstrong can't hit hard. I just kept punching as long as I could. After ten years in the ring, I end up getting knocked out for the first time, but I'm glad I was in there against the champion when it happened."

Before the fight, Furr intimated that last night's bout would be his last ring appearance, but following the battle he seemed pleased that he had given the crowd four rounds of thrilling action.

"What did Mike Jacobs say?" he asked Dundee. "Did he like me? Maybe now he'll give me a shot in the Garden."

Washington's largest fight crowd in three years, a wildly-cheering mob of 15,000 who paid $20,444 at the gate, liked the fight.

They set up a noisy din from the opening bell to the finish of the furious action which saw Furr go down four times. They marveled at the ceaseless milling of Armstrong and his sharp-shooting when he raised his punches to Furr's head, but the bulk of the cheers were for the gallant stand of the local boy.

Bedlam greeted Furr's feats of twice rising from nine counts to avoid a knockout and he answered by carrying the fight to the champion after each journey to the floor. Armstrong drew down the unanimous applause at the finish when he grabbed the microphone and told the crowd that "Phil Furr is a credit to the fight profession. I never met a more courageous man."

Armstrong Forced Fight at Very Start; Furr Changes Mind

Mike Jacobs to Promote Fights In New Arena Here This Winter

Definitely convinced that big-time boxing shows in Washington will provide him with a neat pile of change, Promoter Mike Jacobs will extend his sphere of astion to the District this winter to operate in conjunction with Joe Turner.

The New York promoter, who from his lair in Madison Square Garden has waged war with the National Boxing Association for several years, will move right into the front yard of the N. B. A.

Scene of the winter fight activity will be a new arena, according to Turner, which will seat around 30,000 for boxing shows.

"I have talked with Mike and told him that any time he wants to come in I am ready to work with him," Turner said last night.

In Washington to observe the public response to the Phil Furr-Henry Armstrong championship, Jacobs went away convinced that there is a gold mine in District boxing if it's handled on a "big time" scale.

If Jacobs goes through with his plan, he is expected to come into the District just after Christmas with a couple of top-flight shows and then bring in a championship fight—possibly Joe Louis against the winner of the Max Baer-Pat Comiskey bout.

Turner and his able matchmaker, Gabe Menendez, long have been in touch with Jacobs, and the shrewd New Yorker who has been accused of putting a death lock on boxing has been keeping a close eye on the sudden upturn of public interest in the fight game in the Capital.

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Among those not present at the Redskins-Giants affair at Griffith Stadium was Mr. Timothy Mara, who owns the New York team. His absence was very deliberate. Mr. Mara, in the dear dead days before mutuel betting in New York, used to be the No. 1 bookmaker at metropolitan race tracks and without disturbing an eyelid would watch in utter calm a horse race that would make him $50,000 richer or poorer. But finds football simply too exciting.

His Giants are now close to the most valuable football property in the world, but 15 years ago Mara didn't know a halfback from a head linesman. He thought football was a silly prank of college kids who ought to be taken in hand. He was virtually in the midst of this thought when he suddenly found himself the owner of a whole passel of football players and a franchise in the National Professional League.

At the time of his purchase of the Giants, Mara had no more idea of owning a football team than you have of joining the Foreign Legion. He simply happened to be sitting in the office of Billy Gibson in downtown New York one summer afternoon when a gray-haired gentleman named Dr. John March walked into his life.

Dr. March, a fanatical pro football fan hailing from Massillon, Ohio, cradle of the professional game, was in town in the interests of the pro league which wanted to put a team in New York. He was directed to the office of Gibson, who had lately been fired as his manager by Gene Tunney, and was supposed to have plenty of scratch in addition to being promotion-minded.

Mara heard Dr. March attempting to sell Gibson the idea of buying a New York franchise for $2,500 and sort of sidled into the conversation. At this expression of interest, Dr. March turned his salesmanship on Mara. "How much would it cost me if the team flopped?" asked Mara. "You couldn't lose over $20,000 the first year," said March, and "then you'd start to make money. .Pro football in New York can't miss."

Well, Mara bought the franchise for $2,500 and promptly lost $76,000 in the first year of his operation of the Giants. But we are getting ahead of his story. Actually, Mara didn't want to buy the Giants. He merely wanted to pitch in with Gibson in owning the team. He thought he would put up 50 per cent of the $2,500 franchise cost, with Gibson taking up the other 50 per cent.

Too late, Mara discovered that Gibson, despite his gaudy downtown offices, was not able merely to finance half of the $2,500 investment but at that time was unable to finance a two-course meal for himself. So Mara ended up as 100 per cent owner of a football team he actually didn't want anything to do with.

The $75,000 rap he took in 1925 sort of challenged the very Irish Mr. Mara and he refused to quit the business. He had reasons to chuck the whole matter in disgust. That was the year when C. C. Pyle and Red Grange went into New York with their American League football Yankees in competition with the Giants of the National League. While Mara's Giants were drawing crowds of 1,200 and 1,800 at the Polo Grounds, Pyle's Yankees were drawing 50,000 and 60,000 at the Yankee Stadium.

Mara was smart enough to know that in Grange Pyle had some kind of a super drawing card, although he didn't know exactly who Grange was or why he was so famous. In fact, Mara referred to him as "Red Granger." He reckoned that if he could get a drawing card like "Granger," his Giants would do all right.

But in 1926, Mara got a break. Pyle's American League folded. Franchises in other cities didn't hold up, and Pyle pleaded to be taken into the National League. Mara thus got the benefit of Grange's appearances against his own club, and the financial fortunes of his Giants began to zoom. Last year, the Detroit Lions' franchise in the National League sold for $325,000. That figure couldn't buy the Giants, for whom Mara originally paid $2,500. Mara's end of the gate with the Redskins last Sunday was, at the visiting club's 40 per cent, approximately $20,000.

It is a beautiful relationship between Mara and his coach, stout Steve Owen, who has never had a written contract with the Giants' owner in the ten years or more that he has coached the team. "Steve never asked me for a contract and as far as I'm concerned, he never needed one," Mara says. "We don't bother with any written agreements. He just runs my ball team the way he likes and he's been suiting me for a long time now."

When the Giants entrained for Washington for the Redskins' game last week-end, Mara begged off from making the trip. He rode as far as Newark with Owen and the players and said he guessed he couldn't stand the excitement of watching the Giants play. His last words to Owen were: "If you lose this ball game, don't be mad about it. I won't."

Williamson System Ranks Kentucky First

By Paul B. Williamson

The Kentucky Colonels stand as the No. 1 college eleven of the Nation after the first big week of the season in which dark horses kicked up a crazy stampede.

The Colonels earned their top rating by trouncing the reportedly strong Baldwin-Wallace Yellow Jackets, 59-7. Although the system expected big things of Kentucky, it is likely that the Wildcats' margin of victory surprised even their most enthusiastic fans.

That was just a case of the strong Southeastern Conference against a weaker Northern circuit. We figured the Southeastern teams better, but not by the margin indicated by the Kentucky-Baldwin result. To the last team, the Southeastern Conference was consistent for the system last week.

System Is Upset

Three teams that upset the system in the wild stampede were Texas A. and I., North Carolina State and San Marcos Teachers, of Texas. The Javelinas of A. and I. blanked the Spartans of Pop Warner's San Jose State, 10-0, marking the first time in 40 games since 1937 that the Spartans failed to score. Any team that can upset a Pop Warner squad bears watching. And there's plenty of money in Kleberg County, Tex., that says the Javelinas will take Texas A. and M.

Supposedly crippled and demoralized, North Carolina State's Wolfpack showed surprising strength in trouncing highly touted William and Mary, 16-0.

Most amazing result in the Texas league was San Marcos' 15-13 victory over Howard Payne. The system predicted a 7-6 triumph for Payne.

Our preliminary table this week includes only teams that have played games this season and earned ratings of 60 or more. Accordingly, the first six teams in the country are Kentucky for smothering Baldwin-Wallace, 59-7—96.1; Boston College for bowling over Centre College, 40-0—91.4; North Carolina for routing Appalachian State Teachers, 56-6—91.0; Oklahoma A. & M. for toying with strong Oklahoma Central State Teachers, 25-6—88.6; Mississippi University for winning a raggedly played game from Union, 37-0—86.4, and Texas A. & L. for its 10-0 victory over San Jose State—88.2.

G. U. Sophs to See Most Action in Roanoke Opener Saturday

Hagerty Stunned by Play at Navy

Cardinals Get New Signals; G.W. Stresses Air Attack With Fedora Starring

By Jack Munhall

Unable to conceal his disappointment at the performance of Georgetown's younger players in Saturday's scrimmage at Navy, Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday announced that sophomores will be played every possible minute in the Hoyas' opening game with Roanoke Saturday night at Griffith Stadium.

"I had hoped to get a line on our promising-looking sophomore players Saturday," Hagerty told a meeting of the local Football Writers' Association, "but I became confused. They couldn't be as bad as they looked against Navy."

Navy Scared 'Em

"Whether the idea of playing at Navy scared them or whether they were startled by the 2,500 fans who turned out for the "secret" scrimmage, I can't say, but I certainly was disappointed.

Somewhat compensating for the failures of the sophomores and reserves was the precision and power shown by the first-string Georgetown eleven which marched 75 yards to a touchdown the first time it got its hands on the ball.

Though Georgetown has little to fear from Roanoke's undermanned squad generally, the Hoyas twice were warned yesterday to be on the lookout for a Maroon back who, it is claimed, can make anybody's football team.

Hancock's Threat

The youngster in question is Bill Hancock, a 195-pound right halfback who passes, runs, kicks and blocks with equal ability and in addition is built for 60-minute action.

The first alarming reports Hagerty received on Hancock were from freshman line Coach Bill Burke, who scouted Roanoke as it lost to V. M. I., 30-0, Saturday. Though the Maroons were badly outclassed and outnumbered, Burke reported, Hancock not only sparkled on offense but made a majority of his team's tackles. Burke's account later was confirmed by Maryland Coach Jack Faber, who also saw the Roanoke-V. M. I. game.

Georgetown sustained only two slight casualties during the strenuous and lengthy workout with Navy. Benny Bulvin, whose 60-yard dash was the longest run of the scrimmage, and sophomore Frank Dornfeld, both injured shoulders.

C. U.'s Streamlining Program Continues

Coach Dutch Bergman, continuing to streamline his Catholic University eleven, yesterday distributed a complete new set of trick plays and also a new huddle system, designed to counteract opponents' defensive huddles.

In Bergman's new huddle the Cardinals will face the opposing team instead of turning their backs as in the commonly used huddle. This, Bergman believes, will enable C. U. to make any adjustments prompted by the shift in positions of the enemy line.

Three complete teams ran through signal drills as Bergman sped practice in anticipation of the start of fall classes tomorrow when there will be much less opportunity for workouts.

Composing the first-string C. U. backfield were Pete Sachon at quarter, Charlie Moutenot and Hank Brostek at halves, and Al Norris at fullback. Moutenot, withheld from all scrimmages to date because of an injured leg, appeared in good shape once again.

Colonials Drill On Pass Attack

G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart, fairly well satisfied with the Colonial's ground attack, yesterday began to concentrate on polishing his forward passing game for Friday night's opener with Mount St. Mary's at Griffith Stadium.

Eddie Wiliamoski, Tom Grady and Walter Fedora spent most of the afternoon pitching the ball to Ends Frank August, Johnny Picco and Harry Ledford with moderate success. Fedora, whom Reinhart calls the "squads most improved passer," continued to impress with the accuracy and distance of his heaves.

Indications are that Mount St. Mary's will present a strong line but a weak backfield against the Colonials. The Mounts, coached by "Bull" Draper, former assistant to Dick Harlow at Western Maryland, won four, lost three, tied one, in 1939.

Maryland Stresses Aerial Defense

Maryland's football squad, preparing for Saturday's opener at home with air-minded Hampden-Sydney, yesterday was given a thorough drill in forward pass defense.

Coaches Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods, who scouted the Tigers in their game with Washington and Lee Saturday, brought back warnings that the Virginians boasted a dangerous passing attack.

Buddy Murdock and Cliff Holmes are the star Tiger throwers and Syd Webb, towering end, is the main receiver.

Classes at Maryland began yesterday.

Frank Wrenn Paces Navy Duckpin League

Frank Wrenn was high man in the Navy Department Duckpin League last night at Arcadia with a 174 game and 376 set, while Hydrographic rolled high team game and set of 891 and 1,662.

Ed Stephenson and his Senate teammates monopolized the Federal League action, the former rolling 139 and 412, while the team posted totals of 628 and 1,758.

Roosevelt High Expects Big Things of These Husky Gridders

Coach Artie Boyd Has an Experienced Backfield Anyhow

Overlook one 200-pound tackle, quite a feat in itself, and you'll find this year's Roosevelt High football line boasting about as much experience as a cop has kindness. The lone exception is Marvin Kogod, a talented youngster who has exactly one year of first-team experience behind him.

If Coach Artie Boyd has anything to feel gay about, as he prepares his Rough Riders for their first test against John Marshall High, of Richmond, Friday, it's his backfield. Three sound leftovers from 1939 grace the line-up, and the extra berth will probably be filled by Hymie Perlo, the husky youngster, who for two years has earned All-District honors in basketball.

What Boyd will do, however, when Perlo, Irwin Breier, Bernie Kolker or Les Wicklein get hurt is his biggest worry. Each is a capable ball-handler, but none may be expected to go through the season without a single injury. The likely backfield reserves can be counted on three fingers—Bob Stein, Carl Sturges and Tony Biancaniello.

Another partially reformed cage star, Dick Goodman, so far has proved the best new candidate for Roosevelt's line. He'll play one end, and the other will go to Dick Koester, who played some last season but became ineligible. George Haines will share the tackle posts with Kogod; the guards will be Stan Silverman and Doug Dietrich, and the center, Vincent Pizziz.

On paper it doesn't look like a whale of a team, but behind Boyd's pessimism there's a glimmer of hope.

Barnum and Miller Nurse Hurts After Scrap With 'Skins

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 23.—Len Barnum, long distance kicker from West Virginia Wesleyan, will be lost to the New York pro football Giants for at least three weeks.

Barnum suffered a fractured rib in yesterday's game with Washington. Coach Steve Owen hopes to have him ready for the club's first home game against Philadelphia October 13.

Eddie Miller, 165-pound passer, also is in the hospital with a slight concussion but is expected to be in shape for Saturday's game at Philadelphia.

Yankees Reject Dodgers' Offer

Brooklyn, Sept. 23 (AP).—A proposed postseason series between the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees has been rejected by President Ed Barrow of the Yanks, it was announced today.

Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers, proposed the series last week, but Barrow withheld a reply hoping the four-times world champions would repeat in the American League. They still have a mathematical chance.

Beggs' Relief Streak Ends As Bucs Win

Pirates Score, 12-9, To Deal Reds' Star 1st Loss in 10 Games

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23.—Pitcher Joe Beggs' nine-game winning streak in relief was halted today when the Pirates hammered out a 12 to 9 verdict over Cincinnati's champion Reds in the final game of the season at Pittsburgh.

A three-run rally, which sent Johnny Hutchings to the showers, enabled the Buccaneers to win their first series from the Rhinelanders. Pep Young was the batting star, collecting two singles, a double and a triple to drive in four runs. Vince DiMaggio also accounted for four runs batted in with two timely singles.

Paul Derringer was batted from the mound in the third when Pittsburgh staged a five-run uprising. Beggs relieved the big right-hander who was seeking his twenty-first win of the season, and was charged with the loss. Ken Heintzleman, the third of five hurlers, was the victor.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Washington, Sept. 23.—To the list of such comeback wonders as Schoolboy Rowe, Disraeli Dean, Max Baer and the sound of reveille, please add the name of Samuel Jackson Baugh. Hottest spot in pro football in his freshman year, 1937, when he hurled the Washington Redskins to the championship, Baugh was hurt in 1938, rehurt last year and became next to worthless to his club.

CONSIDINE

His fancy guarantee, believed to be $15,000 a year, caused considerable disgruntlement among the $125 a game Redskin workhorses. He averaged six minutes of play per game last season, or a total of a little more than an hour.

Nimble, brittle, Baugh got off to a good start this year. He played exceptionally well on the coast, against a Pacific All-Star team, and even better against the Green Bay Packers in a Labor Day exhibition. He stunned an Eastern All-Star club in Boston. Sunday a week ago he completed 11 of the 14 passes he threw against Jock Sutherland's Dodgers, for 109 yards, and last Sunday, against the Giants, he completed eight out of 14 pitches for 100 yards. He hasn't had an interception this season.

And anyone who has ever seen Baugh throw a football knows that his efficiency, instead of being .675, should be up around .900, for many of his passes are perfect but are muffed because they come too hard.

The wonder of it is that he hasn't been hurt. The Redskin players have their fingers crossed. He can pitch them into more dough if he stays in one piece. Each time he gets knocked down, after he unleashes one of those whistling bombs, there is a little pause in Washington to see if he is hurt.

By a comforting coincidence this is the last year of Baugh's three-year contract. If he expects to stay up in that salary bracket, in this poor paying sport, he must keep going all season. Marshall, incidentally has a novel way of paying him. A certain part of his salary comes out of the Redskin treasury, but the rest of it is made up by the money Baugh attracts endorsing football equipment, etc. A certain amount is guaranteed him over the year. If Marshall can't sell him to the commercial firms, he has to pay the dough himself. If he can, and takes in more on Baugh's name than he pays Baugh, the dough goes to pay off other Redskin salaries.

The football boys believe that baseball was Baugh's undoing. He got a trial with the St. Louis Cards in the spring of 1938, after his great freshman year in the football league. Frank Frisch was high on him, but let him go to the minors. He reported for football practice drawn and overworked. He was badly beaten up in the Redskins-All Star game in the late summer of 1938 at Soldier Field. And was so hopeless after that, that last year there was some hue and cry in Washington to trade him for a sound-winded back.

This year he seems certain to make America recall that Lew Jenkins isn't the only guy out of Sweetwater, Tex. Those short, sharp, rifling passes are better than ever, and he seems to have picked up such savvy as feinting end sweeps and letting the ball go while on the dead run.

Pro players say that unless a pass defender is within a yard of Baugh's receivers there is little chance of batting down one of his pegs, because they come rifling home like fat bullets. The average man-in-the-street would be knocked down by them, and it takes a better than average receiver to hold them.

His passing makes one forget that he is a great kicker. His 70-yard quick-kick on the second play of the Giants game last Sunday put the Giants back on their 12-yard line and started the Washingtonians off to their win. When a Giant drive ended on the 4-yard line, and he had to kick from his end zone, he kicked the ball out of bounds on the 50-yard stripe, to militate against a runback of the punt by Tuffy Leemans.

In fact, the guy's pretty good.

Niehoff Dismissed As Jersey City Giants' Manager

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 23.—Bert Niehoff, manager of the Jersey City Giants, of the International League, for two years, has been dismissed, President Horace Stoneham announced today.

Stoneham said only that "I felt a change was necessary."

Niehoff piloted the club, a farm of the New York Giants which Stoneham owns, into the International League pennant last year and into third place this season.

Bith times, however, the Little Giants were eliminated in the first round of the Governor's Cup playoffs, this year in four straight games and last year in six.

Phils Defeat Bees, 6-2, Lose Finale, 8 to 0

Warren's Two Homers Decide Opener for Rookie Podgajny

By International News Service

Boston, Sept. 23.—The Bees and Philadelphia divided a doubleheader today, the Phillies capturing the opener, 6 to 2 and Boston the nightcap, 8 to 0.

In theopener, Catcher Ben Warren led the Phils' attack by collecting two homers, which aided Rookie Johnny Podgajny to register his first major league victory this season. Podgajny helped his own cause with a single which drove in two of the three runs recorded in the ninth.

Another Rookie, Tom Earley, pitched the Bees to a shut-out victory in the second game. The youngster allowed only three hits, all singles. The Bees picked up three runs in the first inning and were never headed.

Passeau Wins 20th, as Cubs Blank Cards

Right-Hander Gives 4 Hits in 10-0 Game; Also Smacks Homer

By International News Service

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Claude Passeau joined the 20-game winners this season when the Cubs blanked St. Louis, 10 to 0, today. It was Passeau's fourth shutout of the season.

The lanky right-hander limited the Cardinals to four scattered safeties and helped his own cause by clouting his first home run of the season. Three other Cubs—Jim Gleeson, Rip Russell and Bill Nicholson—also collected circuit clouts.

The contest was sewed up in the fifth when Chicago staged a five-run rally, which began with Passeau's homer and ended with Russell's four-bagger with one aboard.

Clyde Shoun and Newt Kimball were assaulted for ten hits, with Shoun being charged with the loss.

Ackerman on Fishing

In the consolidation of the Biological Survey and Fisheries into the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Black Bass Section was turned over to the Division of Game Management, with its 70-odd enforcement agents.

Talbot Denmead, who was chief of the Black Bass section for 9½ years has been made chief of a section of the Migratory Birds, where he served for ten years before going to Fisheries, while Esther Dodd, his assistant, will continue to direct the Anglers Service, and issue permits to take baitfish in the District.

It begins to look as though anglers are awakening to the idea that it pays to enter their fish in the contests, for we learn two of world-record caliber, caught during August, have taken first places in their classes in the George Ruppert contest.

We noted the catch of both, the 927-pound bluefin tuna at Ipswitch, which is the largest gamefish ever caught in the Americas and bringing the world's record to the United States from Nova Scotia, as well as the 192½-pound Allison tuna caught at Ocean City, Md., on August 19 from Capt. Leo Droughton's Sampan.

The striped bass leader weighs 46 pounds. Short by many pounds of the largest fish caught each year along the Long Island coast, but still something to be proud of. The fluke, weighing just one ounce short of 17 pounds, is as outstanding in leading its class, as that 6-ounce codfish is in its own class. The one as large as the other is small . . . but both with real money on their noses.

Equally astonishing as the 6-ounce cod is the fact that a 11-pound bluefish caught last February in Florida is continuing its lead. Not against all entries however, for it is the lone one in more than seven months of competition.

The absence of the bluefish schools along the Atlantic Coast is the finny wonder of 1940. We have contended, since the run failed to materialize at Hatteras and Oregon Inlet during May, that we would have no run in the Chesapeake this year. We still continue to believe so. What happened to the great schools that summer off the north Jersey coast is beyond our ken. They have been reported from Bermuda to the European coast, but their is little basis of truth in any of them. Most certainly, they are not where they belong.

Hoya Frosh To Play Four Grid Games

The Georgetown University freshman football team will play a four-game schedule this season, it was announced yesterday.

The Little Hoyas will open up against Navy plebes at Annapolis Saturday, and then will meet yearling teams of Temple, George Washington and Maryland.

Bill Burke, former All-District guard at Georgetown and a star member of the Hoyas' first undefeated and untied team in 1937, has been appointed assistant coach to Elmer (Hap) Hardell.

The schedule:

Sept. 28, Navy Plebes, Annapolis; Oct. 11, Temple Frosh, Philadelphia; 25, George Washington Frosh, home; Nov. 8, Maryland Frosh, at College Park.

Three Photo Finishes Mark Program at Havre de Grace

$23 Shot Gets Nod Over Shailleen, Fans Shocked; Jockey Mora Set Down for Meeting

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 23.—Cheap races filled all positions on today's program but they were productive of some of the best action of the meeting. The camera was kept busy separating horses and surprised the customers in the fourth race when it voted for P. Andolino's Flag Post over the favored Shailleen, owned by Mrs. J. Y. Christmas. The two finished as a team and the majority of fans believed the Happy Argo filly, on the inside, had held on to her knitting long enough to take the main portion of the purse.

The judges took one gander at the picture and Flag Post's number was flashed as the winner. There was much rejoicing by backers of the winning $23.70 shot and an equal amount of beefing by those who put their confidence in and their money on Shailleen. There was no argument about Warlaine being third for there were six lengths between the Brenton colorbearer and the battle for first place ahead of him.

Shailleen, after overcoming interference from Bubbleworth at the first turn, was urged to the front approaching the half pole and the race seemed all over but the pay-off when the filly drew out. In the stretch, Jockey H. Mora looked back. Flag Post, which had been blocked at the far turn, was coming with a rush under Jockey R. Merritt's handling. Mora then went to work again but he could not get the filly going in best style. The two went into the wire together but Shailleen appeared to have the best of it—that is before the picture came down.

The stewards announced after the race that Jockey H. Mora had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for careless riding on Shailleen in the stretch.

The program began with a camera finish. Maevic, owned by Eddie Litzenberger, former jockey for the Maemere Farm, came with a stretch rush that earned a head victory over W. F. Hitt's Meadow Dew. Jouett Shouse's Ballarosa was third. Jockey DeCamillis got Maevic out of trouble on the backstretch and sent him up to hang defeat on his rival. Maevic paid $17.10 and paved the way for a $68.40 pay off in the daily double.

Purcellville, owned by Preston M. Burch, of Washington, D. C., won the second event by two lengths from Mrs. J. B. Belk's Walter Light, an old half-mile friend. Once again W. F. Hitt provided the third horse in Last Call. Purcellville had a legion of backers and paid $6.50.

†Elizabeth C. Jackson-J. E. Hughes entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEVIC, $17.10, $8.30, $5.00; MEADOW DEW, $4.90, $3.60; BALLAROSA, $3.10.

MAEVIC, in trouble early and taken up, came through on the inside entering the stretch, came out and wore down MEADOW DEW in the final strides. MEADOW DEW shook off BALLAROSA to open a good lead, but could not resist the winner while under pressure. BALLAROSA tired gradually after pressing the early pace. ETRUSCAN had to be rushed to get to serious contention and tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:52. Winner, P. M. Burch's br. c. (3), by Challenger II—Lady Capulet. Trained by W. E. Brooks. Value to winner, $700; second, $160; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

†C. M. Peltner-Mrs. J. B. Belk entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PURCELLVILLE, $6.50, $3.80, $3.30; WALTER LIGHT (entry), $16.10, 39.40; LAST CALL, $4.60.

PURCELLVILLE, confidently handled while racing close up and on the outside, responded when placed to a drive and was an easy winner. WALTER LIGHT was put to punishment entering the stretch and closed with good energy. LAST CALL, was hard used early and weakened. PIMLICO LADY broke in close quarters and faded after getting to the top turning for home.

Daily Double, MAEVIC and PURCELLVILLE, Paid $68.40

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:31. Winner, Miss S. Bresee's br. g. (3), by Jacopo—Amble. Trained by W. Carroll. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIMKOE, $9.90, $7.00, $4.40; NICK, $9.20, $5.90; CANPASSE, $36.60.

SIMKOE was steadied while within striking distance for the half, rallied gamely when placed to a drive and held sway over NICK while under punishment at the end. NICK, probably best, walked out of the gate, worked his way to contention on the outside, came in for the final drive and fought it out gamely. CANPASSE lost ground and showed a good effort. HIGH BUD disposed of JUNE DATE and CEILING STAR to take command and tired suddenly in the stretch. ARDMORE II faltered after taking a slight lead in the stretch.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:51½. Winner, P. Aandolino's ch. g. (4), by Flag Pole—Omayra. Trained by E. Schopshire. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG POST, $23.70, $5.30, $3.00; SHAILLEEN, $2.80, $2.40; WARLAINE, $2.60.

FLAG POST, rated early and taken up when blocked approaching the half pole, came gamely in the stretch under punishment and was up in the final strides. SHAILLEEN, bothered and forced wide at the first turn by BUBBLEWORTH, was sent to the front approaching the far turn, opened a good lead and appeared to have lasted. WARLAINE went forwardly to the stretch and tired suddenly. DARK WATCH was held safe.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:26½. Winner, Mrs. P. DeLee Wentz' red ro. h. (9), by Golden Spire—Daisy Vein. Trained by P. D. Watts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $10.10, $6.00, $3.50; BONNIE CLABBER, $6.00, $3.50; TYR, $2.80.

GOLDEN VEIN, not hurried while trailing in the early stages, worked his way to contention gradually on the outside and closed with a rush under strong handling to be opening a gap at the end. BONNIE CLABBER disposed of TYR to take command in the stretch, but was no match for the winner while holding on gamely. TYR took command leaving the backstretch, saved ground, but weakened thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR DREAM, $11.20, $7.00, $3.50; CHANCE MAKER, $4.50, $3.10; HIDE, $2.40.

OUR DREAM, confidently handled, worked his way to contention leaving the backstretch, responded when shaken up and closed with a rush to win while opening a gap. CHANCE MAKER came willingly in the final test and showed a good effort. HIDE rallied to take command in midstretch, but could not resist the other two. DENOTE moved up with good energy approaching the stretch and weakened in the closing stages.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:31½. Off at 5:31½. Winner, J. Y. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK GROUSE, $5.30, $3.30, $2.60; SIR REG, $4.10, $3.00; WILDMUTE, $3.10.

BLACK GROUSE slipped through on the inside to reach contention, responded when shaken up and wore down SIR REG in the closing sixteenth. SIR REG disposed of DOCTOR'S NURSE to take command and closed with good energy. WILDMUTE moved up menacingly entering the stretch and tired thereafter. DOCTOR'S NURSE set the pace for the half and weakened gradually after saving much ground.

191 Women Play in Washington Post Trophy Golf Today

Play Starts At Kenwood, Woodmont

D. C. Golf Association Is Sponsor; Mrs. Letts Only Former Champ To Be in Action

The Washington Post Cup Tournament, an outstanding event on the fall schedule of the District Women's Golf Association, makes its debut as a two-section affair today at Woodmont and Kenwood.

A near record field for any event in association history, 191 players, will be divided with the Class A contestants, 82 in number, competing at Woodmont while 109 Class B players will battle for The Post trophies at Kenwood.

Professionals Gene Larkin, at Woodmont, and George Diffenbaugh, at Kenwood, announced yesterday that players would be permitted to bring their own caddies.

Mrs. Letts to Play

Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, winner of the tournament last year, is the only one of the seven former champions entered in the eighth annual tournament. The Post Cup Tournament was a week-long match play event for six years, when, in order, Elizabeth Houghton, Betty MacKenzie, Gloria Rodgers, Marion Brown and Mrs. Arnold McNitt were victors.

Due to the growth of the District Women's Golf Association schedule, The Post was asked to cooperate and cut the event to a one-day 18-hole medal play handicap tournament, which was done last year. Mrs. Letts won the event over her home Chevy Chase course, where the cup has remained for three of the seven years.

Today marks another step in the history of the comparatively young tournament as last year's field was so large it was decided to divide the tournament into Class A and B. The former class is for the players with handicaps of scratch through 18 while Class B, the largest of the two, is for the 19 to 36 handicapped women golfers, inclusive.

Trophy to Class A

The original Post Trophy will go to the low net scorer in Class A for a year's possession at the winner's club. The Post will give the low net scorer in Class A and the low net scorer in Class B silver bowls, while the low gross scorers in each class will receive silver plates, all for permanent possession.

The prize committee of the association will award prizes for other low net scorers in each class.

Due to the fact that Woodmont is a nine-hole course and all players will start on the first tee, Mrs. M. M. Maxwell, of Army and Navy, playing with Mrs. A. A. Morrill, of Kenwood, and Mrs. Bert Gamble, Manor, will inaugurate the proceedings this morning at the early hour of 8:15.

Start at 9 A. M.

At Kenwood, the first threesome off No. 1 tee will be at 9 a. m., Martha Madison, Mrs. C. E. McGowan and Mrs. F. H. Kramer, all of Manor. Mrs. J. Stewart, of Washington; Mrs. E. Hanson, of Washington, and Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, Kenwood, will lead the players off the tenth tee at 9:30 a. m.

Prize presentations will follow some 15 or 20 minutes after the last scores have been turned in at the respective courses, approximately 2:45 at Woodmont and a few minutes later at Kenwood. Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president, and Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, tournament chairman, will do the honors. M. W. W.

Shorey and Partners Pace M. A. Pro-Amateur

Win 1st Three Prizes; Houghton, Shorey Capture Pro Sweeps

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Professional Mel Shorey and his three amateur partners from Indian Spring enjoyed a field day in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament yesterday at Capital Club, winning first, second and third prizes over a field of 45 teams.

Al Houghton, the Beaver Dam mentor who has not been out of the money in a pro-amateur in this section all season, and Leo Walper, the driving range pro, stood between Shorey and a clean sweep as they finished one-two in the pro sweepstakes with scores of 70 and 71, respectively.

Won With 64

Shorey and Jock Olmsted, one of the best match play golfers in town, won the pro-amateur with a best ball 64, the latter using three handicap strokes to advantage to figure in the victory. Shorey and his other partners, Art Cross and Charley Price, tied for second with 65s each. Shorey's pro sweeps score was 72, two over par, while Olmsted's own score was only a shot higher.

Eddie Oliver, the Hornel, N. Y., pro who has pocketed $4,725 in P. G. A. tournaments this year, including his $1,000 victory in the St. Paul Open, started a 10-day visit here by playing in the tournament, but he wasted several strokes and finished with a 73. The 235-pound 22-year-old professional, who tied for the National Open title but was disqualified, was out in 36 and back in 37. He finished out of the money, but under the ruling that more simon-pures figure in the prizes than professionals, his partner, Maury Fitzgerald, tied for fourth with their best ball score of 66.

Others in Tie

Four other best ball 66s that figured in the five-way tie included the teams of: Al Houghton and Ken Spencer, finalists in the host club championship; Cliff Spencer, East Potomac, and T. Turner Smith, Washington; the Baltimore team of Ralph Beach and Arnold Litman, Suburban, and Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, and Dick Melvin, Indian Spring. Melvin, with a 3 handicap stroke allowance, scored birdie fours on the holes where he received strokes for a trio of net eagle threes.

The tournament was visited by another outside professional—in addition to Oliver—Tommy Barnes, who led the Nation's qualifiers for the National Open last year in Atlanta, was passing through the city and participated in the pro sweepstakes. He returned no card.

Shorey and Olmsted owe their victory to the way they played the par three holes on the back nine. They divided three birdie deuces between them, two by the professional and one by the amateur, and in addition Almsted birdied the eighteenth as they played the back nine in 29.

Houghton started the first nine with two birdies and the back nine with another in his round of 70, from nines of 34—36. Walper, second in the pro sweeps, paired nine of 34 and 37, while Shorey and Ralph Beach, who tied for third with 72s, had 35—37.

Ed Oliver will probably play here several times this week before the match play pro-amateur starts next Monday at Manor. "Porky" just completed 21 consecutive days of exhibition matches with Gene Sarazen, and he is going to use his time here for a little rest.

Two Teams Tied in 6-Day Bike Race

Peden-Moretti, Kilian-Bergna Lead On Dangerous Track

By Jack Munhall

Out of a whir of flashing steel and crashing bodies on a Riverside Stadium track that fast was becoming splintered and dangerous, two teams emerged at 1 o'clock this morning deadlocked for the lead of the six-day bicycle grind at the end of 28 hours.

Fighting it out neck and neck for advantage of a race that was being contested on boards which were patched on one turn by adhesive tape that covered a jutting hole were Gustav Kilian and Charley Bergna and Bill (Torchy) Peden and Cesar Moretti.

Peden and Moretti after having trailed Kilian and Bergna by one lap for the best part of 24 hours stole a lap shortly after 10 p. m. to create the deadlock. The leaders had covered 510 miles, 8 laps, Kilian and Bergna amassing 152 points to 121 for Peden and Moretti. Leadership of the race is determined by number of miles covered, with points counting only to decide the final result if two or more teams are tied in miles covered.

Two Teams Are 3rd

Tied for third place, one lap behind, was another pair of teams, Alfred Letourner and Angelo DeBacco, and Heinz Vopel and Jules Audy. Only other team in immediate contending position were Archie Bollaert and Gerard DeBaets, two laps in arrears of the top combinations.

The eighteen contenders forming the field for Washington's first six-day bicycle race since the pedaling demons blazed the boards at Convention Hall in 1899 rode at a fast but somewhat cautious pace last night after a spectacular five-man crash in the afternoon.

Only serious mishap of the evening hours involved Letourner and Bollaert whose machines locked wheels just across the finish line of a sprint and pitched them to the ground in a flurry of tangled arms and legs. Both arose immediately, uninjured but peeved.

Hole Discovered

The race was halted for several minutes about 11:30 p. m., when a gaping hole was discovered in the track near the top of the bank of the north turn. The damage was quickly repaired by two long and broad strips of tape and the race continued.

The spectacular five-man crash in the afternoon, one of the worst six-day spills of the year, occurred just before the 4 o'clock sprints when Audy, the blond Canadian hit the top of the fence and slid down the saucer to pile into four other competitors.

Oliveri Leads Public Links Field Into Quarter-Finals

The District Public Links Championship match play field was cut from 32 to 8 yesterday at East Potomac as Andy Oliveri, defending and two-time champion, paced the surviving quarter-finalists through two rounds.

Oliveri won by default in the morning and then shot even par golf against George Graham to win, 6 and 5, in the afternoon. Roy Smith, the East Potomac spring champion, traveled fewer holes than Oliveri to record a double victory, winning by default in the first round and trouncing Whitey France, 9 and 8, in the second round with a two-under par exhibition.

R. A. Jennings, of the host club, is the only one of the three medalists remaining. He also drew a morning default and then defeated Al Birmingham, 3 and 2. Courtney Litz, the Anacostia medalist, lost to Walt Sezna in the first round while Rock Creek Medalist Bobby Suit was also an initial round victim, losing to Pete Sitnik, 4 and 3.

John Jankowski, the former C. U. grid ace and national publinks qualifier, was only three over par as he marked two victories while Ken Zent, another national qualifier, went 21 holes to beat Bill Leapley in the first round and then he defeated Sezna, 5 and 4, in the next round.

Seay Advances

W. W. Seay, always a ranking player on the publinks, advanced with little difficulty as did Sparky Dawson and Keith Kallion.

Oliveri and Zent meet in a morning feature today while Seay and Smith should also provide a close scrap. Jennings clashes with Dawson and Kallion with Jankowski. The four successful players will meet this afternoon and the winners there will qualify for tomorrow's 36-hole finals.

First Round

R. A. Jennings defeated W. Turner by default; Al Birmingham defeated B. R. Campbell, 7 and 6; William Briggs defeated Harry Bragg, 2 up; Sparky Dawson defeated William Bailey, 5 and 3; Andy Oliveri defeated Roy Dillon by default; George Graham defeated F. Proulx, 1 up, 20 holes; Ken Zent defeated William Leapley, 1 up, 21 holes; Walt Sezna defeated Courtney Litz, 2 and 1.

Pete Sitnik defeated Bob Suit, 4 and 3; Keith Kallio defeated Preston Wannan, 5 and 3; Don Stone defeated William Wagaman, 2 and 1; John Jankowski defeated R. G. Bowers, 4 and 2; Graham Hutchinson defeated R. H. Kirchmeyer, 5 and 4; W. W. Seay defeated E. Sutphin by default; B. Whitey France defeated Don Musser by default; Roy Smith defeated H. Beinlich by default.

Second Round

Jennings defeated Birmingham, 3 and 2; Dawson defeated Briggs, 1 up; Oliveri defeated Graham, 6 and 5; Zent defeated Sezna, 5 and 4.

Kallio defeated Sitnik, 4 and 2; Jankowski defeated Stone, 4 and 3; Seay defeated Hutchinson, 3 and 2; Smith defeated France, 9 and 8.

Pairings

9:00, Jennings vs. Dawson; 9:05 Oliveri vs Zent; 9:10, Kallio vs. Jankowski; 9:15, Seay vs. Smith.

Team Wrestling Again Rears Head At Turner's Arena

Two-man competition will be resumed on the local wrestling front Thursday night when Chris and Babe Zaharias, the wild men from Pueblo, will engage Herbie Freeman, the husky Jewish star, and Frank Judson, erstwhile Harvard wrestling coach, in a special added attraction at Turner's Arena.

Promoter Turner announced that Freeman had broken away from his partner, Sheriff Tom Hanley, and formed an alliance with Judson, one of the more scientific grapplers. The Zaharias brothers trimmed Hanley and Freeman a few weeks ago.

The show will find Mildred Burke, the world's feminine champion, engaging Vilma Dean, niece of Man Mountain Dean, with Danno O'Mahoney, former world's champion, clashing with Warren Bockwinkle in the cofeature.

Miss Burke already has won 365 bouts, and claims her shoulders never have been pinned.

Orioles Win Over Newark In Play-Offs

4S BALT MAIL

By International News Service

Newark, N. J., Sept. 23.—The Baltimore Orioles won the opening game of the final round of the International Governors Cup series tonight, trouncing the Newark Bears, 6 to 2.

Roy Bruner, beaten five times by the Bears during the regular season, limited the Newark batters to seven scattered safeties, including home runs by Bud Metheny and Leo Nonnenkamp in the fourth inning. These blows tied the contest, and a four-run rally by the visitors sewed up the game in the sixth.

The defeat broke a four-game winning streak for Steve Peek, Newark right-hander, who was driven to the showers in the big frame which was started by Stan Benjamin's triple. Singles by Murray Howell, Nick Etten and Skeeter Newsome followed with the last two runs squeezed in by Jack Redmond and Bruner.

Eddie Collins, jr., led the Orioles' 11-hit attack with a three-bagger and two singles. Allen Gettel and John Johnson followed Peek to the hill and the trio was credited with fanning 11 enemy batsmen.

George Washburn is slated to pitch for Newark in the second game tomorrow night. Orlin Miller is scheduled to heave for Baltimore.

Gopher Regulars Are Reinstated

Minneapolis, Sept. 23 (AP).—Five demoted regulars were restored to first-team standing today as Coach Bernie Bierman lined up a prospective starting lineup for the Minnesota Gophers against University of Washington next Saturday afternoon.

Dick Wildung, Bill Kuusisto, Gordie Paschka, Bill Johnson and Gene Bierhaus are the fallen stars now back in Bierman's good graces.

Only one drill was held by the Gophers today and it was announced there would be no further scrimmage during the week.

Bob Feller 'Clears Up' Rumors About Arm

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 23.—Redoubtable Bobby Feller, represented hither and yon as suffering from everything between general physical collapse and a mere weary wing, set forth today to "clear things up."

Refreshed by ten hours' sleep, he awakened Trainer Max (Lefty) Weisman, napping at home on the American League off day, and inquired:

"If you ride down to the stadium with me do you suppose folks will think we're having a meeting?"

Lefty didn't think so.

Found Mates Waiting

They descended on the deserted lake front oval and found four teammates, three rookies and Relief Hurler Bill Zuber, sitting around. All pulled on baseball cothes.

Then Feller chased balls. He dashed over the infield and rambled over the outfield. A groundskeeper or two joined in.

"Do I look tired?" Feller asked a half-hour later, stretched out on the rubbing table under Weisman's supple hands. "Do I look underweight?"

He didn't look like a pitcher who had pitched 27 innings in eight days with a disastrous three-batter relief tour thrown in for good measure.

Little Underweight

The scales went up to 183 pounds, a little below the "normal" charted for Feller in the office of a prominent physician.

"I usually start out the year at 185 or so and wind up two or three pounds lighter," the young fireballer confided.

He pointed out he had refrained from pitching a ball today because "I worked pretty hard Sunday and my arm was bound to be a little tired.

"Otherwise, you can put down just what you see. I wouldn't pitch an inning if I didn't think I was in shape—if I couldn't do the team or myself some good. When I'm not ready to pitch, I say so."

"The pennant's all I care about," he said bluntly. "My job is to win one more game. I'll think about the World Series when the time comes."

First Regatta Entry on Scene Of Big Races

With Zalmond G. (Zamie) Simmons, 1939 Gold Cup winner, postponing his trial spins with My Sin until today, a 55-year-old gent from Hamilton, Ohio, Charlie C. Shuler, monopolized the spotlight yesterday as the President's Cup Regatta committees moved into high gear for the annual classic scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday over the Potomac.

Shuler, a paper mill manufacturer who has been piloting speed boats since 1906, officially became the first of the entries to register at the Willard Hotel headquarters, which is a veritable beehive of activity.

Defending champion in the All-Inboards Runabouts except E. and K., Shulman is back with Sea Sled V, which last season stepped away at a dizzy clip to win the Commissioners Trophy. He said his boat was just rarin' to go and that he would be at the controls with Charlie Schwarm 3d as mechanic. Shuler won the "grand prize" last season. In 1936 and 1937 he was here with Black Imps. In 1938 he piloted Sea Sled, but never got started due to a broken crane shaft.

Sea Sled V has twin motors, one of which is a crazy fireball of the 225 class and the other a Lycoming. Jack (Pop) Cooper, according to the veteran Ohioan, uses such a motor for his swift Tops III, a boat that will be entered in the 225-C. In. hydroplane championships for both the John Charles Thomas and the American Power Boat trophies.

Mrs. Clark, Hill Are Tied

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. David Clark tied for the medal in the qualifying round of the women's club championship yesterday at Chevy Chase with scores of 85.

Mrs. Clark, also a member of Army and Navy and a former titlist there, played the nines in 46-39, 85, while Mrs. Hill, ex-Chevy Chase chase champion, was 43-40, 85.

Louise Claytor, defending champion, did not compete. The first round of match play in the championship flight of 16 players is scheduled tomorrow, the event postponed toay ue to The Post Cup tourney.

Pairings for Wednesday

Chicago Clubs Open 23d City Series October 1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 23.—The twenty-third championship series between the Chicago White Sox of the American League and the Chicago Cubs of the National League will open October 1, it was decided today at a meeting of club officials with Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner.

The first two games, scheduled for October 1 and 2, will be played at Wrigley Field, with the October 3, 4, and 5 games at Comiskey Park. If the sixth and seventh games are needed they will be played at Wrigley Field, the Cubs' home park, October 6 and 7.

The October 3 and October 5 games will be night contests scheduled to start at 8:15 (C.S.T.). All afternoon games will start at 1:30 p. m. (C.S.T.).

Michigan Polishes For California Trip

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 23 (AP).—Michigan's football squad went through a double-barreled drill today that included a quarter hour of tackling practice.

Three more practice sessions—two tomorrow—are ahead of the Wolverines before they leave by plane Wednesday on the first leg of their jaunt to the West Coast for the season opener Saturday against the University of California at Berkeley.

Coach H. O. (Fritz) Crisler said he would name the players for the trip tomorrow, but injuries probably will keep four stalwarts—End John Karwales, Tackle Rudy Sengel and Halfbacks Paul Kromer and Bob Kresja—at home. All but Kromer are sophomores.

Don't Expect Normal Trade, Bankers Told

Burgess Warns Painful Adjustments to Arms Program Are Ahead

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 23.—"We face a situation as critical as though we were already at war," and "business as usual" can no longer be the guiding principle of the country, W. Randolph Burgess, vice chairman of the National City Bank of New York, told 4,000 of the Nation's leading bankers today.

Addressing the sixty-sixth convention of the American Bankers Association, Burgess, a former vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and a recognized authority on Federal finance, strongly attacked the progress of the defense effort to date.

"Our avoidance of war and our future position in the world probably depend on prompt arming," Burgess declared.

"Our defense program is laggard, held back by red tape, technicalities, a failure to put first things first.

"Nothing must now stand in its way.

Warns Against Inflation

Pointing out that wars and periods of inflation and sharply rising prices have gone, historically, hand in hand, he warned:

"Our defense spending is piled on top of a huge annual budgetary deficit. We have been on a wild governmental spending spree and our habits and powers of control are impaired.

"As a people, we have not suffered the usual consequences of these abortions and have come to believe we never will, a highly dangerous frame of mind."

Burgess outlined two possible courses for attacking the defense problem:

"The first is to continue the way we have been going, that is to continue in the depression which has now lasted for nearly ten years, with continued large unemployment as a moral and social, as well as an economic, drag on the whole country. In this situation and without substantial recovery, the defense program would become an almost unbearable burden.

"If that program can be carried through only by a decrease of other production and other consumption, it means a further decrease in the standard of living, a decrease which might easily be socially dangerous at a time of large unemployment and substandard consumption in many population groups.

"This is not the moral atmosphere for an energetic defense effort."

Second Alternative Cited

The second alternative, Burgess said, was to "put the whole Nation to work, so that the defense program is added to, and not subtracted from our present output.

"If we thus lift the total national income there will be large increases in Government tax receipts, and decreases in unemployment which would make possible large reductions in relief expenditures and thus bring the budget nearer to balance and lessen technical causes for inflation.

"But more important still, a Nation at work without the drag of unemployment is a more effective Nation both for defense and for progress."

Steps listed by Burgess as necessary to "put the whole country to work" for the defense effort included:

1. A security market less hampered by stringent controls.

2. Revision of the (Federal) Labor Relations Act, "to give the employer as well as the employe a square deal."

3. Revision of portions of the wages and hours law "which tend to raise costs and prices both to the Government and to the general public."

4. Railroad legislation "to clear up the debris of insolvencies."

5. Revision of the Utility Holding Company act, "to open the way for the utilities to finance . . . additions and improvement.

6. "Intelligent and sympathetic administration of these and other laws."

U. S. Must Plan Now

Formulation of plans now by business and financial leaders to enable the United States to aid effectively in the postwar reconstruction of those countries "that are willing to adhere to our way of life, and, if the need should arise, to combat totalitarian methods of international trade, was urged on the bankers by Dr. Marcus Nadler, professor of finance at New York University.

"The United States is the only country in the world in a position to help the postwar reconstruction of impoverished Europe and, for that matter, the entire world," Nadler said.

"Once hostilities are over . . . the task of reconstruction will begin, and the type of economic system that will be established in Europe and the methods of international trade that will be developed will depend to a considerable extent on the financial and economic aid which the impoverished and exhausted European countries obtain from the United States."

Steel Rate Dips Slightly in Week

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will operate at 92.5 per cent of capacity this week against 92.9 per cent, highest for the year, in the preceding week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago output was at 91.3 per cent of capacity and a year ago 83.8 per cent.

Steel circles said the decline was due in part to repair and expansion work on some furnaces.

Life Insurance Leader Assails U. S. 'Invasion'

Head of Underwriters Says Group Will Fight Federal Control

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Charles J. Zimmerman, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, declared today the association "would unalterably oppose the invasion" of the Federal Government into life insurance control.

"We have no quarrel with a Federal Government which takes over those functions which cannot be successfully carried out by State and local governments," he declared in a speech prepared for the association's annual convention, and added:

"But I believe it is not only our right, but our duty, to place a restraining hand on the grasping arm of a Federal Government which reached out to take over those functions which can be and are being successfully conducted by State and local governments."

Zimmerman said the association had welcomed the investigation of the life insurance business, but declared "we . . . are suspicious of the motives of some of the individuals" in Washington conducting it.

"I have a deep conviction . . . that there are some individuals in Washington who would . . . scrap the institution of life insurance as a private institution."

Republic Steel Plans Expansion In Four Cities

Youngstown, Ohio, Sept. 23 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation announced today a program for enlarging iron and steel capacity at plants here, in Cleveland and Canton, Ohio; Gadsden, Ala., and Monroe, Mich.

The local No. 4 blast furnace will be enlarged, relined and rebuilt. Ingot soaking pits and Bessemer blooming mills will also be rebuilt and enlarged.

Cold-rolled capacity of the Cleveland plants will be stepped up by instalation of a four-stand, four-high 54-inch rolling mill in connection with the new large hot strip mill.

London Tin Rises

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Tin advanced more than £6 per ton on the metal exchange here today. The rise followed a recommendation of the non-ferrous metal control board, granting freer exports of tin to the United States.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Inquiry for gray goods was very broad today, but only small amounts were sold, with mills disinclined to sell at last sales levels. Fair business was transacted in rayon twills and poplins, while other staple constructions were in good demand. Traders in woolen goods report wholesale stocks of clothing diminishing rapidly as demand for women's wear fabrics continues unabated. Silk goods were featureless.

War Optimism, Commodity Rise Aid Stocks In Broad Advance; Turnover Accelerates

New York, Sept. 23.—A general advance in commodity prices, particularly nonferrous metals, helped carry the stock market into new high ground for the recovery today. At the close the market's composite average was at the highest level since May 13, which means the highest of the rise which started shortly after the invasion of the Low Countries. The Herald Tribune's composite average advanced 0.82 point.

Gratifying to the bullish forces was the greater activity on the advance. The turnover on the big board was 982,250 shares, the largest day since September 5.

War optimism, and the accumulation of favorable business news received credit for today's substantial advance. Hardening commodity prices normally go along with increased business activity. We have been having the greater activity in business for some weeks but commodities, while edging higher, have not been too convincing with their gains. In their action today, however, they appeared to be saying "positively."

Wheat futures closed up 1¾ to 2⅛ cents a bushel, which means 11 cents above the mid-August lows. Spot wheat, at 9¾ cents a bushel, was up 3¾ cents. Cotton futures gained 5 to 7 points. Gains in other commodities, both for spot delivery and futures, were general.

Among the futures, hides added 43 to 54 points; rubber, 1 to 8 points; silk, 2 to 3 cents; copper, 5 to 10 points; lead, 9 to 11 points; coffee, 3 to 11 points; wool tops, 11 to 15 points, and cottonseed oil, 2 to 4 points.

In the spot market for nonferrous metals, zinc advanced 40 points to 7.25 cents a pound, East St. Louis base. Lead advanced 10 points to 5 cents a pound, New York, with no price quoted until late afternoon. There has been no copper price advance as yet, but sales were reported heavy and custom smelters out of the market, with the outside market selling at 11.75 cents against the official rate of 11.50 cents.

This general hardening in commodities coincided with a wave of optimism over the resistance being displayed by the British.

A feature of today's trading was the rise in numerous inactive preferred issues. In most cases the wide gains in such securities have been centered on issues on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends. A few of the preferreds which stood out today, and their gains, were American Car & Foundry, 3; Associated Dry Goods 2d, 3¾; E. G. Budd, 6½; Foster Wheeler, 8; General Steel Casting, 4½; Minneapolis Moline, 5⅝; Otis Steel, 5½; Pittsburgh Steel's three issues, 3 and 4 points; Pure Oil, 4½; Revere $7, 8; United Stores, 4⅞; United States Leather, 4⅛, and Worthington Pump B, 15.

Gains in active common stocks were impressive, but ranged generally from 1 to 3 points. United States Steel was the day's most active stock, closing up 2 points. Central headed the rails with a good fractional advance and General Motors led its division with a gain of about a point. Chrysler was slightly less active, but jumped 2⅞. Bethlehem added 1⅜. Anaconda was up a point and Kennecott 1½. Dupont gained 4⅝, Allied Chemical 3½ and American Smelting 2½.

Along with the improvement in stock prices today, the tone was firmer in virtually every section of the bond list with turnover on the stock exchange rising to $8,406,000, against $5,632,000 on the preceding full trading day.

Wheat Prices Soar 2 Cents To July Highs

Short Covering, War Developments Aid In Strengthening

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Scoring one of the sharpest advances of recent months, wheat prices today shot up two cents a bushel to the highest level since July 8.

The upturn, which carried values about 11 cents above the season's lows established in mid-August, was the result of buying that came from previous "short" sellers as well as other sources and apparently was inspired by strength in securities, war developments and the diminishing supply of grain not under Government loans.

Wheat closed 1¾-2⅛ cents higher than Saturday; December, 78⅝-79¾, May, 80-80⅛; corn, 1½-1¾ up, December, 58-57⅞; May, 58⅞; oats, ¾-1 cent up; soybeans, ⅞-1¼ higher; rye, 1⅛-1¼ up and lard, 5-10 higher.

The advance put wheat futures here nearer the Government loan basis than they have been at any time since the new crop began to move in this territory. In the spot market No. 2 hard wheat sold up to 82 cents, or one cent over the loan rate.

H. C. Donovan, crop expert, said weather has been ideal for ripening and much of the crop is now beyond threat of cold weather damage.

No. 2 yellow soybeans sold at 78 cents, almost 4 cents over October futures. The first car of new beans was received here from Central Illinois.

Lead, Zinc Prices Surge Forward

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Heavy consumption by munitions makers resulted today in price jumps for lead and zinc, the former to the highest quotation since last May and the latter to the highest since August, 1937.

Leading producers boosted lead by one-tenth cent a pound to 5 cents, delivered in New York. Zinc was raised four-tenths cent a pound to 7.25 cents, delivered in East St. Louis.

Demand was described by metals experts as "greater than the apparent available supply."

Exchange Markets

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Canadian dollar rallied ¼ cent to 84⅛ U. S. cents in the free foreign money market today.

Sterling dipped ¼ cent to 4.04. The Mexican peso improved nominally 1/10 of a cent to 20½ cents, and the Swiss franc edged up to 22.82 cents.

From London came word of a revision in exchange regulations which will permit opening of registered sterling accounts in the names of firms and companies resident in the United States, Philippines and U. S. dependencies, as well as Switzerland. Formerly only designated banks were allowed such accounts, through which the great bulk of British-American trade is done.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for U. S. dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium. Equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of: Buying, 9.91 per cent; selling, 9.09 per cent. Canadian dollar in New York open market, 15⅛ per cent discount, or 84 13/16 U. S. cents.

Great Britain, official (bankers foreign exchange committee rates): Buying, $4.02; selling, $4.04; open market, cables, $4.04.

Old Belt Tobacco Marts Open Today In 11 Va. Towns

Danville, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Old belt tobacco markets will open in 11 Virginia towns tomorrow.

Tons of bright lemon-colored leaf, tied in neat bundles, was being prepared for the opening sales starting at 9 a. m. Fine weather was indicated for the transfer of the tobacco to the sales warehouses.

There was much speculation at to the opening price. Last year's average was $14.59 per hundred pounds, but a somewhat higher price was hoped for this year because this season's crop is 45 per cent short of the 1939 yield. There has been an improvement of bids, also, in the middle belt markets of North Carolina.

Virginia's old belt towns, in addition to Danville, include Petersburg, Rocky Mount, Martinsville, Brookneal, Chase City, Kenbridge, Lawrenceville, South Hill, South Boston and Clarksville.

Bausch & Lomb Aide Sees 5-8% Recovery

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Edward S. La Rose, controller of Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., Rochester, N. Y., predicted today that business conditions in the United States would be 5 to 8 per cent better next year than this, regardless of the outcome of the Presidential election or the war.

Speaking at the annual session of the Controllers Institute of America, La Rose said he based his prediction on various indices.

Concerning the war, La Rose asserted: "A British success would stimulate business in the United States, but even if the British are defeated there will be only a temporary lapse in business, and then there will be a pickup."

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 23 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Fine Western-grown wool was receiving a strong demand in Boston today. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags have brought 89@91 cents, scoured basis. Average 12-month Texas wools have been sold at 90 cents, scoured basis, and choice lots have brought 92 cents scoured basis. The active demand was mostly on fine wools. Other grades were receiving some inquiries, but no sizable orders.

U. S. Exports Rebound on British Buying

Foreign Sales Spurt To $349,800,000 During August

United States exports rebounded in August to $349,800,000.

In July, the collapse of France and the blockading of the Mediterranean caused a drop in exports to $317,021,000, but the Commerce Department in a monthly report said yesterday increased British purchases had compensated for these losses during August.

Imports, however, declined from $232,256,000 in July to $220,217,000 in August.

Exports during the first eight months of 1940 went to a total of $2,734,616,000 and imports to $1,746,231,000, an export balance of $988,385,000. In the similar period last year, exports totaled $1,895,745,000, imports, $1,438,991,000, and the export balance to $456,754,000.

War Deals Dominate

Throughout this 1940 period, war transactions dominated the figures more and more. In August, for instance, the export increase was confined almost entirely to metals, machinery, aircraft and other vehicles. Shipments of other items, particularly agricultural products, generally declined.

Exports of iron and steel manufactures jumped from $49,000,000 in July to $65,000,000 in August. Shipments of airplanes and parts, primarily to the British, jumped from $23,000,000 to $37,000,000—the largest airplane exports in any month in history. Sales of metal-working machinery rose from $15,000,000 to $22,000,000.

Import Drop Explained

The Commerce Department said the decline in imports was due to "a number of essentially unrelated developments." It said that imports of diamonds, burlap and some other items fell off mostly because unusually large arrivals in July had made new shipments temporarily unnecessary. Some imports, especially strategic defense materials such as tin, nickel, manganese, silk and rubber, increased.

Comparisons of exports and imports of principal agricultural commodities, giving figures for August, 1939; August, 1940, the first eight months of 1939, and the first eight months of 1940, in that order, follow:

Leaf Exports Shrink

Exports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds): 33,773,000, 14,360,000, 222,986,000, 187,031,000.

Imports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds): 7,548,000, 7,329,000, 51,329,000, 50,710,000.

Exports of wheat (bushels): 5,903,000, 934,000, 56,934,000, 11,244,000.

Imports of wheat for milling and re-export (bushels): 939,000, 585,000, 7,404,000, 6,019,000.

Exports of corn (bushels): 1,087,000, 3,332,000, 18,326,000, 29,597,000.

Exports of lard (pounds): 22,848,000, 10,142,000, 188,854,000, 158,591,000.

Exports of meat products (pounds): 15,706,000, 6,728,000, 130,334,000, 116,676,000.

Imports of meat products (pounds): 15,993,000, 7,970,000, 108,064,000, 70,065,000.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Rose C. Harding, 1126 Montello Ave., N. E., Washington, D. C., plaintiff vs. James Edmond Harding, 6220 Everall Ave., Baltimore, Md., defendant. Civil Action 8120. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce by the plaintiff from the defendant upon the grond of desertion for more than two years, or voluntary separation without cohabitation for more than five years. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 20th day of September, 1940, ordered that the defendant, James Edmond Harding, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the FORTIETH DAY, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter, and The Washington Post before said day. ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. Attest. (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By ELEANOR E. JOBE, Assistant Clerk. 24,31,8

Bungalow in the Woods
$475 Down—$29.15 Month
New bungalow (ready Nov. 1st) with a full acre of ground on the new Lee Blvd. (Route 50), 30 minutes from downtown. If you have planned a comfortable and modern insulated bungalow with 2 bedrooms and bath, large living room, fireplace, porch, bright modern kitchen, this is what you have waited for. The above monthly payments include taxes and insurance. An ideal opportunity for a person with moderate income, who has been unable to find a home with a large garden and very small monthly payments. If you are willing to ride 30 minutes each way to and from work, here is an opportunity to own a home for about ¼ of what you are now paying for rent.

The Post Radio Time Table

1 p. m., WMAL—Katherine Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, in the news for her honorary award for outstanding service to children, is the Cover Lady of Alma Kitchell's Streamlined Journal.

7, WJSV—A Canadian-American whose two sisters and brothers amassed great wealth but didn't leave him a dime when they died, nevertheless is heir to a $60,000 slice of the $1,000,000 estate left by the brother.

7:30, WMAL—Playwright Marc Connelly (remember "The Green Pastures?") and Magazine Writer Alva Johnston wear their thinking caps to Information Please.

7:30, WMAL—Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy turn to crime detection on the First Nighter dramalet, "Last Clue to Murder."

8, WRC—Rudy Vallee and Musical Americana are going to switch radio times two weeks from tonight. So this Tuesday, Thursday's Rudy Vallee is guest on the Raymond Paige program. Beatrice Kay, the Gay Nineties Revue songstress, is another dropper-inner and joins Rudy in a medley of "Honey Boy," "Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Aye" and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now."

8:30, WJSV—Composer Ferde Grofe and Soprano Francia White take their turns answering the knotty ones on So You Think You Know Music?

Listen! with Glynn
"A banana with feathers growing out of it is a mighty handy thing to carry along with you," Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle declares.
"It is mighty handy," the Colonel explains, "in case someone stops you on the street and says, "Hey, have you got a banana with feathers growing out of it."
Your simple correspondent for reason thinks that such remarks are pretty hilarious and, on the fairly good chance that there are many among you who are affected likewise, this is a note to call your attention to the fact that the Colonel is to return to WJSV and the Columbia network this Sunday, September 29, to be heard at 5:30 p. m. every Sunday.
Stoopnagle, who evolves his startling inventions in the quiet of his home laboratories at "Honorable Mansion," has many new discoveries with which he expects to astound the waiting world. One of the features of his show this year is to be his more or less thoughtless giving away of $125. A hundred is to go to studio contestants who don't let the Colonel confuse them and come through with the right answers to questions and things. The other $25 goes out in $5 lots to radio listeners who send in "Daffynitions" or inventions used on the program.
"That is a lot of money to give away," says Colonel Stoopnagle, "which is three of the reasons why I always have as many relatives as possible at each broadcast."

Forecasts for Tuesday and Wednesday

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Mostly cloudy Tuesday followed by light showers Tuesday night; Wednesday rain and cooler; gentle southerly winds Tuesday, becoming moderate northerly Wednesday.

For Maryland and Virginia—Mostly cloudy Tuesday, followed by light showers Tuesday night; Wednesday rain and cooler.

Weather Conditions

A broad trough of low pressure that extends from Texas and eastern New Mexico to the northern Lake region is advancing eastward. Houghton, Mich., 1006.4 millibars (29.69 inches), and Tucumcari, N. Mex., 1006.8 millibars (29.70 inches). Pressure remains low over most of Alaska, Kodiak, 998.3 millibars (29.48 inches). Pressure is high and rising over the northern Rocky Mountain region and it remains high from the Atlantic States eastward over the ocean. Grea's Falls, Mont., 1021.3 millibars (30.16 inches), Nantucket, Mass., 1018.0 millibars (30.06 inches). There have been general rains from Texas and Louisiana, northward to North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and showers have occurred in portions of the Rocky Mountains and Plateau regions. The temperature has fallen in the northern Rocky Mountain region, the northern Plains States and almost generally over the eastern half of the United States, but is still above normal quite generally.

Tropical Disturbance

The following was received this evening from the forecast center at New Orleans, La.: Advisory 9:30 p. m. Eastern standard time.: Southeast storm warnings ordered 9:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, Morgan City, La. Tropical disturbance of very small diameter, recurving sharply to the northeast from the Matagorda Bay area of Texas. The disturbance will begin to move more rapidly and from present indications will move inland Tuesday morning between Lake Charles and Morgan City, La., attended by winds of 50 to 60 miles per hour in squalls over a small area near the center. Fresh to strong winds are expected tonight and early Tuesday on the upper Texas coast, but danger of winds of gale force for that area has passed. Storm warnings are now displayed north of Matagorda, Tex., to Morgan City, La.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Witnessed Heart Operation — BY MILTON CANIFF

YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN YOUR FACE WHEN I TOSSED YOU THAT DYNAMITE, PATRICK! YOU SURE GOT OVER BEING SORE AT ME IN A HURRY!
WHO'S SORE? YOU HAD TO CATCH RAVEN SHERMAN OFF GUARD—AND LOCKED IN JAIL—TO EVEN ATTEMPT TO KISS HER! YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE CUT YOUR HAIR—YOU'VE LOST ALL YOUR STRENGTH!
THE SILVER ONE APPEARS TO HAVE SLEPT WELL!
WHY—YES, IN A WAY... THERE'S SOMETHING I MUST TELL YOU...
...THAT PILOT WHO FLEW THE PLANE... HE CAME BY LAST NIGHT... YOU TWO WERE ASLEEP... HE SAID NOT TO WORRY, THEY'D GET US OUT OF HERE! HE HAD AN ARMFUL OF DYNAMITE!
... HE HAD AN ARMFUL OF DYNAMITE, INDEED! I WAS NOT ASLEEP!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

MM! NOT A BAD LUNCH—FOR A HAND-OUT!—BUT, OF COURSE, HUNGER IS THE BEST SAUCE!
WILL YOU PLEASE GO NOW? I HAVE WORK TO DO!
WORK? SUCH AN UGLY WORD!
YOUNG MAN! I'VE BEEN WORKING FOR MORE THAN HALF A CENTURY... AND I'VE COUNTED IT A PRIVILEGE, NOT A HARDSHIP!
DEAR, DEAR! SUCH A TIRESOME, BOURGEOIS PHILOSOPHY! IT'S SILLY THEORIES LIKE YOURS THAT HELP KEEP US IN SLAVERY, MRS. MARY WORTH!
H-HOW DID YOU KNOW MY NAME?
OH, READING IS ONE OF MY ACCOMPLISHMENTS! I MIGHT HAVE FOUND YOU IN THE CITY DIRECTORY!... BUT I DIDN'T! AU REVOIR!

DONALD DUCK — Dead Letter Office — BY WALT DISNEY

NOBODY'S SHOWED UP FOR OUR PARTY, UNCA DONALD...
NOT YET! WAIT ANOTHER HALF-HOUR!
CAN'T WE EAT THE ICE CREAM?
THE HALF-HOUR'S UP...
NOW CAN WE EAT IT?
OKAY! GO AHEAD AND EAT IT!
BUT FIRST YOU'RE GONNA CHANGE INTO YOUR OLD CLOTHES!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Clues — BY FRANK MARTINEK

WINSLOW'S GONE! SAY, YOU DON'T SUPPOSE-??
QUICK! TRY TO FIND OTHER CLUES!
THERE'S A TRAIL OF IRREGULAR BLACK MARKS LEADING FROM THIS SPOT
COULD IT BE BLACK PAINT? THERE'S FRESHLY PAINTED LETTERING ON THESE BIG EMPTY BARRELS
XXX
THAT'S IT! ONE OF 'EM'S BEEN ROLLED ALONG THE FLOOR!
—INTO THAT BACK ROOM! COME ON—FOLLOW THE TRAIL!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

YOU WISH TO ESCAPE? BUT WHY ARE YOU THE GUEST OF THE RAJAH OF BAKDORE? TELL NETAH!
WAHOO THROW UM SACRED COW—RAJAH SAY WAHOO GOTTA DIE!
BUT RAJAH PUTTUM STUFFED HAT AN' EYE-WINDOWS ON WAHOO—HE SAY "WONDERFUL!"—THEN HE START FEEDIN' WAHOO FANCY GRUB—TREAT UM LIKE LONG LOST BROTHER!
HOW STRANGE! IT IS NOT THE CUSTOM OF THE RAJAH, CHICKEN-HEARTED THOUGH HE IS, TO PAMPER A MAN CONDEMNED TO DIE!
DEPEND ON IT! HE HAS SOME EVIL PLAN IN MIND—AND, AS YOUR SWORN SLAVE, NETAH WILL UNCOVER IT!
YOU FINDUM KEYS TO PALACE DOOR AN' WAHOO BE SATISFIED!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

MANY BROTHERS WORK IN MINE—CHAINED LIKE ANIMALS—
HE'S LYIN' SERGEANT! TH' BOSS DON'T HIRE INJUNS!
THE INDIAN IS DEAD! YOU AND YOUR BOSS, CRANE, WILL ANSWER TO THE LAW FOR THIS!
LISTEN, CRANE! KING OF TH' MOUNTED IS HERE—JUST ARRESTED YOUR ENGINEER FOR MURDERIN' AN INDIAN!
THANKS, GILLIS! DON'T LET KING START UP HERE—I'LL BE RIGHT DOWN!

90,000 Placements Since June; Navy Yard Expansion to Continue

Continued expansion of the Washington Navy Yard was foreshadowed yesterday in the Civil Service Commission's announcement that 233 defense workers were put to work in the big gun factory during the second week of September.

Considerable construction already is under way at the yard and Navy officials said that additional enlargement of facilities is contemplated in addition to that already undertaken. It was pointed out, however, that the limits of expansion have nearly been reached and that it probably will be necessary to construct plants elsewhere to keep pace with the huge naval building program.

The commission's speed-up machinery for recruiting has rounded up nearly 90,000 defense workers for the War and Navy departments since June. The majority of the places filled are in navy yards and arsenals in Massachusetts, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, New York, South Carolina, New Jersey, Nevada and Virginia.

Placements Rushed

In the Washington-Virginia area alone 1,053 workers were recruited in the second week of September, while 626 jobs were filled in New England, 1,582 in the New York area and 836 in Philadelphia.

"Many important steps have been taken recently to speed defense appointments," the commission announcement declared. "Examiners of the commission have been sent into industrial areas to bring current defense needs to the attention of skilled and technical workers. Technical experts of the commission have been dispatched to navy yards and arsenals to confer with employment officers in order to coordinate the commission's recruiting program with defense needs in the most practical manner. As a result, numerous actions have been taken to adapt examination requirements to present conditions for the purpose of securing national defense workers in a minimum of time."

The National Association of Broadcasters, the commission stated, has arranged for broadcasting Uncle Sam's needs for defense workers which are brought up to date weekly. In addition, "men wanted" posters have been put on display in every first and second-class postoffice in the country, while the Nation's police chiefs have directed members of their departments to bring the demand for skilled workmen to the attention of men who can be unqualifiedly recommended.

9,000 Placements Weekly

More than 9,000 defense workers are being placed in the War and Navy departments each week, the commission said.

The statement quoted a "high official of the Navy" highly commending the commission for its efforts.

Government employes living in Hyattsville and North Beach, Md., were granted permission by the Civil Service Commission yesterday to take part in "political activities of a local character" on the same basis on which they participated prior to enactment of the Hatch Act.

The commission's announcement said it was acting under authority of section 16 of the law of August 2, 1939, and on the basis of "appropriate requests from officials of the municipalities concerned."

Rights of Arlington County residents to take part in local politics were similarly restored recently.

Rehabilitation specialist for the visually handicapped, $3,800 a year; assistant specialist, $2,600; rehabilitation specialist for the tuberculous, $3,800 a year; rehabilitation specialist for deaf and hard of hearing, $3,800. Appointments are in the Office of Education.

Junior medical officers, two places, St. Elizabeths Hospital, $2,000.

Senior radiosonde technician, $2,000.

Junior dentist for filling position of dental interne, St. Elizabeths, $2,000.

Dealers to Plan 'Eat-Meat' Drive

Washington's meat dealers will plan a drive to "restore meat to its proper place in the diet" at a mass meeting at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building, it was announced yesterday.

The campaign will be part of a Nation-wide promotional program to be launched by the Institute of American Meat Packers. C. H. Ruppert, manager of Swift & Co. and chairman of the Washington campaign, annunced the meeting, and added:

"People of this country need more meat in the balanced diet for greater health. The meat trade of Washington will do its part to put meat on the American dining table more often."

Paul Mellon, at 33, Going Back To College to Fill In 'Gaps'

Already a Graduate Of Big Universities, He'll Enter St. John's

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23.—Paul Mellon, 33-year-old son of the late Andrew W. Mellon, thrice Secretary of the Treasury, disclosed today he is returning this week to college as a freshman to "make up to some extent important gaps" in his education.

PAUL MELLON

Young Mellon, father of a daughter, already is a graduate of Yale and Clare College, Cambridge University, England. But having elected to follow a literary-educational career he is going about the job in the same thorough fashion that his grandfather and father did in building one of the world's biggest banking-industrial empires.

He selected St. John's College at Annapolis because, he said, of his interest in many "general aspects of education" and because he thought the new teaching technique under trial there might be "the answer as a departure from the usual higher educational forms and methods" in America.

"About a year ago I learned of the program," explained Mellon.

"After several visits and several interesting conversations with the men responsible for it, plus a thorough study of the curriculum itself, I would like to see the experiment actually in operation from day to day."

Mellon will live in Annapolis, but return week-ends to his 400-acre farm near Upperville, in Fauquier County, Va. He recently gave away his big home here to a women's college.

St. John's is the third oldest college in the United States, antedated only by Harvard and William and Mary. Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, and other educators took over the direction of the school three years ago and started their program.

The classics of Augustine, Aquinas, Francois Villon, Machiavelli, Jefferson, Cicero and Karl Marx were reinstated as a full curriculum. Students grapple at first hand with their problems.

Mellon will begin rigorous sessions with Greek, Latin, French and German masters, studying the history of ideas in the first year. In astronomy, for instance, he will build and operate a model diopter, which Aristarchus first invented in the third century B. C., to measure the earth, sun and moon. Later in his senior year he will dissect an ox's heart, just as a scientist did centuries ago to prove blood circulated.

Willkie Lays Decline of Democracies To Roosevelt

Butte, Mont., Sept. 24.—Wendell Willkie tonight charged that President Roosevelt had contributed to the "economic decline of European democracies" by declaring in 1937 that commodity prices were too high.

Here in the Nation's copper capital, where assaults on world prices of that metal have been keenly felt, the Republican Presidential nominee told a crowd of 26,000:

"You will recall that in the spring of 1937 we had a marked business pickup and there are great hope throughout the world that the depression was at an end.

"Contributed to Rise of Hitler"

"In April, 1937, when the pickup was coming, the President made a public announcement that the price of commodities was too high. The effect was very disastrous throughout the world in my judgment. It was a factor in the decline of the democracies of Europe and thus contributed to the rise of Hitler.

"Copper was selling at 17 cents a pound. It began to fall immediately afterward. I am informed that this resulted in a reduction in the wages of every man who works

Sloan Fears New Depression Unless Willkie Is Elected

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—Warning that the armament program will not bring permanent prosperity, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, today expressed hope that Wendell Willkie will be President when the time comes to liquidate the defense undertaking.

Then, he said, "you will have coming into the economy more confidence in private enterprise."

"The defense program will be a minus when liquidated," he added, "Willkie will be a plus which will offset the minus to a great extent.

"If Mr. Roosevelt is elected there will be a minus and you will have two minuses—and a lack of confidence."

The Gallup Poll

'Independent' Gains Shown For Willkie

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 24.—Wendell Willkie's most striking gains as compared with 1936 Republican strength have been made among the so-called "independent" voters, a group overwhelmingly for President Roosevelt in the last Presidential election.

That fact stands out today at the conclusion of a Nation-wide fact-finding survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Political leaders have long held a healthy respect for the "independent" vote, but not too much has been known heretofore about its size or voting habits. The Institute's survey makes three major points clear in the current campaign:

1. One voter in every five (20 per cent) regards himself as an independent — without definite party allegiance. Easterners and Westerners, farmers and city people, these voters will hold the balance of power in November, since neither the Republicans nor the Democrats have enough "regular" party members to carry the election unaided.

2. Whereas the independents reached in the Institute survey were 76 per cent for President Roosevelt in the election of 1936, only 51 per cent with definite opinions at this stage of the race say they will vote for Roosevelt again. Mr. Willkie, with 49 per cent of the independent vote today, is 25 percentage points stronger with these voters than was Gov. Landon.

3. Furthermore, a substantial number of independents (18 per cent) say they have not yet decided how they will vote.

Today, in six key Northern and Western States, accounting for 153 electoral votes, independent voters with opinions divide as follows:

	Roosevelt	Willkie
Independents
New York	49%	51%
Pennsylvania	62	38
Ohio	52	48
Illinois	46	54
Michigan	53	47
California	52	48

French Cancel Indo-China Pact; Tokyo's Forces Renew Assault

By the United Press

Hanoi, Indo-China, Sept. 24. The Japanese Canton army late today resumed heavy attacks across the Kwangsi frontier on French and Indo-Chinese forces which resisted stoutly from fortified positions.

In the first few hours of the renewed attacks, said to be the most intense since the Japanese crossed the border Sunday night, 200 Japanese prisoners were reported taken.

[A French Broadcast from Saigon at 10 p. m. E. S. T. said the situation was "outwardly calm following a minor exchange of rifle and machine-gun fire Tuesday afternoon," but that Indo-China was continuing preparations to resist any Japanese action, the Associated Press reported.]

Air Alarms in Hanoi

French authorities, although still hopeful of a peaceful settlement, indicated that the agreement signed here on Sunday afternoon with the Japanese was canceled because it was unworkable. The agreement provided for Japanese occupation of three airdromes by a limited number of Japanese troops (said in France to be 6,000). It did not sanction entry of the powerful Canton army into Indo-China.

A Japanese invasion fleet comprising eight troop transports, a cruiser and three destroyers was reported en route to Haiphong, the country's principal port. The commander reportedly had been asked, however, by Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara to defer an attempt to land by force at Haiphong. Nishihara was en route to Hainan Island aboard a minesweeper, reportedly to attempt to persuade Gen. Ando, commanding the Japanese army in the South China area, to hold up his attack across the frontier.

Japanese Notify of Attack

The French, who were reported to have captured Dongdang on the frontier, which they were forced to abandon to superior forces early Monday, were said to be fighting determinedly there and at Langson, important railroad town 82 miles northeast of here. Heavy French shelling from concrete fortifications was said to be taking a heavy toll of advancing Japanese.

[A Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch said the Japanese had captured 240 men of the Indo-Chi-

British Lift Brows At French Report Of Nazi Disaster

London, Sept. 24 (AP).—Informed British military sources refused to comment today on dispatches from the French-Spanish border, published here, that Germany lost "between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops" in a disaster of September 16 when a Channel gale scattered Adolf Hitler's "invasion fleet."

The assertions were made in the Daily Mail by Harold Cardozo, a special correspondent on the French-Spanish border.

Neutral military sources also were inclined to discount the report.

Fuehrer Hints of Action by Russia, Threatens to Leave British Empire Intact Unless Tokyo Bows, Shanghai Hears

Shanghai Sept. 24.—Attempting an almost unbelievable stroke of international blackmail, Adolf Hitler seems to be upon the verge of successfully forcing Japan into an unwilling but full-fledged alliance with the Reich.

Adopting frank "or else" tactics, Hitler is demanding, through Max Stahmer, a personal emissary, that Japan immediately enter into full-fledged participation in warfare against Britain, under an iron-bound politico-economic alliance among the Axis powers.

[A United Press Shanghai dispatch said reports from Tokyo were that Stahmer had negotiated a provisional pact in which Germany and Japan agreed in principle on a defense alliance to become effective in event of Anglo-American collaboration, such as the suggested joint use of Britain's Singapore naval base.

[The New York Herald Tribune reported also that the Japanese Ambassador in Rome talked Tuesday with Foreign Minister Ciano in what appeared to be an extension of the recent Ribbentrop-Mussolini conferences.]

The German pressure, it is understood, includes hints of possible Soviet anti-Japanese action as well as a direct threat that if Japan does not join the Reich, Hitler will offer Britain an armistice under conditions leaving the British Empire practically intact except for former German colonies, but with Germany taking over the colonial empires of the Netherlands and Belgium, Italy being satisfied with the major portions of the French colonies.

Such a sensational development,

Roosevelt To Talk Today At New Airport

President Will Lay Terminal Building's Cornerstone at 3:30

President Roosevelt at 3:30 p. m. today will lay the cornerstone of the Terminal Building at the Washington National Airport, designed as a model for American commercial aviation.

All spectators must be in the airport grandstand by 3 p. m., when ground traffic on the field will be stopped and all civil flying halted in the Washington area.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to arrive at the terminal at 3:13 p. m. He will drive to a stand 500 feet in front of the Terminal Building to signal the first landings on the new field. A fleet of seven transport ships will be followed down the runways by planes representing the Army, Navy and Coast Guard.

The President will make a brief address before laying the cornerstone at a small grandstand behind the Terminal Building. Seats in this stand are reserved for Government officials, members of Congress and aviation and civic representatives. The ceremonies are to be broadcast over the three National radio networks.

No cards are required for admission to the general airport area. The public can enter from the Mount Vernon boulevard at the point where it has been diverted from its previous route and follow the old line to the high ground along the field and most of the area immediately behind the Terminal Building. The ceremonies will be clearly visible from these points, according to Civil Aeronautics officials.

Runways at the $13,000,000 field are now 90 per cent completed. Commercial use of the terminal will begin in December.

Heavy Bombs Blast London In Worst Raid

Gigantic Missiles Said To Be Shattering Center of Metropolis

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Sept. 25.—German bombers concentrated on central London last night and early today in a prolonged raid lit to bright whiteness by calcium flares they dropped before letting go each rack of bombs.

The raid was perhaps the most severe London has undergone. Heavy Nazi bombers struck again and again through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire that earlier had kept many of the raiders back from the central city section.

Incendiary bombs came down on the heart of London along with the big explosives.

The mid-London offices of an American firm were struck by a bomb during the intensive raid. A fire started in one wing was brought

Finns to Let Nazi Troops, Goods Pass To Arctic Ports

Helsinki (Wednesday), Sept. 25 (INS).—An agreement between Finland and Germany by which the Reich is given access to northern Finnish railway lines leading to Norwegian ports was reported in Helsinki early today.

An official Finnish announcement said that transportation of German troops and supplies through northern Finland to Norwegian ports is permitted.

Helsinki diplomatic circles saw in the agreement the first step toward establishment of a thoroughly protected land route from the ice-free Arctic ports southward to Germany. Such a route would greatly extend the British task of bottling up all possible ports which might be used by German shipping.

These circles also pointed out that use of the new Finnish route would spare Germany reported heavy losses in troops and transports at the hands of British submarines in the Skaggerak and Kattegat while en route from Denmark to Norwegian coastal points.

The new agreement apparently was arranged with the blessing of the Soviet Union, which has maintained a dominant interest in Finnish affairs since termination of the Russo-Finnish war.

Procope Not Aware

Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, said last night that the Legation had received no official word of the German troop transit agreement. He added, however, that the "arrangement does . . . not imply in any way a giving up of the policy of neutrality . . ."

Blow to Quota System

Senate Rejects Plan Adverse To D. C. Seekers of U. S. Jobs

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday finally rejected a proposal which would have the effect of barring residents of the District and environs from appointment in the near future to posts that may be brought into the civil service through the pending Ramspeck bill.

Defeat of the amendment which was offered by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, came only when the Senate agreed to reconsider after first accepting it.

The proposal, known as the Keller-Nichols amendment, had been approved by the House, but subjected to vigorous opposition of the Civil Service Commission. It would prevent appointment, to any of the more than 150,000 posts covered by the Ramspeck bill, of residents of any State that has exceeded its quota of appointments until the quota of every State has been filled.

The District's civil service quota is 205, Senator Ellender pointed out, while on February 29, 1940, 8,873 District residents had civil service posts.

Maryland has a quota of 687, with 2,003 employes, while Virginia's quota is 1,020, with 2,052 employes. Louisiana, on the other hand, has only 422 civil service positions occupied out of a quota of 885.

On the same vote that knocked out the Keller-Nichols amendment, the Senate approved a proposal that

French Channel Coast in Flames, 4 Nazi Vessels Sunk in One Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 24.—Britain's counter-offensive against invasion swung today in a widening arc of destruction symbolized by a spectacular success in the English Channel—the apparent sinking of four armed German vessels by a single flight of British bombers—and heavy attacks on the Nazi occupied naval base at Brest, France.

On into the night the Royal Air Force carried its almost continuous hammering of Nazi invasion bases, hurling new violent assaults at the ports opposite its invasion-menaced shores. Late tonight Channel coast observers reported "countless" flashes were rising from exploding bombs and heavy Nazi antiaircraft fire.

The Royal Air Force also gave Berlin its attention, hammering utilities and factories for the second successive night.

Berlin Calls Damage Slight

[Berlin's third night raid, late Tuesday and early Wednesday, Berlin dispatches said, caused "several" civilian casualties, as compared to 11 killed and 14 hurt in Monday night's attack. German authorities, contradicting British reports, insisted only slight damage was caused, all to nonmilitary objectives. Tuesday night's raid of a little less than three hours was, according to neutral observers, less severe than Monday night's attack of nearly four hours.]

Reports from Dover tonight said the Straits were shrouded in dense mist. The sea was calm under a cloudless, star-lit sky. There was a slight northwesterly wind.

Mine Sweepers Hit

The R. A. F.'s blow was struck in sight of an Associated Press representative on the English shore, while the German ships moved over the quiet seas toward Boulogne, and it appeared to him that all had been sunk.

The air ministry, identifying the vessels as mine sweepers, said merely that two were known to have been hit and a third damaged.

Five Blenheim bombers, flying in single file, appeared suddenly and went into a dive from 5,000 feet. They loosed a salvo of bombs and columns of water rose as high as the English cliffs.

When the smoke and spray had cleared, only a single German ship could be seen. The Blenheims wheeled and attacked again and when the haze had lifted once more that ship, too, was gone from sight.

Dornier Shot Down

A German Dornier seaplane appeared and was shot down immediately, but a squadron of 15 German Messerschmitt bomber-fighters escorting the vessels disappeared before the British attack.

A cluster of Nazi E-boats—torpedo-carrying motor speedboats—darted out of Boulogne, but turned immediately and raced back to harbor.

[The United Press said its Folkstone correspondent reported the British sank five Nazi torpedo boats.]

Rock Is Shaken

By the Associated Press

Gibraltar, (Wednesday), Sept. 25.—War planes of France, Britain's Nazi-subjugated ally, heavily bombed Gibraltar for four hours and five minutes Tuesday, inflicting death, injuries, property damage and fires.

One hundred or more bombs were hurled by 20 or more planes in the longest and heaviest air raid ever experienced by "The Rock," often raided by Italian bombers.

(Laborers returning to the Spanish town of La Linea, just across a neutral strip and moat from the fortress, said the French bombers sank a British destroyer, hit a submarine and wrought other heavy military damage and death. They said Gibraltar had two more air raid alarms during the evening but no planes were seen.)

Appear to Be U. S Planes

Gibraltar military authorities described the raiders merely as "of French types."

Observers, however, said the planes definitely were French, and Miss Helen Hiett, of the National Broadcasting Co., reported they appeared to be American-made Martin bombers.

The assault apparently was in reprisal for the British-supported attack by "free" French naval forces on Dakar, capital of French West Africa.

The British military report said that so far four persons had been killed and 12 injured by the French raiders, at least one of which was shot down by concentrated gunfire from shore batteries and warships in the harbor.

Damage Described

The Spanish workmen reaching La Linea said in addition to damage to ships, the bombs wrecked a dry dock, set ammunition dumps and food stores afire, badly damaged the "Rock" Hotel, hit the engineers' barracks, ripped up walls on the street, sank two barges, and destroyed an antiaircraft battery and

Shells Speak Again

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 24.—The French government announced tonight that the British naval forces supporting the so-called "Free French" attack on African Senegal, had opened a new and prolonged bombardment of the town of Dakar after failing in six troop-landing attempts.

Casualties reported from Dakar ran as high as 300.

Dakar was still holding out late tonight, while fog hampered British aerial activity, the French said.

A second ultimatum, rejected like the first by Pierre Boisson, French governor general, was declared officially to have demanded the surrender of the capital of French West Africa under pain of destruction of Dakar's fortifications and occupation of the town by force.

A naval communique said the ultimatum was signed by "the admiral commanding the English fleet."

British Try to Land

(In London, the headquarters of Gen Charles de Gaulle, commanding the "Free French" invading forces, said British naval units were along merely to provide "supplementary protection against any attack carried out with German participation." The statement said de Gaulle decided on the expedition because German and Italian officers had seized control of the Dakar air base, which is only 1,900 miles from South America.)

All day Monday and late into the night a naval battle had raged off Dakar, while the attackers made attempt after attempt to land under the cover of shellfire.

A communique said the French submarine Persee was sunk while attacking a British cruiser; that the cruiser herself suffered a direct hit from the Persee, and that three British planes had been shot down.

Bombardment Still Under Way

The second ultimatum, timed to expire at 6 a. m. today, came at 1:30 Tuesday morning, after the invaders had tried four times to land troops at Rufisque Beach, 20 miles northeast of Dakar, and had tried twice to put men ashore further to the northeast. All were repulsed, the government said.

Early this morning the British began dropping shells on the important French naval base, which the government calls "the key to the South Atlantic." Late today the bombardment still was going on, meager wireless reports related.

(The German radio said the attackers of Dakar numbered 7,000

If Congress Remains

Action on D. C. Income Tax Law Change Sought This Fall

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Congressional action on proposed amendments to strengthen the District income tax law will be sought by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, father of the revenue act, if Congress remains in session this fall, he said yesterday after the Commissioners had indorsed his bill.

The District Commissioners, in a report held up almost four months by the Budget Bureau, recommended to the House District Committee that the basis of the levy be changed from one of domicile to actual residence.

The alteration, they indicated, would clarify the confusion that now exists over what constitutes a legal domicile. Records of the Internal Revenue Bureau, the report stated, show that 18,000 persons residing in the District and having taxable incomes failed to file returns on the local levy.

Dirksen said it was unfortunate that the report had been delayed until after the District Committee had concluded its labors, but he added that if Congress settles down to work after an expected over-election recess, he will ask that the committee be recalled to consider his bill.

The budget bureau offered no explanation for holding up the Com-

Civil Service Speeds Filling Of Arms Jobs

90,000 Placements Since June; Navy Yard Expansion to Continue

Continued expansion of the Washington Navy Yard was foreshadowed yesterday in the Civil Service Commission's announcement that 233 defense workers were put to work in the big gun factory during the second week of September.

Considerable construction already is under way at the yard and Navy officials said that additional enlargement of facilities is contemplated in addition to that already undertaken. It was pointed out, however, that the limits of expansion have nearly been reached and that it probably will be necessary to construct plants elsewhere to keep pace with the huge naval building program.

The commission's speed-up machinery for recruiting has rounded up nearly 90,000 defense workers for the War and Navy departments since June. The majority of the places filled are in navy yards and arsenals in Massachusetts, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, New York, South Carolina, New Jersey, Nevada and Virginia.

Placements Rushed

In the Washington-Virginia area alone 1,053 workers were recruited in the second week of September, while 626 jobs were filled in New England, 1,582 in the New York area and 836 in Philadelphia.

"Many important steps have been taken recently to speed defense appointments," the commission announcement declared. "Examiners of the commission have been sent into industrial areas to bring current defense needs to the attention of skilled and technical workers. Technical experts of the commission have been dispatched to navy yards and arsenals to confer with employment officers in order to coordinate the commission's recruiting program with defense needs in the most practical manner. As a result, numerous actions have been taken to adapt examination requirements to present conditions for the purpose of securing national defense workers in a minimum of time."

The National Association of Broadcasters, the commission stated, has arranged for broadcasting Uncle Sam's needs for defense workers which are brought up to date weekly. In addition, "men wanted" posters have been put on display in every first and second-class postoffice in the country, while the Nation's police chiefs have directed members of their departments to bring the demand for skilled workmen to the attention of men who can be unqualifiedly recommended.

9,000 Placements Weekly

More than 9,000 defense workers are being placed in the War and Navy departments each week, the commission said.

The statement quoted a "high official of the Navy" highly commending the commission for its efforts.

Government employes living in Hyattsville and North Beach, Md., were granted permission by the Civil Service Commission yesterday to take part in "political activities of a local character" on the same basis on which they participated prior to enactment of the Hatch Act.

The commission's announcement said it was acting under authority of section 16 of the law of August 2, 1939, and on the basis of "appropriate requests from officials of the municipalities concerned."

Rights of Arlington County residents to take part in local politics were similarly restored recently.

Permission would be granted residents of other Maryland and Virginia towns if municipal officials requested it.

The following Civil Service examinations recently were announced:

Rehabilitation specialist for the visually handicapped, $3,800 a year; assistant specialist, $2,600; rehabilitation specialist for the tuberculous, $3,800 a year; rehabilitation specialist for deaf and hard of hearing, $3,800. Appointments are in the Office of Education.

Junior medical officers, two places, St. Elizabeths Hospital, $2,000.

Economist, principal, senior, associate and assistant from $5,600 to $2,600.

Senior radiosonde technician, $2,000.

Dealers to Plan 'Eat-Meat' Drive

Washington's meat dealers will plan a drive to "restore meat to its proper place in the diet" at a mass meeting at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building, it was announced yesterday.

The campaign will be part of a Nation-wide promotional program to be launched by the Institute of American Meat Packers. C. H. Ruppert, manager of Swift & Co. and chairman of the Washington campaign, annunced the meeting, and added:

"People of this country need more meat in the balanced diet for greater health. The meat trade of Washington will do its part to put meat on the American dining table more often."

Paul Mellon, at 33, Going Back To College to Fill In 'Gaps'

Already a Graduate Of Big Universities, He'll Enter St. John's

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23.—Paul Mellon, 33-year-old son of the late Andrew W. Mellon, thrice Secretary of the Treasury, disclosed today he is returning this week to college as a freshman to "make up to some extent important gaps" in his education.

Young Mellon, father of a daughter, already is a graduate of Yale and Clare College, Cambridge University, England. But having elected to follow a literary-educational career he is going about the job in the same thorough fashion that his grandfather and father did in building one of the world's biggest banking-industrial empires.

He selected St. John's College at Annapolis because, he said, of his interest in many "general aspects of education" and because he thought the new teaching technique under trial there might be "the answer as a departure from the usual higher educational forms and methods" in America.

"About a year ago I learned of the program," explained Mellon.

"After several visits and several interesting conversations with the men responsible for it, plus a thorough study of the curriculum itself, I would like to see the experiment actually in operation from day to day."

Mellon will live in Annapolis, but return week-ends to his 400-acre farm near Upperville, in Fauquier County, Va. He recently gave away his big home here to a women's college.

St. John's is the third oldest college in the United States, antedated only by Harvard and William and Mary. Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, and other educators took over the direction of the school three years ago and started their program.

The classics of Augustine, Aquinas, Francois Villon, Machiavelli, Jefferson, Cicero and Karl Marx were reinstated as a full curriculum. Students grapple at first hand with their problems.

Mellon will begin rigorous sessions with Greek, Latin, French and German masters, studying the history of ideas in the first year. In astronomy, for instance, he will build and operate a model diopter, which Aristarchus first invented in the third century B. C., to measure the earth, sun and moon. Later in his senior year he will dissect an ox's heart, just as a scientist did centuries ago to prove blood circulated.
